Without Our Pledge to Aid France

WRITES FRANK H. SIMONDS

The League of Nations Falls

"Not an Alliance but a Fair Concession by America and England to Make Up for a Sacrifice of Security Which France Generously Made to Meet President's Terms."

By Frank H. Simonds
Author of "The Great War." and "They Shall Not Pass."

PARIS, May 24.

FUGITIVE dispatches which reach Paris from the United States suggest surprise and misunderstanding at home over the agreement of the President to lay before Congress with his own indorsement a proposal that the United States should pledge itself to come to the aid of France in company with Great Britain, provided France were wantonly attacked by Germany.

American comment, so far as it is accurately reported here, seems to concentrate on the suggestion that this process would be to create another alliance, whereas the league of nations was designed to eliminate alliances, and consequently that it is unnecessary, since the league of nations provides a way for permanently eliminating the element of war.

In the present article I am going to try to set forth the European situation both with respect to the league of nations and of this supplementary step which really should be regarded as an underwriting of the league of nations, during the period necessary for that organization not merely to get to work but to become established and recognized by all nations.

To start at the beginning the league of nations at the present moment is no more than an association of the nations which defeated Germany and Germany's allies, which, having formulated the terms of peace, are now discussing these terms of peace with the German representatives before one of two things happen: Either Germany accepts the treaty of peace, or she rejects it, and therefore makes a resumption of military operations necessary.

Not Peace but Way for Peace

The terms of peace, as I pointed out the other day, even though they be now accepted by Germany, do not settle anything, but merely provide a method of settlement stretched over 15 years at least, during wrich time Germany can only be expected to perform them if she finds herself steadily unable to resist. The terms just as they are are nevertheless so conditioned upon the German conduct of war and German crimes against civilization that at no time during the period of German performance can there be the smallest possibility of voluntary acceptation or free will submission of the conference of Paris which is in itself all that yet exists of the league of nations. We shall then have, for a period of 15 years at least, the preservation of some portion of the state of war against Germany which existed after August, 1914. For these years Germany will see much of her territory occupied. She will be compelled not only to pay large sums of money, but she will be subject to many restraints totally different from conditions preceding the war. It would be inaccurate to regard Germany during the period fixed for the performance of the terms of peace as anything more than a conquered enemy, fulfilling the terms of the treaty of peace only because not to perform them would bring down upon her at once military and naval as well as economic pressure. During 15 years, then there can be no question of German acceptance of the decision made by the conference at Paris, or any trustworthy entrance of Germany into the league of nations, which is at one time an organization for international peace and the association of her victors for application of the terms of the treaty of Versailles.

Merely Underwriting the League

Now the precise purpose of the association between Great Britain and France is manifest. Mr. Wilson, representing his country, has come to France. He has been the most conspicuous and most influential personality in the peace conference. He has imposed upon Europe his 14 points, which have become the basis of the peace settlement. Despite many compromises, some large and some insignificant, each question has been settled in such fashion as to be accepted by him as satisfying his original program. But many of the settlements have been in fact no more than a postponement of solution for a considerable number of years, as, for example, the Saar coal region question will only be decided by a plebiscite 15 years hence, and one could multiply the number of illustrations of this sort. Moreover, in the case of Poland, the solution arrived at is of such a precarious nature that Poland, unsustained by the league of nations, which has created the Polish frontiers, could not maintain herself against Germany.

> IF CONGRESS rejects that proposal which Mr. Wilson has made, the league of nations will disappear from practical reckoning, alike of statesmen and people, on the continent of Europe. French armies of occupation on the Rhine will not be withdrawn, opening a road of invasion to Belgium and to France. Italian concessions, if there be any, to Jugo-Slavia will not be realized, since the Italians will rightly recognize the possibility of German advance to Trieste and the Adriatic, with Jugo-Slav assistance. All the various compromises based upon the idea that justice in the settlement would be sustained by the solidarity of the countries making up the league of nations would disappear. Europe would make a new settlement, in fact a settlement based upon the old necessities and old confederations, but this would mean within a certain period a new war; and a new war would not fail to involve the United States.—FRANK H. SIMONDS.

Now, having thus imposed in a very large measure an American settlement upon Europe, having compelled each of the nations of Europe who were associated with us in war against Germany to surrender its own views, not as to its opportunities to realize imperialistic ambitions, but its necessities to provide securities against future aggression, Mr. Wilson has logically and naturally recognized the need of supplying to these associates—or rather to the one peculiarly imperiled, France—a measure of security to replace those surrendered at his demand in the interests of the league of nations.

To put the thing simply: Mr. Wilson conceived that if France should occupy the left bank of the Rhine permanently, which alone would enable France unassisted to defend herself against German attack; if France should annex the Saar coal region, which alone would insure compensation for material losses during the war, these two actions might create a new cause for war in Europe which would make the league of nations no more than an empty dream, as it has The Hague tribunal, when Germany should become strong again. Therefore, Mr. Wilson demanded—insisted on, and obtained the support of the British for his demand—that France should annex no German territory save her own lost provinces. To this demand the French complied, but on their side they argued with equal justice that four times within a century, twice at least totally unprovoked by any French action, German armies had invaded France, bringing ruin with them. They presented the unquestioned military opinion of Marshal Foch that France alone could only defend herself against Germany on the line of the Rhine. They pointed out that Germany might consent to lay aside her old ideals and become a civilized nation, but that it was equally possible that Germany might return to her old pursuits of power and world domination, and that if Germany should do this after France had retired from the Rhine in obedience to Mr. Wilson's demand, and as a necessary contribution to making the league of nations possible, there would be ruin for France, if France had to bear the burden of attack alone and what was said for France could be said with exactly the same accuracy for Belgium.

Bound to Heed French Contention

In this situation, therefore, the British and Americans were bound to take heed of the French contention. It was unfair, it was impossible, to ask France to sacrifice security, her own security, on the mere hope that the league of nationsmight prove what all men hoped it would be, but few men were able to believe it would be. The United States, with 3000 miles of sea separating it from Europe; Great Britain, with the channel forbidding invasion, could not ask France with an open frontier towards the Germans to refrain from giving this frontier its strongest possible form in the interests of the Anglo-Saxon experiment, which was the league of nations, without giving to France an assurance that if the experiment did not work the total cost would not be paid by France, that German armies would not again come down to the very outskirts of Paris before real aid arrived.

Moreover, a second consideration had importance. The view is still strongly held in Europe that had Germany believed in the crisis of 1914 that Great Britain would enter the war if she attacked France or invaded Belgium, she would not have begun the war. Certainly the results of the conflict have demonstrated that the entrance of Great Britain promptly and of the United States ultimately into the struggle made German victory impossible, and resulted in the present crushing disaster. Therefore, it is believed and argued that were Germany convinced in advance that an attack upon France Amounts Merely to an Underwriting and Guaranteeing of the League, and Belief Is General in Peace Council That It Will Never Call for Action.

would mean a new war with Great Britain and the United States, she would not venture upon such a gamble. More than this, recognition of this fact would contribute largely to preventing the growth in Germany of a new policy of aggression and of militarism, and Germany, finding herself confronted with the certainty of finding three great nations in arms if she should wantonly attack one of them, would lay aside the policy of war, the idea of millitarism, the gospel of Prussianism.

Germany Under Duress 15 Years

More than this, it is patent that the league of nations would be nothing more than an alliance of the nations which have defeated Germany in which the various neutrals of the last war may enter, until such time as Germany and her allies become voluntary members, accepting its principles in the spirit in which they have been framed. But it is impossible, as I have pointed out, for a period of at least 15 years, during which some measure of a condition of war will subsist and Germany will be under duress and constraint. If, therefore, the structure of the league of nations is to be preserved, it can only be preserved by some such guarantees as an Anglo-French-American pledge would constitute. Nothing is more possible than that Germany will seek to escape from the payment of reparations fixed by the treaty of Versailles. Nothing is more certain than that she will seek to erect an alliance in Europe composed of Austria, of Hungary, of Bulgaria and of Russia. To this alliance she will endeavor to add any people which finds itself dissatisfied with the decisions taken at Paris. She will seek to enlist the Italians, if they are dissatisfied with the Fiume settlement. If the Italians are satisfied she will endeavor to persuade the Jugo-Slavs to join her group. We shall have a period of at least 15 years in Europe in which it will be a very grave question whether the old method and the old system will be brought back by Germany into effective existence, or whether the new ideas on which Mr. Wilson has based his policy will prevail. If the new ideas do not prevail, we shall have Europe divided again, as it was in 1914, within a relatively brief period of time.

The single chance of a permanent League of Nations, possessing necessary force, is that it shall have behind it the great resources of the three Western Powers, and beyond all else the prestige and power of the United States. Germany will not easily find allies in Europe, nor will the German people be easily led into a new policy of militarism if it is recognized that this policy begins by depriving those responsible for it of all American financial assistance and ends by bringing the United States squarely into action against it.

Rejection Would Destroy League

If it be understood in Europe that the United States now, having imposed its own ideas upon Europe, having forced the European nations to accept its ideas with respect of their own frontiers, their own defenses, means to retire, not alone in fact but in responsibility, if it is recognized that we have washed our hands of the settlement which we have imposed, nothing is more certain that the league of nations will die a swift and violent death. The continental nations will be thrown back upon the necessity of taking material guarantees in Europe against aggression no longer stopped by the American declaration.

If Congress rejects that proposal which Mr. Wilson has made, the league of nations will disappear from practical reckoning, alike of statesmen and people, on the continent of Europe. French armies of occupation on the Rhine will not be withdrawn, opening a road of invasion to Belgium and to France. Italian concessions, if there be any, to Jugo Slavia will not be realized, since the Italians will rightly recognize the possibility of German advance to Trieste and the Adriatic, with Jugo-Slav assistance. All the various compromises based upon the idea that justice in the settlement would be sustained by the solidarity of the countries making up the League of Nations would disappear. Europe would make a new settlement, in fact a settlement based upon the old necessities and old considerations, but this would mean within a certain period a new war; and a new war would not fail to involve the United States.

Today the United States has played the decisive role in Paris. President Wilson's influence has, on the whole, despite temporary fluctuations, been the strongest single influence in the conference. The war gave to our country a position hardly paralleled in modern history. Its possession of the financial and material resources of the world enabled it to speak with authority and compel the nations associated with us in the war to bow to that voice. The treaty of peace which has been made has been framed almost uniquely with the idea of satisfying President Wilson's demands—demands which were based upon his conception that world peace could only be assured by the creation of a league of nations based upon a just settlement.

A Fair Exchange of Concessions

But President Wilson has recognized, as all reasonable men must, that the settlement thus imposed carries with it responsibilities, and he has recognized these responsibilities in his pledge to present to Congress a proposal that the United States shall agree to come to the aid of France if she is attacked, now that she has been rendered substantially defenseless by being deprived of her military frontiers in order to conform to Mr. Wilson's ideas. Marshal Foch and every French soldier has expressed the opinion equally held by American and British soldiers that France can only defend herself against Germany if she possesses the Rhine frontier militarily. The same authorities have held that German disarmament, provided for in the treaty of peace, can only be realized by effective allied supervision of German military affairs inside of Germany. President Wilson has demanded that France lay aside both these essential conditions of safety in the interest of the success of the league of nations. France has consented to do these things, but only on condition that in place of the guarantee of the Rhine frontier and the supervision of the military establishment of Germany, there shall stand the assured aid of the United States if France be attacked. If this should be refused, I do not believe the Rhine will be evacuated. I do not believe that the league of nations experiment would be made on the continent, and I am satisfied that within the briefest time a new system of alliances would spring up and all the hopes expressed in the league of nations would disappear. Unmistakably, this was the conviction of Mr. Wilson when he gave his undertaking to Monsieur Clemenceau. Such are the European facts affecting the Anglo-French-American agreement, which is not an alliance in any old-fashioned sense, but is in reality no more than guaranteeing the league of nations against dangers which are obvious, so obvious that without the guarantee, the league of nations cannot endure.

Greatest Needs of Christian Church Today as Seen by the Presbyterian Moderator

"MORE MEN, FEWER SOFTIES; MORE OF GOD, LESS OF PIETY"

Dr. Baer Decries the Sacrifice of Fundamentals for Forms, and Says the Church Must Attract the Busy Man by Its Spirit of Helpful Tolerance.

WHEN John Willis Baer, who last week in St. Louis was chosen first layman moderator in the 131-year history of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, was asked what the greatest need in religion was, he replied to a Post-Dispatch reporter without hesitation and with emphasis:

"More men and fewer softies; more of God and less of piety."

He added: "That goes for other churches as well as the Presbyterian."

Baer is epigrammatic in all his utterances, yet not as others indulging in that form and degenerating into word-tricksters, mouthing alliteratives as sweet lullings to their better sense. Rather, he impresses as a business man using business terseness for the business of making God something for the business man.

How he may succeed is indicated by a speech he made before the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday at Hotel Statler. Of course, his audience was composed of men in business in St. Louis.

He afterwards said: "That was my first test on my new job. I have talked to business men as a business man. Here I was making my big hop as a churchman before a class of men whom I knew to commonly shrink when religion is forced upon them at what they consider an improper time. Any live man can sit in the moderator's chair and knock off a few barnacles from any Presbyterian Assembly, but any man who views the barnacles of business as a lack of the spirit of God has a different task. I shut my eyes, though, and let go."

Knows How to Reach Business Men

The fate that befell Baer in his "big hop" was this: As he concluded, the business men, as if by common impulse, rose applauding spontaneously and heartily, a demonstration of marked approval. Baer's preaching was simple. He told a story of Henry M. Grady, a famous Southern editor, whose statue occupies a public square in Atlanta.

"Grady slipped once, it is said," Baer told them. "He packed his grip and went to his boyhood home in a small town outstate.

"'Mother,' he said, as his mother opened the door, 'I have come home for a week. I want you to talk to me, I want you to take me on your lap and coddle me. I want you to cook the things I liked as a boy. I want you to tuck me in bed and say a prayer. I just want to get back.'

"Get me, men?" Baer asked, pointing above. "That's all. Let's just get back to some of the fundamentals."

Baer is a business man, a banker. Upon adjournment the comment of the business men took this form: "He has straight dope," "Say, that man can have what I've got," and similar expressions.

The "fundanfentals" seem to be Baer's hobby. "Let's have more plain talk in our pulpits and we will have more plain religion in our business," he says. He made four or five speeches during his stay in St. Louis, and always he made this statement: 'The Golden Rule still is the best yardstick, and the Sermon on the Mount goes now as well as it did more than 1900 years ago."

His other hobby seems to be tolerance, and his opinions on that subject give a definition of what kind of Christianity Baer believes is good for the Presbyterian church and men.

"Personally, I stand on the great truths of evangelical Christianity," he said. "I believe in the fatherhood and the sovereignty of God and the deity and atonement of Jesus Christ, and I believe in getting as many business men to believe that as I can. If they will go that far with me, I will not worry much about the remainder of their way.

Tolerance for Everybody His Rule

"At the same time I shall not join the numbers of Christians who think they are doing the Lord's work when they quarrel in the name of the Lord. They really are unhappy unless they are steadying some arm, or 'for conscience sake' (and usually in a conspicuous way) are making the lives of others miserable by carrying a theological chip on their shoulders.

"Tolerance is a religious maxim for the business man. It is time to have reasonable and at least respectful regard for the opinions of others. Beware of the isolated life and the smug satisfaction which often goes with it. We owe much to the communities in which we live. Let us leaven the lump. Hold close to conviction, but loose the leash that limits constructive fellowship with others, though they may not be of your mind and may honestly oppose you and your progress."

In this connection it is interesting to note the contrast of Baer's opinion and that expressed on the floor of the assembly in which he sat as presiding officer.

A member of the Men's Work Committee, in appealing for the organization of brotherhoods for the social entertainment of men within the church, gave this warning: "The man who has fellowship outside the church with nonchristian men imperils his Christian life."

In this connection, also, the action of the assembly in condemning the Sunday newspapers and asking Presbyterians to refrain from reading them, was remarked to Baer.

"That's the trouble," he said. "It would be all right if they followed their own precepts, but they won't. They will go home and read the first Sunday newspaper that comes their way. So instead of doing the church good, they do harm."

Continuing on his theme of tolerance, he said: "We cannot have too much tolerance of the right kind and we want none of the wrong kind. There are some men, and good men, too, who think that tolerance and compromise are synonymous. Tolerance is a big word, potentially great. Do not misunderstand. We should not blur by a hair's breadth the lines between good and bad, between truth and error. In holding fixed principles regarding truth, do not trim or take short cuts, but at the same time be considerate of others.

"But these theological chip bearers! They can smell heresy afar off. Critical, cynical, censorious, self-righteous, they are doing the devil's work, and the worst of it is, they think they are the Lord's chosen people.

"Without the spirit of Christian tolerance, we may bend backward too far and our spiritual equilibrium will be lost. Remember, we will not all worship alike, but all alike must worship God. Let us hold lightly, lightly, I say, to those things in religion which are non-essential, but, God give us grit and grace to hold fast to those things which are fundamental in the heart and daily life of the true advocate of the religion of Jesus Christ."

All Must Worship God.

Baer is vigorous in his Americanism, but he mentions the fact that his father was a Hungarian immigrant with fierce pride. His face goes white, as he says it, and he looks about belligerently to see if there is challenge to his pride.

"He came steerage and he had $5 when he landed," he said, "and he made his two cubs into honest Americans. I am one of those who believe that we should not stop immigration now that the war is closed. We do not appreciate our asylum of liberty as those who come from abroad do. I believe we should consider the quality and not the quantity of our immigration, but I believe it is time to quit calling an Italian a dago and a Chinaman a Chink. Let this be the chief requisite for admission to share in our blessings: Let every man declare before he enters the United States his intention to become an American citizen and see that he follows out his intention. I think American manhood is better for having mixed in its blood the blood of other nationalities."

Baer has no qualms about the problem of capital and labor. "It's only a question of sharing more of our wealth with others," he said. "Business, if it takes religion to its heart, will see this and with or without religion, it must see it."

Baer is 58 years old. He shook one religious organization to a show of life it has not had since he released his grip on its collar. Baer became executive secretary of the Christian Endeavor Society, an interdenominational organization, in St. Louis in 1890. In the 12 years that followed, the Christian Endeavor Society became one of the greatest religious organizations in the world. Its conventions attracted universal attention. After Baer left its direction, it began to disintegrate and never has returned to the sphere of influence he gave it.

He has dipped into Home Missions, which he refers to as a "delight" because it took him among the classes for which he has much sympathy and later became president of Occidental College, Los Angeles, which, as other institutions, felt the Baer touch and took a higher plane among colleges.

The position of Moderator is one of influence in the Presbyterian Church. The Moderator directs policies during the interim between Assemblies. One incident of the Assembly is pointed to by Baer's friends as showing that the church must feel Baer's impress.

The Assembly, in hot zeal for the cause of prohibition, passed a resolution telling President Wilson, it had learned "with pain and shame" of his action in suggesting that the sale of beer and light wines be permitted after July 1.

Baer refused to send the cable. The next day, at his beckoning the assembly apologetically took its seats and struck out the words "with shame."

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Who Saved the Union?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In your afternoon edition of May 14 I find an article headed "A Republican's Opinion," written by one signing the name J. C. Fisher. To my mind he is not posted about the war "between the States" in 1861. He says "the Republicans saved the Union."

Now, Mr. Editor, if you had drafted every man that voted for Abraham Lincoln in 1861 you could not have gotten an army of 200,000 men. The Democrats of the North and the Middle West did not want this country divided, so they went into the war to save the Union. Generals Scott, McClellan, Rosecrans, Hancock, Grant, Buel, Thomas, and a host of others were all Democrats, and nearly every battle fought where "victory perched upon the Union arms" was fought by a Democrat General, and Democratic soldiers.

William Tecumseh Sherman was a Republican and said "war is hell' and set fire to Georgia. He then and there committed a crime as great as Emperor William did in Belgium. His brother-in-law, Gen. Ewing, issued order No. 11 and burnt up Western Missouri.

The Democrats saved this glorious Union. In fact, they made this country, and will continue to do so. When they fail American liberty will be no more.

And as for this war, it was carried on to a glorious victory under a Democratic administration, whose many achievements of constructive legislation I will not dwell on, but will mention one in particular, namely, regional bank law, without which the war could not have been financed.

And now that this war is over and our brave boys on their way home, that inspired instrument, namely, "The League of Nations," was conceived in the brain of Woodrow Wilson, and will bring peace and happiness to a war-weary world.

What has the Republican party ever done but claim everything; yes, they did steal the presidential chair, and would do it again if allowed.

Self-Determination Still an Ideal.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Considering the treatment accorded the self-determination point, we may conclude that the nations are not yet done with civilized warfare. The prophets of eternal peace (whether it be secured through a league of nations or otherwise) those of them who are sincere, are placed in the light of gentle optimists merely, who, we are to believe, can force the millennium by wishing real hard for it.

Government Keeping Prices Up.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Your editorial of May 15 commenting on price fixing by the government is very timely, but it may take something more than an earthquake for the Government to take heed. The barons are too busy at the trough. It is a fact that with each bond issue prices went sky high and the market quotations are a record for the same. It seems that the profiteers were preparing to swallow the proceeds of each bond sale before the money had been collected. The Government has been such a heavy buyer at the time of each issue that gluttons smelled the cooking in advance and were on hand to sell anything and everything the Government needed at the most exorbitant prices. Just because the Government was liberal and, as a consequence, the people are compelled to pay exorbitant prices because the Government will if they don't.

Ludendorff's Defiance.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I, with many others, no doubt, read the article in your paper pertaining to a foreign correspondent's interview with Gen. Ludendorff.

I cannot understand how a man who so ruthlessly ordered the butchery of thousands of men and innocent women and children should be allowed to go free. Instead of begging for mercy and being satisfied that he has escaped punishment so far, he defiantly tells America "to go to hell."

If the Kaiser, Ludendorff and all the other junkers who have caused so much sorrow to so many homes are not severely punished, I cannot conceive how any future war against such despots can be successfully prosecuted.

The Iron Hand in Government.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

It seems that you can have most anything under a socialistic regime. It's broad. I have, therefore, been wondering what your parlor Bolsheviki will say the present platform is. Can we be sure that those few who do rule with the iron hand of the despot will remain true to the principles that they are now seeking to lure us under the iron hand with? I've known them to change. I have known labor leaders to sell out. If those Bolsheviki once got their system running right on this country, and the despots over our heads would become tyrants, all of labor's progress would be destroyed and we couldn't drop a tool or raise a voice.

STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN.

ECONOMIC JUSTICE TO GERMANY.

The exchange of notes on German economic conditions as affected by the peace terms is something more than a mere incident in the maneuvering for advantage at Versailles.

The allied reply to the protests cuts deep to fundamental things. It embodies the points on which the peace conditions will be justified now and in the hereafter. In all parts of the world are persons who hold that the demands are of unexpected harshness. They ask how Germany is to pay a huge sum by way of financial reparation now and larger sums later, if its industrial system is to be disorganized and its means of gaining profit greatly impaired.

For the enlightment of present critics and future historians, who will write more dispassionately but with less information than men of the present, the reply in concise, energetic, official form discloses the facts and principles accepted as a guide in the framing of the terms. Mark some of the things set rorth.

The Germans complained that the agricultural resources of their country were already inadequate to the support of its 67,000,000 people; that large areas of its best farming lands were to be taken from it, while 15,000,000 were dependent for food on employment in the industries and navigation. But by taking much of its present merchant tonnage and a large part of the product of its yards for five years, not only will Germany's financial ability to buy food abroad be vastly lessened, but it will be deprived of the means of importing either food or the raw materials to keep its factories running and its factory hands earning money.

With one-third of its coal deposits taken from it and the output of its other deposits diverted for 10 years, three-fifths of its zinc product and three-fourths of its other mineral product assigned to other nations, Germany's industries would be sadly crippled and catastrophe would impend for its people, already weakened by food shortage.

The reply reminds Germany that it will not be responsible for as many people as before the war. A population of 6,000,000 will be taken from it, or 40 per cent of the 15,000,000 it says are about to starve.

In defiance of all law and precedent Germany sunk 12,750,000 tons of shipping. In reparation Germany is required to give up only 4,000,000 tons, less than one-third of that "wantonly destroyed." Shall she not bear a very "moderate share" of the loss caused by her own "criminal deeds?"

The reply is especially impressive in this part.

Farms and mining resources on which Germany formerly depended will not cease to exist because of shiftings in boundaries. It can still secure their products in trade across those boundaries.

But in France, Belgium, Russia, Rumania, Poland and Servia great farming area have been devastated by German acts. France's coal industry was obliterated with "a calculation and savagery" it will take years to repair.

Are the allied nations alone to bear the dire effects of Western Europe's coal shortage due to Germany, while Germany escapes? "Calculation and savagery" are blunt words even for the diplomacy of gatherings in which former enemies adjust their differences. In general all nations are suffering from the economic disaster which German aggression caused. Can a claim that Germany should be safeguarded from also suffering be held to rest on any valid ground?

How can it be denounced as an unrighteous peace when it only provides for a distribution of the consequences of wrong which Germany has so far escaped? Assuming that the protest made the best possible statement of Germany's case, the reply meets it at every turn. It supplies a basis for meeting charges of a departure from the 14 points, at least so far as economic questions are concerned. The 14 points specifically and emphatically affirmed the principle of reparations.

If severe it is a just peace. The consequences from which the allies are suffering unjustly are also dismayingly severe.

THEY'RE HARD TO PLEASE.

Those Republicans in Congress are hard to please. Clearly the genius of President Wilson is unequal to the task. At a committee conference of that party the other night Senator Cummins of Iowa observed sadly that "there has been a continuous effort on the part of the executive department to assume all the powers of the legislative department the last six years." Heads nodded morose approval. Meantime the air of Washington is still echoing the Republican chagrin and dismay occasioned by the President's recommendation that Congress modify the war-time prohibition act.

The Wilson versatility is miraculous, according to Republican depiction. Dawn reveals him a usurper, the pensive, melancholy dusk discloses him a shirker. The pockets of Wilson's morning coat are bulging with the prerogatives of the legislative departments, ruthlessly appropriated. In the afternoon he is heaping on the back of a burdened Congress duties which he himself should perform.

Perhaps some day a super-tactician will dwell in the White House that can meet the exacting requirements of the Republican side of House and Senate. But it is far beyond the capabilities of the present occupant of that domicile, even as it was beyond the expansive finesse of his smiling predecessor.

A GOVERNMENT ENTERPRISE.

Hawker's daring attempt to cross the Atlantic in a nonstop flight ended in the disaster which aviators predicted. They, like the rest of us, paid homage to the sheer audacity of the effort, but they knew the Australian had gambled with death, with all the odds against him.

The log of the successful American voyage emphasizes the hopelessness of the gallant Hawker's quest. Despite the superior sturdiness of our craft, the sustaining companionship of a fleet, the elaborate program of assistance and moral reinforcement carried out by our navy—despite all this, it was a gruelling ordeal for two of the planes, whose crews owe their lives to good luck.

From the details of the American adventure and the silence and mystery in which the Australian vanished, it is plain that the transatlantic flight is a Government enterprise rather than an individual exploit. To be sure, such opportunity for fame and fortune, served though it be on the salver of almost certain death, will not have to clamor for a claimant. The clan of Hawker is numerous. Volunteer after volunteer will appear. But it seems a futile sacrifice of brave men. And should someone succeed after a long line of Hawkers had failed, the enrichment of the annals of sport would be the only result. Important as are the annals of sport, the traditions of courage, they are not worth that price.

The American method and management of the great flight were correct. The pioneers in this new realm of endeavor should be supported by the kind of navy patrol which we provided and by every aid and comfort their co-operating Government can give.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

NEW ZEALAND LIQUOR REFORM.

From the Omaha World-Herald.

New Zealand did not adopt prohibition, but its defeat was by a narrow margin contributed by the troops overseas. The close vote on the question, the example of the United States and the common restrictions upon the liquor traffic deemed necessary to the most efficient conduct of the war, put a handwriting on the wall for the New Zealanders.

The warning is that prohibition is almost certain to come a little later unless the more palpable evils of the trade in intoxicating liquors are removed. The British and the British peoples seem to learn some things more quickly than we do. There is reason to believe that they are already considerably ahead of us in the adjustment of industrial and economical issues, and it appears that the New Zealanders have already learned a lesson regarding the liquor question that we here in this country did not learn until too late, and that is that the liquor business must be really reformed, without any evasion or foolishness about it, or it will be abolished altogether, the mild liquors going with the strong. And so a general organization has been formed in New Zealand—and also in New South Wales Australia, for the same dilemma is presented by the conditions there—with a program calling for the reduction of the alcoholic contents of liquors, the cancellation of licenses of unscrupulous proprietors, the elimination of undesirable hotels and legislation providing that every licensed hotel shall be in reality a place of public accommodation and of reputable social entertainment.

In short, it is proposed to make the dealing in intoxicating liquors respectable by abolishing the fiery drinks that craze and ruin, and compelling decent management of places where the milder beverages are sold.

This same plan was attempted in some of our states, but it was not pushed with earnestness. In some it was looked on as only another method of prohibition, a creeping up, an effort of the camel to get his head under the side of the tent. In some it had the professed support of the liquor interests and in some it was violently fought by these interests, notably in Illinois, where the refusal of the distillers and brewers to make what seemed a very reasonable concession resulted in a "dry" landslide in many localities at the next election. To a good many people the fact that the whisky and beer sellers spoke in favor of such a reform, but to be voluntary on their part, cast suspicion on this whole plan.

It may be that some of the states that are now begging for modification of prohibition laws to permit the dealing in light wines and beers might have prevented prohibition if they had in good earnest changed the liquor laws to this effect a few years ago.

In New Zealand and Australia the campaign for liquors of only light alcoholic content and for really respectable places of sale will be in the hands of committees whose members have nothing to do with the liquor business and so leave the public free of any suspicion that there may be a "joker" in the reform.

The result of this campaign will be of interest all over the world, including our own country where constitutional prohibition has been adopted, for the amendment may not settle the question and the people may desire to turn back to a less drastiee rule, if assured that the reversion would not take them all the way back to the viciousness of the old condition.

JUST A MINUTE

THIS HOMERIC AGE.

The age becomes Homeric. Consider the case of 7-year-old Constance Sundquist. Both the Republic and the Globe-Democrat carried on yesterday a picture of Constance, showing her poised for a dive. The Republic's picture carried this inscription:

Constance Sundquist, 7 years old, the first person to swim the Culebra Cut. She took a morning dip in the Atlantic and one in the Pacific in the afternoon, swimming the entire distance.

The Globe-Democrat carried under its picture this:

Constance Sundquist, 7 years old, is the first person to swim across the Culebra Cut, taking her morning dip in the Atlantic and her afternoon plunge in the Pacific. Her time for one mile is 57 minutes. She is known and is popular with every officer, man and worker in the Canal Zone.

Now, gentle reader, what was it Constance did? Did she, as the Republic avers, swim "the entire distance" from the Atlantic to the Pacific, which is 40 miles, dipping in the one sea in the morning and the other in the afternoon? If she did, Sergt. York's feat was nothing. The Globe-Democrat says she "is the first person to swim across the Culebra Cut, taking her morning dip in the Atlantic and her afternoon plunge in the Pacific. Her time for one mile is 57 minutes." Therefore, going at that rate a distance of 40 miles, she must have been out 38 hours. An inconsistency, we fear.

All that is really clear in the matter is that Constance is some 7-year-old kid. Exactly what it was she did we cannot make out, but the age is Homeric, and almost anything is credible.

The charge that Sergt. York was a conscientious objector is not hard to understand. It probably had its origin in his disinclination to turn himself loose upon a people who knew so much less about shooting than his own people in the Tennessee mountains know about it. It was not easy to appreciate how he felt when he was called to the colors, but anybody can see it now. Nothing in Homer is a patchen to what this young man did. We are told that when his immediate superior was killed in a raid upon German machine gun nests he took the remnants of the squad and brought in 132 Germans. His individual feats in that fight make the men who fought before Troy look like a lot of pikers. With 12 shots of his rifle he killed 11 Germans shooting at him from their foxholes, and when seven men jumped out and charged him from a distance of 60 yards he killed them all with his automatic. Is it surprising that a man like that hesitated to go over? Of course not. He knew the Germans were not prepared for it; and being a sportsman, he hated to do it.

Can't the Germans be reminded of some of the things said by the French in 1870?

THE RAILROAD QUESTION IN CHINA.

This cartoon from the Canton (China) Times is entitled "What the Officials are Doing With the Railroads." Evidently, then, China has her own railroad question; but it would take a regional director to make out from this cartoon how it is going. Is the Chinese private owner the man who appears to have been hit over the head with the track and flattened out on his stomach? Is the man who seems to be trying to hang himself between the rails the Chinese Congress, preferring death to any determined stand? We can't say. Maybe you can make it out. We do, however, recognize in the figure merely holding on to the matter for the present the Chinese Mr. Bryan. We dare say, too, that while not a great factor in the shindee at present, this chink will turn out in the end to have been right all the time. Look it over.

Some Advice to the United States Senate

Reprinted From the New York World of May 23.

The words "advice and consent of the Senate" are used in the Constitution with reference to the Senate's participation in the making of a treaty, and are well translated by the word "ratification" popularly used in this connection.

The President negotiates the treaty to begin with. He may employ such agencies as he chooses to negotiate the proposed treaty. He may employ the Ambassador, if there be one, or a Minister or a Charge d'Affaires, or he may use a person in private life who, he thinks, by his skill or knowledge of the language or people of the country with which he is about to deal is best fitted to negotiate the treaty.

He may issue to the agent chosen by him—and neither Congress nor the Senate has any concern as to whom he chooses—such instructions as seem to him wise. He may vary them from day to day. That is his concern. The Senate has no right to demand that he shall unfold to the world or to it, even in executive session, his instructions or the prospect or progress of the negotiation. I said "right." I use that word advisedly in order to illustrate what all men who have studied the subject are willing to concede—that under the Constitution the absolute power of negotiation is in the President and the means of negotiation subject wholly to his will and his judgment.

When he shall have negotiated and sent his proposed treaty to the Senate the jurisdiction of this body attaches and its power begins. * * *

The President is so supreme under the Constitution in the matter of treaties, excluding only the Senate's ratification, that he may negotiate a treaty, he may send it to the Senate, it may receive by way of "advice and consent" the unanimous judgment of the Senate that it is in the highest degree for the public interest, and yet the President is as free, when it is sent back to the White House with resolution of ratification attached, to put it in his desk, never again to see the light of day, as he was free to determine in the first instance whether he would or would not negotiate it.

This definition of the President's powers in respect to the negotiation of treaties was made by John C. Spooner, Republican Senator from Wisconsin, and admittedly one of the ablest constitutional lawyers who ever sat in either house of Congress, on Jan. 23, 1906.

Henry Cabot Lodge, the present Republican leader of the Senate, was so impressed by Senator Spooner's argument that in the course of a speech made the next day on the same subject he said:

Mr. President, I am entirely conscious of the great difficulty involved in following the Senator from Wisconsin in the discussion of the important subject upon which he spoke to the Senate yesterday. I quite realize that after the manner in which he dealt with those questions, anything that I may say is in great danger of being an anti-climax. Where the Senator from Wisconsin has reaped there is very little left for any one else to glean.

But to make sure that there could be no possible doubt of his complete approval of the Spooner argument, Senator Lodge added:

WE HAVE NO POSSIBLE RIGHT TO BREAK SUDDENLY INTO THE MIDDLE OF A NEGOTIATION AND DEMAND FROM THE PRESIDENT WHAT INSTRUCTIONS HE HAS GIVEN TO HIS REPRESENTATIVE, THAT PART OF TREATY-MAKING IS NO CONCERN OF OURS.

These words of Republican wisdom in respect to the treaty-making power of the United States are respectfully submitted to those Republican Senators who are demanding that the President submit to them at once a treaty of peace that has not yet been negotiated, and are also threatening to intervene in the Paris negotiations by framing amendments of their own and sending them to the Peace Conference.

Such action on the part of Republican Senators might be very helpful to the Germans as evidence that the treaty-making power of the United States Government is divided and nullified. It might well serve to embarrass the Conference, which is still struggling over the most difficult problems that diplomacy has ever been called upon to solve. It might greatly stimulate the Bolsheviki, to whom it would be further proof that no peace can be expected from "capitalistic governments." But it could serve no other ends except demonstrate the insane partisanship of certain Republican Senators and their willingness to plunge the world into anarchy in order to gratify their personal hatred of the President of the United States.

Until there is concrete proof of the fact, we shall refuse to believe that the United States Senate has gone crazy.

CATHOLIC ALUMNAE TO CONVENE HERE FRIDAY

300 Delegates Expected for Biennial Conference of International Federation.

Upward of 300 delegates and prominent Catholic women of the United States and Canada will arrive in St. Louis this week for the third biennial conference of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, which will convene at the Hotel Statler Friday and continue until Tuesday.

The federation is made up of the affiliated alumnae societies of Catholic institutions of learning of the English-speaking races of North America. It has a membership of 50,000, representing several hundred alumnae associations of Catholic women's colleges, academies, convents and high schools. Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore is honorary president of the federation, and Miss Claire J. Cogan of New York is the active head. Miss Stella R. Gillick of St. Louis is head of the Missouri chapter and in charge of arrangements for the convention, with Mrs. Ben W. Lewis general chairman of arrangements and Miss Pauline Boislinière St. Louis representative of the International Executive Board.

The proceedings will divide themselves into the business and the social and religious sides.

The business sessions will take place at the Statler each morning and afternoon. Friday, the opening day, will be given over to the presentation and examination of delegates' credentials. The first meeting will take place Saturday morning, when reports of officers and committee heads will be received. In the afternoon reports of state governors will be made.

Conferences of the three subdepartments of the federation, devoted to education, literature and social work, will occupy all of Monday, until 5:30 p. m., when there will be an informal meeting of college and high school delegates. At 8 p. m. the Nominating Committee will assemble to select candidates for officers.

The final day, Tuesday, June 3, will bring before the convention the final reports of the Credentials and Nominating Committees, and clear the way for the Resolutions Committee, which will present its platform in the afternoon.

HOW SALVATION ARMY FUNDS WILL BE SPENT

Budget for St. Louis Announced in Connection With Plans for $300,000 Drive.

Following the meeting Friday in the Mayor's office, at which plans were outlined for the Salvation Army's $300,000 drive in St. Louis for an after-the-war campaign, it was announced yesterday that the budget for St. Louis includes:

Workingmen's club and headquarters, including large clubroom with game tables and amusements, clean sleeping rooms, offices for Salvation Army departments, two auditoriums, band room and club room for women and children, gymnasium and swimming pool and doughnut room, $250,000; toward cost of new building for St. Louis rescue home for girls and children, $15,000; for support of three St. Louis corps with ten officers, visiting the poor and investigating, social service and equipping of three club rooms as substitutes for saloons, $15,000; for officers' contingent fund, $3000; renewal of hotel equipment, $2000; St. Louis headquarters, support and extensions, $5,000, and relief of St. Louis poor and equipment of relief center and free dispensary, $10,000.

Salvaging of saloons to be run on the "boozeless" plan as clubs for workingmen is but an incident of the program, it was explained. The idea contemplates giving quick, substantial aid to families found to be suffering because of evictions, hunger and idleness. The money will be spent under the supervision of a committee of citizens.

The drive will open June 15 and continue one week. A suggestion by H. Worthington Eddy that the city's quota could be quickly reached by 1000 wealthy persons each subscribing $300 met with disapproval.

It was decided that a meeting will be arranged for next Wednesday, the place to be designated by R. King Kauffman, who was elected chairman of the arrangements organization. The following were named vice chairmen: Sigmund Baer, Mrs. A. E. Reton, Mrs. J. P. Higgins and Mrs. Theodore Benoist. Jules Bertero was selected secretary. Bertero is secretary of the St. Louis Elks. He said the Elks' organization was solidly behind the Salvation Army's drive. The support of the Knights of Columbus was also pledged.

Events in the Social World

Much Social Activity Among Convent Graduates Promised in Connection With Biennial Convention of Catholic Alumnae Here This Week—Round of Affairs Scheduled for 300 Delegates and Visitors Expected to Attend.

THERE promises to be much social activity among the convent graduates and behind the walls of the historic old convents of the city during the coming week when the 300 delegates to the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae begin to assemble for the third biennial of that body.

St. Louis being primarily a Catholic city, this association embraces many of society's prominent members who will act as patronesses and hostesses to the visitors.

The sessions will be held at the Hotel Statler from May 30 to June 3 and the alumnae of the seven local Catholic institutions for the education of women have prepared a long and imposing calendar of social affairs for the entertainment of the delegates. The first of these, which will usher in the festivities of the biennial period will be the reception to be given to the international officers, the State Governors, the visiting delegates, alumnae and guests at the Statler on Friday, at which Archbishop Glennon will be the principal speaker. Saturday evening there will be the big banquet at 7 o'clock at the Statler.

Sunday will be Convent day, ushered in with solemn high mass at the Cathedral at 10 o'clock, following which there will be an automobile trip, with luncheon at the Ursaline Academy, Kirkwood, and Loretta College, Webster Groves. Coming back, the delegates will attend a series of teas at the Visitation Academy, St. Joseph's Convent and St. Maria au Ripa Convent, near Jefferson Barracks. The day will be concluded with a buffet supper at the Sacred Heart Academy, Maryville, and St. Elizabeth's Convent, at 5:30 o'clock.

Monday there will be a luncheon for the delegates at the Missouri Athletic Association, with a concert in the evening arranged by Miss Teresa Finn, chairman of the Music Committee.

Tuesday will be the closing day of the biennial and that night will see the reception for the new officers and an address by the Very Rev. E. H. Pace, Ph. D., of the Catholic University at Washington. Other social affairs of less universal character include a tea at the Queen's Daughters, Wednesday, June 4, from 2 until 4 o'clock, and buffet luncheons the same day at Maryville and the Visitation Academy under the auspices of the Alumnae Associations of those institutions.

Among those interested in the success of the biennial are: Mmes. Dan C. Nugent, Seth W. Cobb, John O'Fallon Delaney, George Mellon, J. L. Adrien, Edward L. Bakewell, H. Grone, Thomas J. Dooley, John B. Denvir, John F. Storm, Victorine Porcely, F. X. Walsh, B. W. Lewis, P. L. Cooke, Charles W. Oliver, Joseph Grindon, Festus J. Wade, J. L. D. Morrison, Charles P. Stanley, Carrie L. Scott, Martin Shaughnessy, P. J. Toomey, J. C. Johnson, George R. Mathieu, A. P. Erker, Robert A. Ferry, F. B. Fowler, J. R. Baird, R. E. M. Bain, John H. Cramer, John Keeshan, Sam Plant, J. F. Valle, James Byrne, George W. Wilson, E. DeLano, James B. Erwin, Oscar E. Niedringhaus, Herbert A. Feldman, Paul Dillon, Paul Bakewell, John Ring, James H. McTague, George W. Teasdale, David G Evans, William T. Donovan, Howard Benoist, Leo Moser, J. E. Burgess, J. F. Murphy, C. R. Laws, George Manley, L. J. Blackmore, J. A. Mowery, J. R. Scott, George F. McNulty, J. H. Glancy, Charles von Brecht, Paul Robyn, Raymond F. McNally, V. L. Cartan, August Goessling, Jules Peterson, and Misses DeSanna Mattingly, Ernestine Horn, Marie Hadley, Sarah Griffin, Louise Garesche, Jeanette Burke, Adele Hoffmeister, Alma Meyer, Jane Larkin, Severin Zika, Mary Hoxsey, M. Lumaghi, F. Bascom.

ONE of the most interesting engagement announcements of the spring season, which was made known last week, is that of Miss Julie Chenie Goode to Maj. William E. Burr, U. S. A. Miss Goode is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. George William Goode, and while in St. Louis has resided with her grandmother, Mrs. Julia C. Cabanne of 5365 Cabanne avenue. She received her education at the Visitation Convent, and since that time has been one of the belles of society. She is related to many of the old and prominent families of St. Louis, who have been identified with the business, civic and social progress of the city since its founding.

During the war Miss Goode took the nurses' aid course and did valiant work, especially during the "flu" epidemic.

Miss Goode is considered one of the best horsewomen in St. Louis, and is frequently seen on her mount along the boulevards. She is a sister of Mrs. Horace H. Fuller and of Mrs. George T. Priest.

Maj. Burr is the son of Major-General and Mrs. Edward Burr, who at one time resided in St. Louis. He is a West Point graduate and is with the field artillery now stationed with the army of occupation in Coblenz. No date for the wedding has been set.

THE only wedding so far scheduled for next week is that of Miss Marjorie Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Harris of 9 Kingsbury place, who will become the bride of Monroe H. Weil of New York next Saturday. The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride's parents. Only intimate friends and relatives have been invited to the ceremony at 6 o'clock, but a large reception will follow. Rabbi Samuel Sale will officiate.

The bride will be unattended, but Mr. Weil will have Mr. Herman Goldberg of New York as best man. Miss Harris is a graduate of Mary Institute and Wellesley College, and Mr. Weil is a Columbia University graduate.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made that the wedding of former Lieut. Palmer Bevis of St. Louis to Miss Maude Lichty of Ohio will take place June 19, the day following Miss Lichty's graduation from Oberlin College. The ceremony will be held in "Baldwin Cottage." Lieut. Bevis returned to Yale in January and will receive his degree on June 18. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Philemon Bevis of 5667 Waterman avenue. He was commissioned in the field artillery and discharged last December.

Miss Lichty is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Lichty of Columbus, Ohio.

Following the wedding the couple will leave immediately for the East, where they will spend their honeymoon and will make their home in New Haven, Conn.

THE Colonial Daughters of America, who have been active in war relief and charitable work, are planning reconstruction work in cooperation with other agencies. For such work, and also to make a contribution to the American Women's Hospitals to aid in their campaign to raise money to equip two traveling hospitals for Serbia, the Colonial Dames will give a card party on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Buckingham Hotel. It had been previously announced that the party would be at the home of Mrs. C. B. McCormack, but because of the large number of reservations for tables, it will be given at the Buckingham instead. Reservations may be made by telephoning Mrs. McCormack, Forest 2271.

Mrs. Edward Schaaf of St. Mary's, Mo., is State Regent of the Colonial Daughters of America. Mrs. Charles B. McCormack is Chapter Regent, Mrs. James Avery Webb first vice regent, Mrs. Joseph M. Long, corresponding secretary and Mrs. Ben S. Pearson, historian.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar P. Withrow have moved into their new home at 4620 Pershing avenue.

Miss Josephine Houts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Houts of Webster Groves, has been giving a series of informal Sunday afternoon "greeting teas" for young men of Webster who have returned from overseas and training camps. Almost every family of prominence in Webster was represented in the army or navy during the war and many interesting reunions have taken place at the teas. Trench songs are sung and camp jokes retold. Miss Jane Rogers of Mexico, Mo., who has been visiting Miss Buelah Rodes of Webster, was the guest of honor at Miss Houts' tea last Sunday.

Mrs. Halsey E. Yates, formerly Miss Julia C. Nicholls, wife of Col. Halsey E. Yates of the regular army, now military attache at Bucharest, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Nicholls of 5638 Kingsbury boulevard.

Mrs. Lon O. Hocker of 5610 Enright avenue returned Wednesday from a visit to Chicago, where she attended the International Conference on Child Welfare. During her visit Mrs. Hocker was also the recipient of numerous social courtesies.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Francis Murphy of 5339 Maple avenue had as their guests last week Lieut. Leo Mingenbach of France, Sergt. Thomas Hereford of Bowling Green, Mo., and Mr. and Mrs. John Smallman of Dallas, Tex., who have departed for their homes. Mrs. Smallman is Mrs. Murphy's sister. Robert Murphy of Chicago and George F. McCormick of New Haven, Conn., are at present Mr. and Mrs. Murphy's guests and next week they are expecting Miss Rose Lafferty of Little Rock, to be the guest of their daughter, Miss Margaret Murphy.

The Misses Berthold of 4482 Lindell boulevard will entertain the Alliance Francaise tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, when M. le Docteur Alfred Nerrncx, who was Burgomaster of Louvain during the German occupation, will give a talk.

Miss Miriam Benoist, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Benoist of 4632 Pershing avenue, has arrived in this country from France, where she has been doing Red Cross work.

The engagement of Miss Pearle Brickey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Brickey of Prairie du Rocher, Ill., to Wilbur Gonterman, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Gonterman of Granite City, Ill., was announced at a luncheon given at the Missouri Athletic Association yesterday afternoon. Those present were: Mrs. J. K. Mowry Jr., Mrs. William Miller, Misses Wilma Grant, Dorothy Bollinger, Mary Jane Fields, Lucille Reidel, Elsie Holekamp, Lorene Begeman, Belle and Edythe Brickey. Miss Brickey is a graduate of Forest Park College and is at present a junior at Washington University. She was graduated in voice under Mme. Christine Nordstrom Carter, and in violin under Mme. Lulu Kunkel Berg. Mr. Gonterman received his A. B. degree at Washington University in 1915, and then entered the W. U. law school. He is a member of "Artus" and Omicrom Delta Gamma, an honorary fraternity in economics and political science.

The Riverview Club entertained with a yachtsman's night party last night at which guests wore yachting attire. Next Friday afternoon the club will have a children's May party at 3 o'clock. There will be a May pole dance, games and contests for the children and other forms of entertainment.

The marriage of Miss Rachel Virginia Behm, daughter of Mrs. Charles Behm of 4267 Enright avenue, to George Albert Hodgman, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Bulkley Hodgman of 5736 Clemens avenue, was quietly celebrated yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the Pilgrim Congregational Church with the Rev. Dr. Woodrow officiating. Miss Catherine Lowney served as maid of honor and Lieut. Karl Kempff acted as best man. The couple departed on a honeymoon trip and after June 15 will be at home at 6424 Cates avenue. Mr. Hodgman is a graduate of the St. Louis University law department.

Mrs. William Horace Moulton of 6227 McPherson avenue entertained Friday with a tea for her daughter, Miss Matilda Moulton, who is president of the Junior Class at Mary Institute. In the receiving line with Mrs. Moulton and her daughter was Miss Florence Funsten and Miss Beatrice Morse and those who served were Misses Mary Scudder Bond, Helen Petring, Helena Meyer, Emily Kauffman, Josephine Garrett, Elizabeth Hubbell, Dorothy Claggett, Louise Lake, Isabel Fitts, Caroline Matthews, Jane Rule, Grace Peters and Helen Wyman.

Mrs. August C. Lueking, 6300 Washington boulevard, was hostess yesterday at a luncheon at the Bellerive Country Club in honor of her daughter, Miss Corinne Lueking, who will be graduated June 6 from Mary Institute. Covers were laid for 40 guests. The table was decorated with the class colors, red and white.

Mrs. David E. Woods of 6181 Westminster place entertained yesterday afternoon with a tea in honor of her young daughter. Miss Mary Dell Woods, and her guest, Virginia Baldwin of Decatur, Ill. About 14 of Miss Woods' classmates served.

NOLTE DISCUSSES PLANS FOR INCREASING CITY'S REVENUE

Comptroller Nolte yesterday made it known that one of the plans under consideration for increasing the city revenue is to change the system under which the 71 banks and trust companies of St. Louis are licensed. At present they pay a license fee of $100 a year.

It might be possible, he said, to amend the ordinance so that the banks and trust companies would pay varying fees based on their capital stock and surplus.

Another plan under consideration is to base license for gasoline filling stations on the amount of gasoline sold. The Comptroller suggested that a tax of one-half a cent per gallon be charged. This, he said, would add $250 a day to the city treasury, basing the amount on an estimated sale of 50,000 gallons a day.

Nolte also favors increasing the license fee of embalmers. At present they pay $5 for the first year and 50 cents a year for a renewal. Last year, he said, the city received only $168.50 from this source.

Junior C. of C. War Savings Society.

Ninety-seven young men, representatives of the young men's business interests of St. Louis, yesterday completed the organization of the Junior Chamber of Commerce War Savings Society. R. S. King was chosen president and Paul Peltason was made secretary and treasurer. Members so far have pledged the purchase of $150 worth of War Savings Stamps each month. This is the largest War Savings Society in St. Louis up to the present time.

Seborrhea Kills the Hair
Famo Kills Seborrhea

Seborrhea is an old trouble to which scientists have given a new name.
And science has found in Famo a new way of overcoming it.
Seborrhea is the disease which kills the roots of the hair by means of the deadly dandruff bacilli.
It does to the hair what pyorrhea does to the teeth.
Famo is a formula worked out in one of the great pharmaceutical houses of Detroit.
Three years were required to develop Famo.
It proved its efficacy before it was offered to the public.
The way in which Famo does its work is almost unbelievable.

Transformation is Wonderful

Almost at once your eyes testify to the transformation.
New hair grows like the hair of healthy children
The scalp becomes like the scalp of a baby. All itching of the scalp is stopped.
Famo brings back the look of health by a softness and lustre beyond words to describe.

Famo Destroys Bacilli

Famo removes the obstacle to growth, when it kills the seborrhea (dandruff) bacilli.
Freed from the bondage of disease, the hair leaps into luxuriance.
In women the change is wonderful.
If their hair was normally beautiful, the beauty is intensified.

Famo Contains No Alcohol

The natural color is enhanced and grayness is retarded. Famo contains no alcohol. Alcohol, if used persistently, is harmful to the hair, as it drys the scalp.
Famo comes in two sizes—a small size for 35 cents and an extra large size at $1. Your money back if it doesn't satisfy.
Every member of the family should use it
Famo is sold at all toilet goods counters. Applications may be had at the better barber shops.

Seborrhea is the medical name for a morbidly increased flow from the sebaceous glands of the scalp. The seborrhea excretion forms in scales or flakes and is commonly known as dandruff.

BELGIAN CHAPLAIN TOURING THIS COUNTRY

MAJ. PIERRE BLOMMAERT...

SAYS BELGIUM WAS SQUEEZED LIKE LEMON

Chief Protestant Chaplain of Belgian Army Here, Declares People Need America's Aid.

Belgium was squeezed like a lemon and all but ruined by the Germans in their systematic and diabolical destruction of Belgian industries, said Maj. Pierre Blommaert, chief Protestant chaplain of the Belgian army, who is in this country on a mission from the Belgian Government to inform the American people of the deplorable economic conditions in that heroic little land. Maj. Blommaert addressed the Presbyterian General Assembly, and departed yesterday evening for Denver, Colo., where he will try to break a cold on his lungs that has lingered with him for two years.

Maj. Blommaert wears the French Croix de Guerre with palm, the Belgian cross of the Order of Leopold with palm, and the Palms d'Officier d'Academie of Belgium for extraordinary heroism under fire, and said he has been cited for the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

Tells of Belgium's Needs.

He was a stretcher bearer in the little army of 220,000 that sacrificed 180,000 men in the first two months of the war in holding the Germans until the French and British arrived, and later organized the Protestant chaplains of the Belgian army. At first there were no Protestant chaplains in the Belgian army, but his work as stretcher bearer and as minister to the wounded Protestants in hospitals brought him recognition in a citation for self-denial on the battlefield, and the office was created for him.

"The first need of the Belgian people at this time is work," Maj. Blommaert said. "The people are in a dreadful state of mind from long inactivity and four terrible years under the German military machine. We must have raw materials to reestablish our industries and credits for the purchase of such materials and machinery.

Many Unemployed, He Says.

"Otherwise we will be a liability, for we are compelled to import most of our necessaries, and in order to sustain ourselves we must re-establish trade at once with which to pay for our keep.

"Idleness is our greatest danger. I doubt if it is realized in America that four-fifths of our people are without employment. The mines and the steel industry upon which so much depended are stagnant, and we are making a slow start in reviving our textile industry.

"It is imperative that we begin quickly to export. Before the war we ranked fifth among nations in trade and had a great surplus of export products. All this business has been paralyzed. Today the Government gives daily allowances to the unemployed from borrowed money, but this condition cannot exist long without demoralization.

"People Look to U. S. for Aid."

"We fought for the same ideals that prompted the United States to enter the war—liberty and democracy, and we now ask that American business men and capitalists come to our aid in a business way and on a business basis to see that we obtain raw materials quickly and the necessary credit so that we may resume our normal life.

"Belgium and indeed all Europe is looking with wistful confidence to the United States as the great power of the reconstruction period. The people of Europe have the utmost faith in this country, and somehow they believe and feel that the United States will lead them out of the wilderness.

"The presence in Belgium of a few American big business men at this time would do more to rejuvenate the ebbing morale of our people than any other power on earth, and this is an opportunity for a heroic service to mankind."

He said if American business men would co-operate with the business men of Belgium only half as willingly as our soldiers laid down their lives for that country, Belgium would soon be out of the class of dependents.

NEWTON APPOINTED TO POSTOFFICE COMMITTEE

Missouri's Seven New Congressmen Begin on Varying Special Duties.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The seven new Missouri members of Congress are now at home to constituents in their respective offices in the House Office Building.

Cleveland Newton (Republican) of the Tenth (St. Louism) District inherited the office occupied by by his two immediate predecessors, the late Representative Jacob E. Meeker and Freedrick Essen, who filled out Meeker's unexpired term. Newton has appointed as his secretary Miss Geraldine Koeln, daughter of City Collector Koeln of St. Louis. In the Republican committee assignments, Newton fared well, getting a place on one of the so-called "exclusive" comittees, the Postofice and Post Roads.

W. T. Bland (Democrat), who succeeds the late Representative Borland of the Fifth (Kansas City) District is confronted at the beginning of his term with an election contest filed by his defeated Republican opponent, Albert L. Reeves. The taking of testimony in this contest was halted by injunction proceedings in Kansas City, but the Republicans have brought the contest direct to the House and will seek authorization for one of the election committees of the House to send a sub-committee to the Fifth District and continue the hearings. Reeves' petition was laid before the House by his attorneys, David M. Proctor and C. C. Madison.

Rhodes on Four Committees.

Bland has with him as secretary a young man just out of Kansas University, F. A. Fratcher of Kansas City. Being a strong advocate of the improvement of inland waterways, Bland is expected to take a hand in the shaping of rivers and harbors legislation.

Marion E. Rhodes (Rep.) of Potosi, member for the Thirteenth District, who came to the House with previous congressional experience, has been assigned to four committees—Elections No. 2, Enrolled Bills, Indian Affairs and Mines and Mining. Rhodes brought with him as secretary Theodore Ziske of Hillsboro, who was clerk of the Jefferson County Draft Board and clerk to Representative Moss in the State Legislature.

William L. Nelson (Dem.), successor to Representative Shackleford in the Eighth District, has appointed as his temporary secretary L. B. Meyer, a former newspaper man of California, Mo. The job will later be taken permanently by R. E. L. Hill of Columbia, who was Nelson's campaign manager in the fight against Shackleford.

Hays' Pension Proposal.

Ed. V. Hays (Rep.) of the Fourteenth District, whose home is at Cape Girardeau, has been appointed to membership on the Accounts, District of Columbia, Elections No. 3 and Invalid Pensions Committees. His secretary is W. E. Keltner of Ozark, member of the Republican State Committee from the Fourteenth Congressional District. Hays has already introduced a bill to recognize, for pensioning purposes, the State Militia that aided the Federal cause in the Civil War.

I. V. McPherson (Rep.) of Aurora, Fifteenth District, began his legislative career by introducing a bill to levy a tariff of 2 cents a pound on the metallic contents of imported zinc ores. The bill has been referred to the Ways and Means Committee. McPherson has been made a member of the Naval Affairs Committee.

Sam C. Major (Dem.) of Fayette, who defeated James D. Salts (Rep.) in a close contest in the Seventh District, said today that he was not worried over the contest which Salts has filed and in which evidence has been taken. It is problematical whether this contest will be pushed by the Republicans. Major has not yet named his secretary.

Old Members' Activities.

Of the old members of the Missouri delegation, L. C. Dyer (Rep.) of the Twelfth (St. Louis) district will continue to be a member of the important Judiciary Committee, in which may come a fight over the President's proposal for the repeal of war time prohibition of beer and wine. William L. Igoe (Dem.) of the Eleventh (St. Louis) district, will also be a member of this committee. William A. Rodenberg of East St. Louis gets the chairmanship of the Flood Control Committee.

Missouri members contributed their share of the bills, numbering more than a thousand, that poured into the House "hopper" in the opening days of the session. Practically all states of the Union were represented by bills directing that captured German cannon be donated to cities, towns and hamlets.

Three Bills Offered by Dyer.

Among other bills by Missourians were three by Representative Igoe dealing with enlistments in the Navy and Marine Corps. Representative Dyer put in a bill for the reorganization of the Dental Corps of the navy and another providing for a commission, of which he would be a member, to obtain designs for a monument to the memory of the negroes who have fought for the United States.

A third bill by Dyer is designed to publish the names of those who resort to or connive at mob law. It provides that anyone who participates in a lynching shall be liable to prosecution for murder in any district court of the United States; that a county in which a lynching occurs shall be penalized from $5,000 to $10,000, the money to go to the dependents of the person put to death, and that State or municipal officers who fail to use their efforts to prevent a lynching, who neglect to prosecute lynchers or who permit mobs to take prisoners from their custody shall be subject to Federal prosecution. The penalty is fixed at imprisonment for five years, a $5000 fine, or both.

PATROLMAN DISCUSSED LEAGUE OFF HIS BEAT; FINED $25

Policeman Adolph J. Kistler of the Carr Street Station got off his beat when he stopped in a shop at Fifteenth street and Franklin avenue to beleaguer the storekeeper with arguments against the league of nations, according to a decision of the Police Board.

He was off his beat literally as well as figuratively, it was decided at Friday's meeting of the board, for he was absent from the path of duty 45 minutes, the duration of the debate. He was fined 25 demerits and $25.

An anonymous letter had informed the board that Kistler, in the course of the discussion, used unparliamentary language concerning President Wilson. He denied the charge.

"TIZ" FIXED MY SORE, TIRED FEET

Use "TIZ." Don't have puffed-up, burning, aching feet or corns.

Ah! what relief. No more tired feet; no more burning feet; no more swollen, aching, tender, sweaty feet. No more soreness in corns, callouses, bunions.

No matter what ails your feet or what under the sun you've tried without getting relief, just use "Tiz." "Tiz" is the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet. "Tiz" cures your foot trouble so you'll never limp or draw up your face in pain. Your shoes won't seem tight and your feet will never, never hurt or get sore and swollen. Think of it, no more foot misery, no more agony from corns, callouses or bunions.

Get a 25-cent box at any drug store or department store and get instant relief. Wear smaller shoes. Just once try "Tiz." Get a whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents. Think of it.—ADV.

RARE LEGAL ACTION IS AUTHORIZED AT CLAYTON

Mrs. Ida J. Ridpath Given Right to Take Depositions "to Perpetuate Testimony."

Mrs. Ida J. Ridpath was authorized yesterday by the Circuit Court at Clayton to take depositions for future use in an action to determine the disposition of the estate of Mrs. Wilhelmina Eber, her mother, 624 Forest avenue, Webster Groves. The purpose of the petition, it was stated, was to "perpetuate testimony to be used in a later action." This is a legal resource, according to attorneys, which is rarely invoked.

Those from whom Mrs. Ridpath will seek evidence are her sister, Mrs. Marie Rapp, a widow; their mother, Mrs. Eber, and Mrs. Rapp's two daughters, Eliza and Beatrice, all of whom live at the Forest avenue address.

The petitioner recites that when her father, Louis P. Eber, died, May 20, 1913, he left an estate of $140,000, amassed in a saloon and restaurant business opposite the old Four Courts building, in St. Louis. Under his will, it is stated, the widow received $38,000 and the balance went to Mrs. Rapp and her daughters.

The allegation is made that Mrs. Eber, being about 80 years old and feeble, is completely under the influence of Mrs. Rapp, who displays her "unsisterly attitude" by forbidding Mrs. Ridpath to visit her mother or set foot in the house. Mrs. Rapp, the complaint is made, has already received $9000 from Mrs. Eber, which she declares was presented to her as a gift. Mrs. Ridpath asserts that she is unable to obtain any information concerning her mother's affairs.

Mrs. Ridpath, under her name by a previous marriage, that of Mrs. Ida L. Ochner, filed suit on Sept. 26, 1914, to break her father's will, alleging that he was of unsound mind. A jury, in the following June, upheld the will. But in consideration of the plaintiff's dropping any future action to contest the will, a private settlement was arranged, whereby she received $18,800.

Business partners are seeking each other through Post-Dispatch Wants.

NO "EFFICIENCY" TESTS IN POLICE PROMOTIONS

Trials of Candidates for Lieutenancies No Longer Include Mental Examinations.

Physical examinations of 190 police Sergeants and 60 detective Sergeants to fill 15 positions of the rank of Lieutenant created by the last Legislature were conducted yesterday under direction of the Board of Police Commissioners. There was no mental examination, the present board having discarded the "efficiency" system put into effect by the Woerheide Police Board in the administration of Gov. Hadley.

Although the bill creating the jobs, which are in addition to the present 15 Lieutenants and are intended to provide men of that rank to have charge of police stations after midnight, has not been signed by the Governor, he is expected to sign it within a few days. Stations, after midnight, are now in charge of Sergeants.

Secretary Espy of the board said no announcement would be made of the men selected for the jobs until after the Governor had signed the bill. When the promotions are made it will be necessary for the board to promote 15 patrolmen to the rank of Sergeants.

No mental examination of Sergeants has been conducted since 1913 and at least one-fourth of the present Sergeants have been advanced to that rank within that time.

Since the passage of the bill by the Legislature members of the Police Board, it is said, have been besieged by letters and personal visits from candidates for the jobs, friends of the candidates and politicians.

Among the higher officers who have been promoted by the present board without undergoing competitive examinations are Lieuts. Gerk, Kirk, Taylor and Stinger, and Capts. Tierney and Hoffman. Inspector Lawrence Walsh was the last man to be promoted under the "efficiency" system. He went from Sergeant to Lieutenant and then to Major early in 1914.

Post-Dispatch WANTS point to many opportunities for better jobs and increased earnings.

DO WE LIVE AFTER DEATH?

Sr Oliver Lodge and Cardinal Gibbons

Discuss Question From Standpoints of Psychical Research and Reason

Famous British Scientist Says Recent Investigations by London Psychical Society Convince Him That Time Is Near When Proof of Communications From the Other World That All the World Will Have to Accept Will Be Available.

By SIR OLIVER LODGE.
President of the British Society for Psychological Research.

MAN accepts novel and wonderful and heretofore incredible discoveries in biology, in chemistry and in science, but he seems to assume that these are the only departments of the universe in which such discoveries are possible. Yet, in recent years, discoveries of the first magnitude have been made by strictly scientific methods in the region of psychology, and these discoveries are quite comparable in importance with those made in physics and biology. It may correctly be said they are of more importance, since they enter into the consideration of man's future existence.

Learned and responsible students both in the domain of science and of letters have had their interest aroused in strange and weird occurrences similar to those which have been vouched for among all nations and in every age. I refer to declared visitations or communication with the spirit world.

It has been possible to relegate

THE American Society of Philosophy has given out for publication an interesting symposium on the subject, "Is There Life After Death?" The contributers to the symposium, all of whom uphold the belief of a future life, are Sir Oliver Lodge, president of the British Society for Psychical Research, James Cardinal Gibbons, first of the American Cardinals; Prof. Paul Joire of the Institute of Psycho-physiology of Paris and president of the French Society for Experimental Psychology, and James L. Polk, president of the American Society of Philosophy. The Post-Dispatch herewith presents the arguments of Sir Oliver Lodge and Cardinal Gibbons. Those of Prof. Joire and President Polk will be printed later. Sir Oliver discusses the subject from the standpoint of the authenticated revelations from physical research, Cardinal Gibbons handles the subject from the standpoint of cold reason rather than that of religion.

First American Cardinal Asserts, That Cold Reason Upholds the Belief and That One of the Strongest Suggestions in Its Behalf Is the Fact That the Body Changes Completely Every Seven Years, but the Mind Continues On.

By CARDINAL GIBBONS.

THE soul is the principle by which we live and move and have our being. It is that which forms and perpetuates our identity; for it makes us to be the same yesterday, today and forever. The soul has intellectual conceptions and operations of reason and judgment independent of material organs.

Our own experience clearly teaches us this important point. Our minds grasp what the senses cannot reach. Such a principle being independent of matter in its operations must needs be independent of matter also in its own being.

It is, therefore, of its nature subject to no corruption resulting from matter. Its life, which is its being, is not extinguished and cannot be extinguished with that of the body.

It is well known that there is a constant waste going on in every part of the human body which has to be renovated by daily nutriment. So steady is this exhaustion that, in the judgment of medical science, an entire transformation of the physical system occurs every seven or eight years. New flesh and bone and tissues are substituted for those you had before.

The hand with which you write, the brain which you exercise in thinking are composed of entirely different materials. And yet you comprehend today what you learned 10 years ago, you remember and love those with whom you were then associated. How is this? You no longer use the identical organic substance you then possessed.

Does it not prove that the faculty, called the soul, by which you think, remember and love, is distinct from organic matter; that while the body is constantly changing the soul remains the same; that it does not share in the process of decomposition and renewal through which the human frame is passing, and, therefore, that it is a spiritual substance?

All nations, moreover, have believed in the immortality of the soul. Such was the faith of the people of ancient Greece and Rome, as we learn from the writings of Virgil and Ovid. Nor has this belief in a future life been confined to the uncultivated masses. It was taught by the most eminent writers and philosophers of those polished nations. Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, Cicero, Seneca, Plutarch and other sages of pagan antiquity, guided only by the light of reason, proclaimed their belief in the soul's immortality. The same views were held by the ancient Egyptians, the Chaldeans and Persians; indeed, by all the nations of Asia whose history has come down to us. If we question the Indian of North or South America on this point he will tell us of the happy hunting ground reserved in after life for the brave.

We may find nations without cities, without the arts and sciences, without mechanical inventions or any of the refinements of civilized life, but a nation without some presentiment of the existence of a future state we shall search for in vain.

Now, whence comes this universal belief in man's immortality? Not from prejudice arising from education; for we shall find this conviction prevailing among rude people who have no education whatever, among hostile tribes, and among nations at the opposite poles of the earth who have never had intercourse with one another.

We must, therefore, conclude that a sentiment so general and deep rooted must have been planted in the human breast by Almighty God, just as he has implanted in us an instinctive love for truth and justice and an inveterate abhorrence of falsehood and injustice. Not only has mankind a firm belief in the immortality of the soul, but there is inborn in every human breast a desire for perfect felicity or happiness. This desire is so strong in man that it is the mainspring of all his actions.

Perfect Happiness Not Attainable Here.

Now, God would never have planted in the human heart this craving

Redfern

The High Grade Economy Corset

More than is seen upon the surface of a corset—which may be very attractive—constitutes a good model.

The part responsible for the life and comfort of the corset is unseen. It is the boning that sustains the shape in which your form is comfortably modeled and it is the finishing and interlinings that are also contributary to its service. These you cannot know by just looking at the corset, you must wear it to see its modeling of your form and feel its comfort. So when you purchase your corset, it is well to know who the makers are.

Redfern corsets are superior. They are made by the makers of the famous Warner's Rust-Proof Corsets—creators of innovations and modern improvements that have made the desirable corsets we have today from the view-point of style, comfort and service.

after perfect happiness unless He had intended that the desire should be fully gratified; for He never designed that man should be the sport of vain and barren hopes. He never creates anything in vain; but He would have created something to no purpose if He had given us the thirst for perfect bliss without imparting to us the means of assuaging it.

It is true that this desire never can be fully realized in the present life. Can earthly goods adequately satisfy the cravings of the human heart and fill up the measure of its desires? Experience proves the contrary. Can honors fully gratify the longings of the soul? No. The more brilliant and precious the crown, the more heavily it presses upon the brow that wears it.

I have seen and contemplated two of the greatest rulers on the face of the earth, the civil ruler of 90,000,000 and the spiritual ruler of 300,000,000 of people. I have conversed with the President of the United States and the Pope in their private apartments; and I am convinced that their exalted positions, far from satisfying the aspirations of their souls, did but fill them with a profound sense of their responsibility.

Can earthly pleasures make one so happy as to leave nothing to be desired? Assuredly not. The keen edge of delight soon becomes blunted. We find great comfort in this life in the society of loving friends, but how frail is the thread that binds friends together? Another source of exquisite delight is found in the pursuits of knowledge. The higher we ascend the mount of knowledge, the broader becomes our view of the vast fields of science that still remain uncultivated by us.

The Land of Eternal Living.

But the greatest consolation attainable in this life is found in the pursuit and practice of virtue. This consolation arises from the well founded hope of future bliss rather than the fulfillment of our desires. Thus we see that neither riches nor honors, nor pleasures, nor knowledge, nor the endearment of social and family ties, nor the pursuit of virtue, can fully satisfy our aspirations after happiness. The more delicious the cup, the more bitter the thought that death will dash it to pieces.

Now, if God has given us a desire for perfect happiness, which He intends to one day fully gratify, and if this happiness, as we have seen, cannot be found in the present life, it must be reserved for the life to come. And as no intelligent being can be contented with any happiness, that is finite in duration, we must conclude it will be eternal and that, consequently, the soul is immortal. Life that is not to be crowned with immortality is not worth living. "If a life of happiness," says Cicero, "is to end, it cannot be called a happy life. Take away eternity, and Jupiter is not the hope of immortality, the condi- better off than Epicurus." Without tion of man is less desirable than that of the beast of the field.

Man may imprison and starve, may wound and kill the body, but the soul is beyond his reach, and is as impalpable to his touch as the sun's ray. The temple of the body may be reduced to ashes, but the spirit that animated the temple cannot be extinguished. The body, which is from man, man may take away; but the soul, which is from God, no man can destroy. "The dust shall return into its earth from whence it was, and the spirit to God who gave it."

As well might one born blind attempt to picture to himself the beauty of the landscape, as for the eye of the soul to contemplate the supernal bliss that awaits the righteous in what is beautifully called "the land of the living."

SIR OLIVER LODGE SAYS VEIL WILL BE LIFTED FROM FUTURE LIFE

many of these asserted occurrences to imagination or to superstition, but it has not been possible to thus eliminate them all. A special society with distinguished membership has been enrolled in London with the object of inquiring into the truth of many of these assertions of supernormalities. The attempt is being made in a serious and responsible spirit, a spirit of genuine scepticism, of critical examination and inquiry, not of dogmatic denial or of dogmatic assertion.

Have these investigations resulted in proof of communications with surviving intelligences? Some of the investigatiors believe such proof hav been adduced. Others are not so certain. I am of those who expect to tinued proofs(but am of the opinion a good case has been already made out, and at the present time it is legitimate to grant that lucid moments of intercourse with recessed persons may supervene.

"Boundary Wearing Thin."

The boundary between the two states—the known and the unknown—is still substantial, but it is wearing thin in places, and, like excavators engaged in boring a tunnel from opposite ends, amid the roar of water and other noises, we are beginning to hear now and again the pockaxes of our comrades on the other side.

We shall presently come back out of our tunnel into the light of day and relate our experiences to a busy and incredulous world. We expect to be received with incredulity.

It is unlikely that, i nour present stage of natural knowledge, we are acquainted with all the workings of the human spirit and can reduce them to such commonplace that tverything capable of happening in the mental and physical region is of a nature to be understood by all.

The first fact established has been the realit yof telepathy—that is to say, of the direct action of one mind on another mind by means unknown to science. That a thought or image or impression or motion in the mind of one person can arouse a similar impression to the mind of another person sufficiently sympathetic and sufficiently at leisure to attend and record the impression is now proved. But the mechanism whereby it is done is unknown.

Automatic Writing and Telepathy.

There are those who are beginning to be impressed with the idea that the time has come, or is near, when it may be legitimate to admit, at least as a tentative hypothesis, the phenomena of automatic writing, or writing executed independent of the knowledge and consciousnkess of the operator. I refer to telepathic influence from the surviving intelligence of some of those who have recently lived on this planet and who are now represented as laboring under great difficulties and discouragements to make known the fact that they can communicate with us by such intervening mechanism as is placed at their disposal—namely, the brain, nerves and muscles of an autonomist or medium. The assertion is made that, during the temporary suspension of the normal control of the medium, these spirits can make us of the organs of the medium for the purpose of transmitting their own thoughts and producing writing or speech in this physical world. It does not necessarily follow that the intelligence active is always that of a departed person, but that is the form which the phenomenon takes.

It is orthodox—not scientifically orthodox—but religiously orthodox to maintain that the connection between ourselves and our organism is only temporary, and that at what we call "death" we shall give up this material mode of manifestation so that the body resolves itself into its original elements. It is usually supposed in our new state we have no means of operating on the physical world. No, we cannot, unless one of three things happens.

First, the telepathic power may continue and we may operate directly on the minds of our friends on earth in such a way as to cause them to produce some physical effect or record through their accustomed mechanism.

Second, a materializing power may continue there analogous to that which has enabled us here on the planet to assimilate all sorts of material, to digest it and arrange it into the organism that serves us as a body.

Not Flooded With New Information.

Third, and more likely, telergic power, analogous to that which we have already supposed occasionally active, may exist, enabling the psychical unit to detect and make use of some fully developed physiological mechanism, a fully developed brain with muscles and nerves, so that these may be utilized for a time. This is telepathy. There is a vast amount of evidence for supernormal phenomena, but it has not made good its claim to positive acceptance in a way that telepathy has.

Let us not jump at the conclusion that the idea of space no longer means anything to persons removed from this planet. They are no longer in touch with matter and therefore cannot appeal to our organs of sense, as they formerly did, when they had bodies, but, for all we know, they may still be aware of space as we are. Let us not jump to the conclusion that their condition and surroundings are altogether and utterly different. That is one of the things we may gradually find out not to be true.

There is no such sudden break in the condition of existence as may have been anticipated; and no break at all in the continuous and conscious identity of genuine character and personality. Essential belongings, such as memory, culture, education, habits, character and affection—all these, and to a certain extent, tastes and interests for better, or for worse, are retained. Meanwhile, it would appear that in that other life, knowledge is not suddenly advanced—it would be unnatural if it were—we are not flooded with new information—nor do we at all change our identity; but powers and faculties are enlarged and the scope of our outlook on the universe may be widened and deepened.

Thus may we hope to reach further and further into the unknown; sure that though we may be enveloped in darkness, we shall encounter no clammy horror, but shall be greeted with assistance and with sympathy, which it is legitimate to symbolize as a clasp from the hand of Christ himself.

INFLAMMABILITY OF NAPHTHA DEMONSTRATED IN COURT

Attorney Burns Cup of Fluid in Suit Over Explosion, But $1754 Insurance Is Ordered Paid.

After watching a demonstration to determine the cause of a fire in the paint factory of the Rabok Manufacturing Co., 102-104 South Commercial street, a jury in Circuit Judge Landwehr's court yesterday returned a verdict in favor of the paint company for $1754.25 on a fire insurance policy. The demonstration was given by the defendant, the Agriculture Insurance Co. of Watertown, N. Y., which alleged that the plaintiff had violated the terms of its policy by permitting naptha on the premises, it being agreed, it was alleged, that a turpentine substitute would be used for mixing paint because the substitute is less inflammable. The fire, it is claimed, was caused by an explosion of naptha.

It was shown that naptha will take fire at room temperature, while turpentine substitute requires a temperature of at least 106 before it ignites. J. Will Finley, an oil chemist, a witness for the defense, poured some naptha in a brass cup and then applied a match. The liquid flashed up in flames. Then he did the same with turpentine, but it did not ignite until it was heated.

DELBRUECK SAYS WILSON HAS PUT SELF IN HANDS OF BRITISH

German Delegate Attacks President for "Agreeing to Deviate From 14 Points."

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Thursday, May 22.—Prof. Hans Delbrueck, a member of the German peace delegation, in a statement to the Versailles correspondent of the Tageblatt, attacks President Wilson for having put himself completely in the hands of the French and British by agreeing to deviate from his 14 points.

"President Wilson," the professor added, "probably imagines he did us a favor in declining to agree to such demands as the cession of the left bank of the Rhine and the dissolution of Germany into several small states. In reality, such demands would have been better than the present conditions because we are so bound by the latter that we can hardly do anything financially.

"It is to be assumed that President Wilson knows European conditions too little to survey their importance and, perhaps, there is in the back of his mind the thought of a conflict between America and Japan, and that Germany must be so weakened that she will not be able to be Japan's ally."

INDIAN REFORM BILL SOON TO BE INTRODUCED IN COMMONS

"Tireless Effort to Eliminate Causes of Discontent and Disorder," Object of Legislation.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Friday, May 23.—The Indian reform bill will be introduced in the House of Commons early next month, it was announced yesterday in the House by Edwin S. Montagu, Secretary of State for India. The bill will carry out the recommendation of the report made some time ago by Montagu and Baron Chelmsford, the Viceroy of India. The Secretary for India in summing up his policy, said:

'I would put first the maintenance of order. Secondly, tireless effort to investigate the causes of disorder and discontent, and to remove those which can be removed. Third, to go on with determination and courageous unhesitation to make of India what may loosely be described as a union of great self-governing countries entrusted with the custody of their own well-being as partners in the great freedom-loving British commonwealth. This is a task in every way worthy of this parliament and to my mind the only conceivable outcome of the unexampled and magnificent work that has been done in India by British effort and enterprise."

Trinity Church Guild Concert.

CITY'S GREATEST DECORATION DAY FETE PLANNED

Celebration to Include Parade and Auto Trip to Jefferson Barracks for Memorial Program.

7 ORGANIZATIONS WILL PARTICIPATE

Women's Associations Will Be in Court of Honor for Tribute Similar to That Paid World War Veterans.

Plans are nearing completion for the most elaborate celebration commemorating Decoration day ever held in the city, according to James R. Dunn, chairman of the Public Celebrations Committee of the Chamber of Commerce. Many organizations, according to Dunn, including the Mayor's Welcome Home Committee, will co-operate with the Chamber's committee.

The celebration will include a parade, and an automobile trip through the various city parks to the Jefferson Barracks, where the principle ceremonies of the day will be held.

Four organizations of veterans will make up the ranks of the parade and will include the members of the Grand Army of the Republic, the veterans of Indian Wars, the veterans of the Spanish-American War, and the Sons of Veterans. They will parade in the order named and will be followed by automobiles carrying the veterans who are unable to march on foot with their comrades. These automobiles will be furnished by the Public Celebrations Committee.

The parade is scheduled to start at Thirteenth and Locust streets at 2 o'clock. The veterans of these four organiaztions will gather at the northwest corner of Thirteenth and Locust streets at 1 o'clock.

The Line of March.

The line of march will be from the rendezvous at Thirteenth street, over Thirteenth street to Washington and up Washington avenue to Twelfth street, where the parade will proceed through the Court of Honor to the city hall, where the automobiles will be awaiting the veterans to convey them to Jefferson Barracks.

Arrangements have been made by the committee with the street car company to have plenty of street cars available for the conveying of the spectators reviewing the parade in the Court of Honor, to the Barracks.

R. C. Murdock, executive secretary of the St. Louis Chapter of the Red Cross, has notified the committee that the Women's Motor Corps of his organization will co-operate with the committee in supplying adequate automobile facilities to handle the veterans.

Maj. Leo Rassieur is to be the grand marshal and Maj. Allen J. Showers is chairman on the Committee on Arrangements of the G. A. R. organization.

The Jefferson Barracks Band will parade with the veterans. The usual grand review of the troops will take place at the Barracks.

Stands have been set aside in the Court of Honor on Twelfth street between Olive street and Pine street for the relatives of the veterans, the Women's Relief Corps of the G. A. R. and the Women's Auxiliary of the Sons of Veterans and the Ladies of the G. A. R.

A meeting of all the organizations will be held at the Public Library Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, during which time the final arrangements for the celebration will be made.

In outlining his plans to make this the most elaborate Decoration day celebration ever held in the city, Chairman Dunn said: "The Public Celebration Committee feels that the city of St. Louis is duty bound to exert every energy to make this the most elaborate celebration, marking the commemoration of Decoration day, ever held in the history of the city.

"Each year sees a smaller number of the aged veterans in the ranks. Each year sees a decreasing number gather for the annual pilgrimage to Jefferson Barracks.

Honor to Veterans.

"The parade will not be long, or the participants large in numbers, but as these old veterans of the Civil War, the Indian Wars and the Spanish-American War march through the Court of Honor, we want to pay them the same homage as we did the veterans of the world's war on their return from France."

The following men have been placed in charge of the special arrangements by the committee: Robert E. Lee, automobiles; Walter D. Thompson, parade; F. Ernest Cramer, street car facilities; A. O. Wilson, music; James R. Dunn, invitations; A. B. Ecoff, Blair Post; J. P. Hessen, Lyon Post; Bart Hussan, Hassendenble Post; C. F. Bottom, Hrading Post; Allan J. Showers, Ransome Post; Georg; W. Edwards, Shaw Post, and J. W. Lanly of Merriman Post are the commanders of the G. A. R. organization.

Members of the Public Celebration Committee are James R. Dunn, chairman; the Rev. A. H. Armstrong, Martin J. Collins, Robert D. Corlett, F. Ernest Cramer, Isaac A. Hedges, E. P. Lumpkin, E. K. Love, John Ring Jr., Moses Shoenberg, C. M. Talbert, Walter D. Thompson, A. O. Wilson and John W. Withers.

Dr. Robinson Boing to Dartmouth.

At the close of the current school year Dr. William A. Robinson, associate professor of Political Science and School of Commerce and Finance of Washington University, will sever his connection with that institution to accept the post of professor of Political Science at Dartmouth College, New Hampshire. Dr. Robinson has been a member of Washington University faculty for five years.

Protest Mass Meeting Today.

A mass meeting and protest demonstration will be held today at the New Club Hall, Thirteenth street and Chouteau avenue, under the auspices of the "Conference of Friends of Russian Freedom." The speakers will be Dr. M. Rovin of Michigan, Ella Reeves Bloor of New York, William M. Brandt and others.

CHAUFFEUR IN FATAL ACCIDENT CHARGED WITH CARELESSNESS

Ludwig W. Koch Ordered Held by Coroner's Jury in Case of J. B. Luttig, Killed by Truck.

Ludwig W. Koch, 35 years old, 413 Blase avenue, chauffeur for the St. Louis Malleable Casting Co., who was the driver of a truck which killed John B. Luttig, 27, a brewery worker, 5049 Claxton avenue, in front of 4642 Florissant avenue, Friday, was ordered held by a Coroner's jury yesterday on a charge of criminal carelessness.

Witnesses said Luttig was dragged 50 feet and the truck could not be stopped until it had continued 50 feet further, where it struck a telegraph pole.

WORK WITH DEPENDENT CHILDREN IS REVIEWED

Detailed Report on Different St. Louis Institutions Made by Dr. G. B. Mangold

What is being done for dependent children in St. Louis is related in detail in a report on children's institutions prepared by Dr. George B. Mangold, vice chairman of the Executive Committee of the Central Council of Social Agencies, based on a survey made under the direction of Francis McLain, New York Society of Associated Charity Organizations, under the joint auspices of the Central Council and the Chamber of Commerce. The report, printed in a 16-page booklet, has just come from the press.

St. Louis has 32 institutions that care either for babies or children and some of which accept mothers as well. The list includes 18 Protestant, 10 Catholic and one Jewish institution. At the present time the approximate number in the institutions is 3000. This figure does not include the children given temporary shelter in the Women's Lodge operated by the St. Louis Provident Association. During the past year about 75 stranded and homeless children were given lodging until some permanent plan for their disposal was formulated and carried out.

Many Have Parents Living.

The figures concerning the parental condition of these children are surprising in view of the fact that it is commonly believed that the institutions are primarily for orphans. In 1911 it appears that 42 per cent of the children had both parents living; 40 per cent were half orphans, while 18 per cent had lost both parents. For the present report it was possible to get information on only 669 children. Of this number 111 were orphans, 297 half orphans and 261 had both parents living. It appears from these figures that the function of a children's institution is not only to care for children who have become homeless, but that a great deal of family rehabilitation work must be carried on in order that homes from which these children have come may be built up again and made fit for their return.

The report states that there is insufficient protection against fire, and too much reliance is placed upon fire escapes. Exits to some of these are locked and, therefore, the children are in danger. In those institutions which do not keep children above the second story and where fire escapes are not required by law, reliance seems to be placed on the ability of the superintendent and the employes to control a panic should fire occur, the report states.

Only Few Earn Money.

Very little attempt has been made to train children as to the value of money by having them earn and handle it, according to the report. There are several exceptions, however. In the St. Louis Protestant Orphans' Home, the boys working in the fields and the girls working in the laundry and a few children charged with special responsibilities are paid for their services. Even here the system is not perfect, the report states, because not all of the children are regularly given an opportunity to earn money during the year. In most of the institutions there is no pretense of the establishment of this system.

It is suggested that every institution keep daily task records of its children so that these records can be reviewed from time to time by the governing boards. It is pointed out that although many children are required to do particular tasks, the record of their work is quite inadequate. Children may have work in the fields, laundry or kitchen, but the manager does not necessarily know the precise routine of their work. Occasionally abuses exist; for example, in one cottage institution girls were kept from school to complete work in the laundry. Again immature children have been doing work for which they were not fitted.

Lack of Systematic Planning.

In the majority of institutions, the report states, there is insufficient classification of children for work to which they are best fitted. This lack of systematic planning is due partly to the fact that there is so much shifting of the population. As a general rule, children of 12 years and over are trained in domestic work and little else. Excellent work is being done in St. Frances' Orphan Asylum in preparing negro girls for domestic service, the survey shows. There also is a creditable system of individual vocational guidance in the Convent of Mercy, Father Dunn's Newsboys' Home, Girls' Industrial Home and the Epworth School for Girls.

Probably the most striking weakness in the work of children's institutions, the report states, is the lack of adequate investigation when they are admitted, at the time applications are made for the discharge of children, and of the homes to which placed-out children are sent. There should be a centralized social service agency called a "children's bureau," it is suggested, to meet the deficiencies named.

In regard to the control of children, the report recommends that in the near future a readjustment between the work of public and private institutions be made. Ultimately all children taken from parents as dependent or neglected should pass through the Juvenile Court and be committed to the Board of Children's Guardians. Private agencies, including institutions, may accept the responsibility of caring for children who are to be returned at some later time to their parents or relatives. Laws should be enacted, the report states, making possible the commitment of children for limited periods of time to private agencies so that the constant shifting of children between institutions may be reduced.

SCHOOL TO HONOR ITS SOLDIER DEAD

Central High to Unveil Cast of Bronze Tablet Bearing Names of Students Killed.

Central High School will honor the former members of the school who died in the service of the United States during the great war by unveiling Thursday the cast of a bronze memorial tablet which will later be duplicated in bronze and installed in the corridor. The tablet is the work of Walker K. Hancock of 4332 McPherson avenue, who graduates from the art course this June.

It is 28 by 36 inches, and in a beautifully designed border bears the names of the 19 men who gave their lives for their country. These are: Otto Becker, Harold Becker, Ewing Boone, Spencer S. Boyd, Charles H. Duncker, Jerome Goldman, William W. Hayes, William Guy Junkin, Charles Kroehle, Frank P. Mathews, John D. McCarthy, Ralph Oldham, Charles O'Neil, Everett Simpson, Eldone H. Truex, Oliver G. Vassar, Edward W. Vaughn, Arthur Y. Wear and Ornie Widman.

Relatives Are Invited.

Invitations to attend the ceremony have been sent to the relatives of all the men to be honored, and to every man who has been in service to be present in uniform to participate in the exercises and to signalize the military significance of the event. The program, especially appropriate for the day preceding Memorial day, includes:

Invocation, Rt. Rev. Frederick Foote Johnson, Bishop Coadjutor Diocese of Missouri; sonnet, They Died for Us, by W. J. S. Bryan; "Hail to the Heroes," school chorus; address, Judge Leo Rassieur, Class of 1859; "The Americans Come," J. Glen Lee; address, Maj. William Wilson Burden; unveiling of tablet, Miss Laura Hancock; "America," school

The tablet is to be covered with a service flag bearing nineteen gold stars.

While the tablet is dedicated to those who died while in service it will also serve as a commemorative record of the parts taken in the war by all former members of Central High School. The total number in service of all kinds was 564; men in military service, 527; women, 28. The school furnished 12 Red Cross nurses, five others; two munitions inspectors. Ten teachers of the school entered war service. Many of the soldiers distinguished themselves and received citations and decorations.

Those Who Won Honors.

Corp. Andrew Taylor Castlen, Sixth Regiment Marine Corps, was decorated by the French Government for bravery. He received the scarlet silk ribbon of the French Legion of Honor, the highest honor in France, the same as conferred upon Gen. Pershing. In Chateau-Thierry and Belleau Woods he was cited 12 times for brilliant action.

Capt. Abraham Tabachnick, aviator, won two citations for extraordinary bravery at St. Mihiel.

Lieut. Henry M. Noel received the Distinguished Service Cross for heroism in action at Belleau Wood.

Capt. Oliver W. Spencer was awarded the French Croix de Guerre for action in Vosges Mountains.

Capt. John E. Mitchell Jr., 138th Regiment, received the Croix de Guerre.

Capt. John R. Moll was made a Chevalier of Belgium, honor rank, conferred by King Albert.

Capt. H. F. McFarland, Twelfth Engineers, was decorated with British Military Cross.

Lieut. Clarence Gill, aviator in the squad with Quentin Roosevelt, Ninety-fifth Aero Squadron, wounded by anti-aircraft guns, won the Croix de Guerre.

Col. E. J. Spencer was decorated with the Legion of Honor.

JUICE OF LEMONS FOR TAN, FRECKLES

Girls! Make harmless bleaching lotion at home for few cents.

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.—ADV.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.—ADV.

Eleven in Graduating Class.

LUMBERTON, Miss.—The young women and two young men are in the graduating class of the local high school which will close the last week in May.

CITIZENSHIP SCHOOL TO OPEN TOMORROW

Suffragists Offer Week's Courses in Public Speaking, Suffrage History and Voting.

A citizenship school will be opened tomorrow to both sexes at the Missouri Woman Suffrage Association, at the Y. W. C. A., 1411 Locust street, to continue all week. The curriculum will include courses in citizenship, public speaking, suffrage and other political argumentation, suffrage history, organization and the science of publicity.

The classes will be conducted by specialists in the different studies. Special inducements will be offered to all who take the advanced public speaking course, which will cover the proper use of the voice, arrangement of materials, outlines, practice in impromptu speaking, speaking on arranged subjects, discussions and debates.

Plans for establishing night citizenship classes are also being worked out by the Missouri Association. Diplomas will be given those attending either course.

Work for Graduates.

In order to popularize the schools, arrangements are under way to provide employment for those who complete the prescribed courses, and show special aptitude for some particular phase of the curriculum under the following conditions:

After attending the school, those desiring salaried positions will be required to do three weeks' organization work. For this no salary will be paid, but all necessary expenses will be met.

From the corps thus developed, the Executive Board will select a limited number to do organization work. Women who cannot give all their time will be paid part time salaries. Those showing special competency will be recommended for permanent positions.

Enrollment can be effected through application to the Suffrage Association, 755 Century Building.

The opening of the course will consist of an address, "What the Vote May Mean to Women," at 2 p. m. tomorrow by Mrs. Richard E. Edwards, a member of the national board of the National American Woman Suffrage Association.

Mock Presidential Election.

Among the lecturers on citizenship will be Mrs. Lucille B. Lowenstein, Harlan E. Reed, Glendy B. Arnold, Isidor Loeb and Luther Ely Smith. Ten lessons in public speaking will be given during the week by Prof. Edgar G. Frazier of the Public Speaking Department, University of Indiana. The various lessons will include practical demonstrations of how political matters are carried on. For instance, there will be a mock presidential election in which all the usual forms will be observed.

There will be a number of other co-ordinated subjects taught. Thursday afternoon Mrs. George Gellhorn will speak on "The Psychology of Suffrage Audiences." Thursday morning the question of publicity and how to obtain it will be discussed. Mrs. F. B. Clarke, executive secretary of the Equal Suffrage League of St. Louis, will tell of the headquarters aspect of the news, and Miss Elizabeth Fletcher will tell how it looks in the newspaper office. Miss Betty Boyd, publicity agent, will talk about amateur press agents.

Evening classes from 7:30 to 9:45 will be held throughout the week, the same instructors giving the same subjects, but in a somewhat more condensed curriculum.

MESSAGE OF THANKS WRITTEN IN BLOOD ON GRAIN OF WHEAT

Syrian's Expression to American Committee on Relief; Takes "Ink" From His Heart.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 24.—A message written in blood on a grain of Syrian wheat, thanking American relief workers for aiding his people, has been received from the headman of a village of Lebanon by representatives of the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian relief in Beirut, according to an announcement at headquarters of the organization here today.

The message, so finely transcribed that it could be read only through a magnifying glass, declares that its author, Nasib Said, could not find "a better ink than the blood of my heart nor a paper more appropriate than a grain of wheat" to record "your great benevolence."

J. A. WRIGHT, LAWYER, FALLS ON STREET, DIES

Former Election Commissioner Reels and Skull Is Fractured on Sidewalk Downtown.

Joseph A. Wright, 46 years old, of 4942 West Pine boulevard, attorney and former Election Commissioner, died suddenly at 9:15 a. m. yesterday in front of 304 North Sixth street, where he had been looking in the show window of a shoe store. Witnesses said he collapsed and fell backward, his head striking the sidewalk. He was dead when picked up. It was found his skull was fractured.

Wright had left his law office in the Pierce Building a short time before. He had told his stenographer that he had a pain in his lungs and was going to see a doctor.

Mrs. Wright said that so far as she knew he was in perfect health, except that he had been under treatment for a condition of his foot, in which the instep bone was exerting pressure on a nerve.

Wright was the only man who ever held office in St. Louis as a member of the Progressive party.

Until the termination of the receivership of the Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co., in March, he was attorney for Henry S. Caulfield, the receiver. He had been a personal friend of Theodore Roosevelt and was one of the organizers of the "Bull Moose" movement in Missouri. In recognition of the strength shown by this party in the 1912 election he was appointed Election Commissioner by Gov. Major, a Democrat, in 1913, and served four years in that office.

Wright, until then a bachelor, married Miss Ethel Penfield Hart of Detroit in October, 1916. He was born in Indiana and came to St. Louis in 1899, after being graduated by the De Pauw University and Columbia University, New York.

At Wright's office it was said he formerly was president of the National Union Insurance Society of the United States.

PARIS GAINS ELBOW ROOM AND GREAT NEW "BELT LINE" PARK

Demolition of Wall and Cession of Military Zone Makes Way for Civic Improvements.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 21.—By authorizing the demolition of the wall of Paris and the cession of the site and the military zone outside the wall for city improvements, the French Parliament has just removed the principal obstacle to a "Greater Paris." The city will thus obtain the elbow room it needs, and one of the most remarkable parks in the world. With a width of 250 yards and a length of 25 miles, the park will completely surround the city, adding one more to the circular systems of improvements that have successively taken the place of disappearing walls since the time of Philippe Auguste which show the growth of the city as rings mark that of the oak.

Americans revisiting the city 10 years hence will come upon "Greater Paris" without knowing it if they look for the old landmarks. The ragpickers' huts, truck gardens and piles of refuse that made the military zone look like "Shantytown" and gave arrivals the first warning of approach to the city will have disappeared to give place to the park. In place of the massive stone wall and deep moat in front of it that marked the city limits, there will be another belt 140 yards wide and 21 miles long composed of buildings in the best French style, built according to a general plan combining harmony and taste with the most approved hygienic installations.

The demolition of the wall will release 1150 acres of ground, of which 300 acres will be taken up by new streets, boulevards, railroads and canals. The suppression of the military zone will make available 1875 acres of space, of which 1750 will be devoted to the new park, constituting a third of all the park area of the city. The rest of the space will be utilized for the erection of a permanent exposition building between the gates of Saint Cloud and Auteuil. A small portion of the wall will be preserved as a historical monument.

This improvement will involve the suppression of the 60 "gates" of Paris. New and wider thoroughfares will connect the city with the suburbs and, eventually, most of the immediately neighboring communes will be incorporated in the greater city.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Drama

PART TWO. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 25, 1919. PAGES 1—14B.

Greatest Single Feat by a St. Louisan in War Revealed by a Medal of Honor Award

Sergt. Michael B. Ellis, first erroneously proclaimed to be East St. Louisan, alone took 11 machine guns, 44 individual Germans and the crews of four guns—Wrote to foster mother He had won award but didn't say for what—In Pershing's own division after seven years in army.

THE outstanding single-handed accomplishment of valor of any St. Louis soldier in the great war has been revealed by the approval of President Wilson, given to the recommendation of Gen. Pershing that Sergt. Michael B. Ellis of 1308 Cass avenue be awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, the token of highest recognition that the nation provides for its soldiers.

In the cold description of the official citation the accomplishment was this:

Operated far in advance of the first wave of his company (C Company, Twenty-eighth Infantry, First Division), voluntarily undertaking the most dangerous mission and single-handed attacking and reducing machine gun nests. Flanked one emplacement, killing two Germans and capturing 17 others. Later, single-handed, advanced under heavy fire and captured 27 Germans, including two officers and six machine guns which were holding back his company. Informed by the captured officers of four other machine guns, captured these, one after another, with their crews.

To this official recitation, the commander of the American armies added the following reason for his recommendation:

For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty in action with the enemy near Exermont, Oct. 5.

SERGT. MICHAEL B. ELLIS.

Wins Highest French Award, Too.

No flesh-and-blood account of Sergt. Ellis' personally conducted reign of terror through the German lines can be had at this time. He, himself, in numerous letters to his foster-mother, Mrs. B. Moczylowski, 1308 Cass avenue, gives no account of his performance. He mentioned in one letter to his home only the fact that he was to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor, adding that he also was to get the French Medal Militaire. As is known, the Medal Militaire is the highest award France can bestow upon an enlisted man. As to the manner of his winning his medals, he said nothing.

However, some understanding of what the St. Louis man did may be had from reading accounts of the feat of Sergt. Alvin C. York, who is being hailed, on a journey of triumph through the East as "the war's greatest hero." Sergt. York won the Congressional Medal of Honor also, and the nature of Sergt. Ellis' feat was similar in some respects to that of York.

York's expedition, which began with a squad of seven American soldiers and ended almost as a solitary battle of York against the Germans, like Ellis was against machine-gun nests. York, by extraordinary marksmanship, was enabled to kill 25 Germans. An inventory showed the sum total of the expedition to be, in addition, 35 machine guns silenced and 132 prisoners taken.

It appears from the official citation that Ellis' feat was single-handed throughout. It totaled 11 machine guns captured, two Germans killed and the number captured, 44, plus the crews of four guns whose number is not given in the citation.

Aside from its being the performance of a St. Louisan, the feat of Sergt. Ellis has other peculiar interest for this city. It seems to have been in the nature of revenge for the experiences of portions of the 138th (St. Louis) Infantry and the 139th Infantry and other units of the Thirty-fifth Division in and about the same spot in the battle line.

In "Pershing's Own" Division.

It is remembered that Maj. Rieger, who recently returned as Col. Rieger in command of the 138th Infantry, led a portion of the 139th Infantry into the town of Exermont, the farthest point in the enemy's lines reached by the Thirty-fifth in the Argonne. Lieut. Leahy, in charge of a battalion of the 138th reached the ravine of Exermont. The Germans counter-attacked on Exermont and were repulsed by Rieger's men. Gen. Traub, upon a visit to the scene, ordered a withdrawal and the town was given over to the Germans again. On Oct. 1, the First Division, of which the Twenty-eighth Infantry and Sergt. Ellis were a part, relieved the Thirty-fifth, and on Oct. 5, Sergt. Ellis went on his rampage in the German lines at Exermont.

The Congressional Medal of Honor is the second to be won in this war by a St. Louisan. The first went to Capt. Alexander R. Skinker of the 138th Infantry, who lost his life in the Argonne, charging, with two of his men, a machine-gun nest that was threatening his company. The number of Congressional Medals won in this war is under 100. When the awards were apportioned in Washington last Feb. 1, the First Division had at that time only one Congressional Medal of Honor. As far as is known now, that of Sergt. Ellis is the second to be won in the First, a division of the American expeditionary forces whose record is surpassed by none.

Sergt. Ellis fought through the war with the division, which is known as Pershing's own, from the fact that it accompanied him to France from the Mexican border. Ellis has written that he went the entire gauntlet of battles in which the division participated, including his own little battle, without a wound. He was a member of the regular army at the opening of the war, having first enlisted seven years ago, shortly after he completed school in the St. Lawrence O'Toole Parish School, at Seventh and O'Fallon streets.

First Lost 7500 at Soissons.

Many St. Louisans are in the First Division, and one of them, an officer in Ellis own regiment, the Twenty-eighth, wrote to the Post-Dispatch on March 20, reciting some of its accomplishments. He inclosed an official citation of Gen. Pershing praising the division, which, he said, was at that time the only general order praising one division alone that had been issued in the American forces. He told how the First lost 7500 at Soissons, how it cut the Soissons-Chateau-Thierry railroad and how subsequently, after relieving the Thirty-fifth, it captured 1407 Germans in the Argonne, and advanced seven kilometers against perhaps the most stubborn resistance the Germans put up against American arms.

The first announcement of Sergt. Ellis' winning of the Congressional Medal, which was made in Washington Thursday, gave his address as 628 Collinsville avenue, East St. Louis.

His foster mother, Mrs. Moczydlowski, who adopted him 16 years ago, was much concerned that he had not been announced as a resident of St. Louis, for he has been, she said, since childhood. She explained the mistake by saying that Ellis' father, before his death last year, lived at the East St. Louis address, and she thought that the younger Ellis had not changed his next-of-kin address since his first enlistment seven years ago.

Adopted by Mrs. Moczydlowski.

Mrs. Mocydlowski, whose husband publishes Przewodnik Polski, a Polish publication, explained how she came to be "mother" to Ellis. He refers to her in his letters very fondly as "mother." Michael was the youngest of a family of brothers. His mother became ill at his birth and until her death was confined in an asylum here. His father was a laborer and as his sons grew up, the motherless family fell apart until there was only Michael left. He then was 8 years old.

Mrs. Moczydlowski, who had no children of her own at the time, adopted him, formally and legally

Intimate Study of "Grandmother of the Russian Revolution"

Active Mentally and Physically at 76

Knows How to Conserve Her Energy, and Enjoys a Green Old Age Though Half Her Life Has Been Spent in Prison—Tells How American Women Can Help Her Stricken Land.

By Marguerite Martyn.

MADAME BRESHKOVSKY, coming in from luncheon, walked straight past a group of visitors waiting in an anteroom of her apartment at the Statler, and retired for a siesta from which she was not to be disturbed.

"Babushka knows how to take care of her strength and nobody is permitted to interfere with the order of her life," one was told by Miss Lily Klauser, her secretary.

After a half hour's wait, while I listened to Dr. Egbert, secretary of the Breshkovsky fund, and a young engineer named Stewart who left Russia last July to enlist in the American army, compare experiences with the Bolsheviki, I was summoned, and the woman who is called Little Grandmother of the Revolution rose from a brocade chaise longue all smiles and cordiality. Her comfortable, uncorseted figure was clad in a homely dark blue wrapper and she adjusted the plain white linen kerchief she wears over her head, fastened under her chin. She employs great economy of words, not so much from lack of knowledge of English, I think, as in order to make every word count. 'I think well before I speak, and I never take back anything I say," she explains.

She had not uttered a word, but greeted me with smiles and bobs of the head when she began unsealing a package of real Russian cigarettes. Offering one with a lighted match to her visitor, she then lighted one for herself. They were the slenderest of cigarettes, consisting of about one part tobacco and two parts paper holder. Just as well they are so precious since they are insidious things to offer women not already addicted to the habit, I can testify!

Then the woman who has spent about half her 76 years in prison, solitary confinement in a dungeon, or exile at hard labor in the mines of Siberia, and who two years ago saw her dreams tantalizingly realized only to be shattered again, settled down to tell me how her hopes for the future of Russia now rest in the prospect of providing schools for the rising generation, and trades and industries for the masses of Russia.

Her Appeal for Educating Masses

The extremists in power in Russia today would deal as ruthlesssly with her as did the bureaucrats of old, but neither power is more capable of deterring her from her fixed purpose than were her waiting guests of interfering with her nap, that is evident. She simply washes her hands of the political situation in Russia and proceeds to deliver her message on behalf of the rest of the population which, she says, includes more than 90 per cent of all Russia.

Of all the emissaries who have come out of Russia with their varied explanations of what is needed there, certainly none comes with a more concrete and specific, more natural, more easily understood appeal, or one less susceptible of suspicion than the appeal for schools, teachers and means of education, addressed, as it is, to the people of a land where schools and education are a basic ideal. As a message from woman to woman she should be quickly understood even without the presence of her convincing and forceful personality.

As it was, in spite of immediate differences in dress, customs, language and the serious impediment of deafness upon her part, I was quickly made to feel how little the Russian revolutionist differs in ideals and spirit from ourselves.

Mme. Breshkovsky has been known as a Socialist, but when she described the form of Government she believes in, it did not differ materially from our own.

Bolshevists but a Small Faction

"We wanted a constitutional assembly with representatives elected according to geographical areas by secret suffrage of both sexes and the votes of everybody over 20 years of age. We would have had a republic with autonomy of nationality. We would have had such reforms and changes as could be successfully made at this or that moment of history, endeavoring to make these changes with as little distress as possible and conserving all that is good of the culture of the past."

Not unlike our own ideals of government and reforms, you see. "Never was a revolution accomplished in better order or with greater regard for lawfulness," she continued. "It is spoiled for the present by civil wars," she added resignedly but not hopelessly. "I am accused of deserting my comrades. That is not true. Certain factions have deserted me. But they are a small faction, the Bolsheviki, now in power. You have to understand psychology of the Russian people, the '——' (some Russian word which she explained as being the quality of being non-resistant, easy going), "to understand how the Bolshevists remain in political power."

"But Bolshevism exists only in the cities in the northern, barren part of Russia where the people have no occupation except talking and rioting. Vast fertile, rich areas of Russia are practically uninfluenced by Bolshevism thus far. In all the south and east of Russia one can work toward restoration if one works quietly and quickly.

'Where 20,000,000 men were mobilized for war in a country entirely unprepared for war, inevitably the slaughter was great. Industry, as a consequence has been at a standstill. There are 4,000,000 dependent orphans in Russia to begin with. It is this which I hope America will understand and in this situation I hope they will help before it is too late. Otherwise the terrible unrest which prevails in the north and west will spread over Russia. From there it may spread

Getting St. Louis and Missouri Hand in Hand Is New Task · Chamber of Commerce Undertakes

Hostility Among Country Legislators to Bills Originated by the City Convinces Local Business Men They Must Get in Closer Touch With the State and Help It in Return for Help From It.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

ST. LOUIS will have to get on a more friendly footing with the State of Missouri. The fate of the county annexation bill in the Legislature showed that.

One way would be to send out trade excursions, glad-handing and urging merchants to buy their goods in St. Louis. That has been done a number of times and in a number of ways, and it does a certain amount of good.

The Chamber of Commerce has adopted another plan and another program. Its announced motto is:

> "What can we put into Missouri —not what can we get out of Missouri?"

The Chamber of Commerce has added a new department, the Production Bureau. Its announced purpose is to develop the State of Missouri. It has placed the work in charge of Carl J. Baer, who in the past five years has carried on a similar work in Arkansas, backed by the Little Rock Board of Trade.

Baer has begun work, and he is explaining his plan of campaign to bodies of business men, as he has opportunities at their meetings and luncheons. Twenty-minute talks are his specialty. He is a rapid talker, and from the development which he is able to outline for the State of Missouri in 20 minutes, it would appear that it would take him only a few hours to straighten out the troubles of China or start the Turkish realm off on the highway of progress.

THE subjects which will have the attention of the Production Bureau of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, in its campaign to develop the State of Missouri, and in which it is seeking the assistance of men and women who specialize in the various matters, are:

Agriculture, Forestry, Mining, Fisheries, Transportation and Roads, Dairying and Livestock, Horses and Mules, Poultry, Land Clearing, Irrigation, Drainage, Levees, Water Power, Cutover Lands, Rural Education, Home Economics, Grain and Cereals, Gardens and Truck Farming, Markets and Packing, Immigration, Legislation, Boy and Girl Clubs, Orchards.

His Time-Saving Charts

He talked to the Rotary Club at Hotel Statler Thursday. He had placed a chain of charts and diagrams about the walls of the dining room, and some of the luncheers looked at this with apprehension, thinking they might be in for an hour or more of classroom talk. But the agile speaker made the charts a time saver, setting some of his audience to studying the things that looked interesting to them, while he went over other matters with the rest.

"The Production Bureau," Baer said, "is the vehicle of the Chamber of Commerce, through which the business men offer co-operation to all agencies in the State of Missouri and the territory about St. Louis, for building up the State and the region.

"What we shall try to do is to put the bankers and business men in direct connection with the actual producers.

"Without a definite program and a definite bureau, the business man is likely to lose sight of the fact that 70 cents of his dollar represents agricultural values.

"In Arkansas, at the beginning of the war, cotton dropped to 5 1-2 cents a pound, and the farmer and the business man suffered together.

A Lesson From Arkansas

"We figured up the matter of production and consumption, and we found that the State of Arkansas was buying $83,000,000 worth of food and feed a year from outside the State, most of which it should be raising for itself.

"The State was not feeding itself, though it is an agricultural State primarily. It was spending $23,000,000 a year for meat, and almost as much for canned goods, and the rest of the $83,000,000 went for feed for animals, which should have been raised by the farmers, but was being imported.

"We brought in agricultural experts. They said: 'Feed yourselves. You can do it.'

"We took the business men out with us. We arranged for meetings in the towns and in rural school districts. In six weeks we talked to 200,000 persons. We said to farmers: 'The nation is calling on us to deliver more food. This State must feed itself. It must diversify its crops. You farmers who have raised $1000 worth of food products and feed must raise $2000 worth next years. You must have gardens, you must raise more pigs and chickens, you must feed your own mules and cattle.

"'How?' the farmers would ask. 'We can't do these things without money, and we can't do them without some instruction in economical methods.'

"'I'll teach you,' said the agricultural college, and the experiment stations, and the county farm advisers, all of which agencies were co-operating with us.

"'I'll lend you the money,' said the banker.

"After the campaign had been going for a year, Arkansas was raising $33,000,000 worth of the food and feed which she had been importing, and in addition was raising more cotton than before, and was moving not less than $12,000,000 of products through the St. Louis trade gateway.

How Missouri Can Profit

"Missouri, in some sections, is highly developed agriculturally, but not more so than Iowa, and a survey of Iowa has shown an opportunity for a vast increase in farm production, by means within easy reach, and with proper use of co-operation.

"One of Missouri's big production possibilities is in the development of the 8,900,000 acres of cut-over or logged-off timber lands. Another is the 2,439,600 acres of alluvial land, richer than that of the Nile Valley, awaiting reclamation by drainage. This draining land would furnish 40-acre farms for 61,000 families, and would yield crops worth, at pre-war prices, more than $170,000,000 a year.

"The Production Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce is going to co-operate with all the agencies it can find—the Federal Department of Agriculture, the State University and College of Agriculture, all the schools and colleges, County Superintendents of Schools, chambers of commerce and commercial clubs, women's clubs, civic and child welfare associations.

"Missouri has diversified farming now, and we will not have to preach diversification as we did in Arkansas, though we will find plenty of chances for enlarging production in farming and dairying. But I am going to bear down, right now, on good roads and education.

"Missouri is thirty-second in education among the 48 states, we are told. But if you take out St. Louis and Kansas City, Missouri is not even thirty-second. It is thirty-sixth. It has 1000 school buildings without modern toilet facilities and hundreds without decent ventilation, and with a big stove in the middle of the room. In hundreds of schools the teachers are not paid decent wages.

"The boy with a high school education, at the age of 25, is worth, on an average, $1650 a year in business. The boy with only a common school education is worth only $650. We have got to bring this old State up in education, and increase human values. We must improve the acre and the boy.

Working in Five Divisions

"We are not going to run off in every direction. We are going to treat things in the order in which they come in the big cycle of affairs, and as I see it, they come in just five divisions—civics, production, industry, transportation and commerce.

"Civics comprises education, public recreation and public welfare. Production is from four sources only, fields, forests, mines and fisheries. Industry, or manufacture, is the next step, and then comes transportation, and here St. Louis is at an advantage, with the shortest haul in and the shortest haul out. Transportation is not only by water and rail now—it is by good roads and trucks. Trucks and good, hard-surface roads remove the difference between the man with a railroad switch to the door of his place of business and the man without a switch. In commerce the banker comes first, then the wholesaler and the retailer.

"And this is all there is to our program—to go into our trade territory and increase producing power. Of course, when we do that, we are increasing buying power. We are going in there to say, not, 'How can I make money out of you?' but 'How can I make you make money?'

"If we will get to work on that line, we can have 4,000,000 people where 3,000,000 are now."

At each meeting where he speaks Baer gets his hearers to sign cards checking off the subjects, among 23 within the purview of the movement, in which they are most interested.

These cards will furnish an index of men available for the work which the Production Bureau is undertaking. Such lists will be made throughout the State, as well as in St. Louis.

At the very beginning of its work for Missouri,

"Give the Poor Babies a Victory Year," Slogan of This Year's Milk and Ice Fund

$6000 Minimum Amount to Be Raised

Fund Formally Opens Today With Several Contributions Already in Hand—With Fewer Demands for Money and Fewer Calls on the Time of the Workers Than Last Year, Increased Efforts in Behalf of Tenement Children Are Expected.

"Give the poor babies a Victory year" is the slogan under which the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund will undertake to raise not less than $6000 for the present season.

The Fund formally opens today.

It is the expectation to considerably enlarge the work of the Fund this year. Plans for doing so have been under consideration for two years, but have been held up because of the war.

While remarkable funds were raised in 1917 and 1918—especially remarkable for the size and number of contributions by the boy and girl workers—they were not enough larger than the funds of previous years to finance what it was desired to do.

With the war over, however, and fewer demands for money and fewer calls upon the time of the workers, it is believed that the Fund should easily be increased at least $1000 over last year, when a new record was made with a Fund of a little more than $5000. Adults who were unable to assist the Fund greatly with active work last year are expected to give the children more help this year.

More Ice in Hot Weather.

One enlargement of the work which is proposed is in the matter of supplying ice to preserve the milk for the babies. An investigation last year disclosed that with higher prices for ice the piece delivered for one ice ticket was not sufficiently large to last 24 hours in the hottest weather. Such relief as was possible was given last year. This year it is the intention to double the supply of ice throughout the heated term. The Fund's ice bills last year were approximately $575 for July and $525 for August. Thus, if those two months should be hot this year the added expense under the new plan would be $1100.

The Fund wishes to increase its contribution to the St. Louis Pure Milk Commission, through which it supplies pure milk to the poor babies. The commission estimates that its expenses this year will be $2000 greater than in 1918, and the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund will help it as much as possible to carry this additional burden. The Fund desires also to assist the commission in establishing two new milk depots in districts of the city where there has been much dangerous illness among babies and young children. From these statements it will be seen that a Fund of $7000 or even $8000 could be used to advantage, and $6000 is fixed merely as a minimum to be raised.

Letter to Workers.

Although the formal opening of this year's Fund is today, the preliminary work has been going on for some time. A general letter was sent out under the date of May 15 to all workers of whom the Fund has the names and addresses. This list is by no means complete, since full lists of groups of workers are not always sent in, and sometimes merely the names without addresses are received. Then, too, in the addressing of hundreds of envelopes, the addressing companies make some mistakes, so that some workers whose names and addresses the Fund has may not have received their letters. This explanation is made that every worker may know that it was the intention to send letters to all, and that this was done as far as possible.

For any who did not receive letters, and also for the information of the readers of the Post-Dispatch, the general letter, addressed to the "Members of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice League," is quoted herewith:

For two successive years you have raised record funds to "Save the Babies."

In 1917 the total of the Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund was $5000. Last year it was $5187.56. This in spite of the many demnads for money for war purposes and other handicaps.

The war is over and this is Victory year. let us make it a Victory year for the little ones of the tenement districts.

The aim will be to raise not less than $6000 for the present season. If each group of workers will increase their last year's contributions only a little the mark named will be reached. This might be accomplished by starting to plan affairs a little earlier than usual, and giving a little more time to the sale of tickets, etc.

We feel sure that the babies can again depend upon your enthusiastic efforts in their behalf.

Yours for another record year,
THE POST-DISPATCH PURE MILK AND FREE ICE FUND.
(Fifteenth year.)

The general letter was accompanied by a circular of information to workers, one of the most important parts of which related to resuming the publication of pictures, notice of which is given in connection with this article. Quotations from other parts of the circular follow:

"Tickets—Because of many requests in previous years for tickets a blank form ticket has been prepared and will be furnished free upon application to workers giving Milk and Ice Fund entertainments this year. There are spaces for the address of the place the entertainment is to be given, and the date of

Post-Dispatch to Print Pictures of Milk and Ice Fund Workers This Year

THE Post-Dispatch will resume the printing of pictures of Milk and Ice Fund workers this year. It was obliged, regretfully, to suspend such publication last year, because of the Government's restriction upon the size of all newspapers. The situation is better now, and it is the expectation to print all good pictures of groups which may be sent in, and of groups who come to the Post-Dispatch office to have their pictures made.

Milk Fund Has No Collectors.

The Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund wishes again to call it to the attention of the public that it has no solicitors of cash contributions, and requests that it be notified immediately by telephone of any attempts at street or house-to-house collections of money in the fund's name. Cash donations properly should be sent direct to the fund in care of the cashier of the Post-Dispatch.

To prevent any possibility of dishonesty in the fund's name, the public is asked to give no money in any way or to donate any supplies to anyone claiming to be working for the fund who is a stranger. It is desired that as far as possible workers sell tickets and solicit supplies for bazars and carnivals and stands, among persons with whom the are acquainted.

GETTING ST. LOUIS AND STATE TOGETHER NEW TASK OF C. OF C.

the Production Bureau was called to aid the United States Department of Agriculture in getting 120,000 men for the harvesting of the Kansas wheat crop. This crop, worth approximately $475,000,000, must be harvested between June 10 and June 20. The pay is 50 cents an hour and up with board and lodging free.

The bureau is enrolling men at Chamber of Commerce headquarters, 510 Locust street, and is working with the Government Demobilization Bureau, at 905 Locust street, to register returned soldiers for the work. The first shipment of men is expected to leave St. Louis June 10.

"The Kansas farmer puts his whole crop into 20 days," Baer says. "If he loses, it means a loss of food for the whole country and for the world, and loss of trade for St. Louis and other cities and towns. Kansas will die if it canpot get men. The men can go north through the wheat belt and spend the summer in outdoor work, first harvesting, then threshing. It's a fine vacation proposition."

The Production Bureau was established by the Chamber of Commerce after an investigation had been made by a special committee, of which John G. Lonsdale is chairman, and by the Agricultural and State Development Committee, of which A. W. Schisler is chairman. A governing board of committees, members of which are Edward Buder, F. W. A. Vesper, M. L. Wilkinson, L. W. Childress, Duncan I. Meier, Aaron S. Rauh, Oliver T. Remmers, A. R. Anderson, E. C. Andrews, E. F. Bisbee, Benjamin G. Brinkman, George Oliver Carpenter Jr., F. B. Chamberlain, H. W. Danforth, Forrest C. Donnell, A. W. Douglas, F. W. Edlin, Aaron Fuller, W. L. Hemingway, T. L. Horn, R. F. McNally, W. S. Roberts, Harry E. Sprague and Woodson K. Woods.

INTIMATE STUDY OF GRANDMOTHER OF RUSSIAN REVOLUTION

over Europe. And if in Europe, all over the world.

"America should understand that Russia is rich in resources as yet unexploited. Russia will not remain in debt.

Her Plan for Russian Regeneration.

Her plan is to organize industrial settlements where practical instruction in trades and crafts that will develop and make the most of the natural resources of the country will be given, and especial appeal is made to women to take part in this work. Many powerful American names appear upon the letterhead of the Breshkovsky Relief Fund, 381 Fourth avenue, New York. People can keep informed of her progress, she said, by reading "Struggling Russia," a weekly to which she is a contributor, and which is issued from the Woolworth Building, New York.

"If American women would come to Russia and instruct us in some of the many crafts by which they are independent in their country, in sewing on power machines, in weaving, spining, shoemaking, in nursing, sanitation, cooking, typewriting, bookkeeping, in everything they do so well, they would find Russians eager to learn. They would not find the comforts and conveniences to which they are accustomed but these deficiencies in a measure would be made up for by the hospitality they would find in Russia..

"I love your American order," she exclaimed with enthusiasm, "your good habits, your discipline. I would like to see these qualities imparted to my people. We have great women in Russia, women of great intellects and courage. In our revolutionary movements women's wits and intellects have been as active as men's. Women soldiers led the men when they faltered on the battlefield. The women's battalion fought bravely and honestly so long as there was any use in their fighting. We have women in the professions, women engineers, women lawyers, women architects, women merchants, and we have women working alonside men at hard manual labor. But our best women have no gift for organization such as your women have. They lack that sense of order and system and discipline your women have. Yet, being easily swayed and being simple, trusting, appreciative people, American women would find in them a ready response and a fertile field for their activities."

Her Admiration for American Women

She said she already had observed or experienced in her country the effect of interest manifested by American women. "When I was in prison excellent American ladies would write me letters and I can tell you when read by the guards they had great effect in moderating their treatment of me personally."

She said she felt more justified in appealing to American women upon this tour than upon the tour she made of this country 15 years ago.

"I find a great advancement has taken place among and toward your women here. You have almost equal suffrage. The war relief work has developed women. The women who went to France withstood hardships I did not think they would endure. It is such women who, I believe, will see in Russia their next problem and will come to our aid."

1,152,427 Home From Overseas.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Demobilization of the army has now returned more than 60 per cent of officers and men to civil life, it is announced officially. The total, including partial reports to date, is given as 2,215,161, of whom 112,553 were officers. Sailings from overseas since Nov. 11 last have totaled 1,152,427.

Healthy Vegetables Make Healthy People

If you expect to be eating crispy lettuce, radishes and onions of your own raising—if you want a full crop of luscious, meaty tomatoes for slicing or canning—

Or if you are eagerly looking forward to harvesting solid, heavy heads of cabbage or cauliflower—tightly filled pods of sweet, juicy peas or tender green beans—

Don't let the bugs and worms get a foot hold in your garden. You plant your garden—spend money for seeds, and time to cultivate it—so why let bugs and worms reap the harvest?

Let Wolf's GARDITE "Guard your Garden." It's a highly concentrated powder preparation, compounded of the best known chemicals for the prevention and extermination of destructive garden pests.

Wolf's GARDITE is non-poisonous and can be dusted freely on such table vegetables as tomato or cabbage plants, melon or cucumber vines or any other plant or flower without fear of poisoning.

Get a sifter top can of Wolf's GARDITE today—dust it on and around your plants after a dew, rain or sprinkling. The fine powder adheres readily to foliage and sifts down between the leaves instantly killing all destructive vermin.

Have a can of Wolf's GARDITE handy—use it often, it's GUARANTEED.

"Month-End" Events of Unusual Interest

The extraordinary preparations we have made throughout the institution for the last five selling days of this month of May will mark a period of merchandising that will be long remembered by the shopping public of the city of St. Louis. Today's Globe-Democrat and Republic contain additional planned events it will be to your interest to see. There are many events planned that are not mentioned in our advertisements.

This month we are already doing the largest business o f any month of May, but we are determined to make it the largest in our history by a big margin, and the number of special events scheduled for the last five days, beginning tomorrow, will play a big part in bringing about this enormously planned increase for this month. Do not fail to take advantage of the many money-saving opportunities offered each day during this event.

All Charge Purchases made the balance of This month will appear on June Bills.

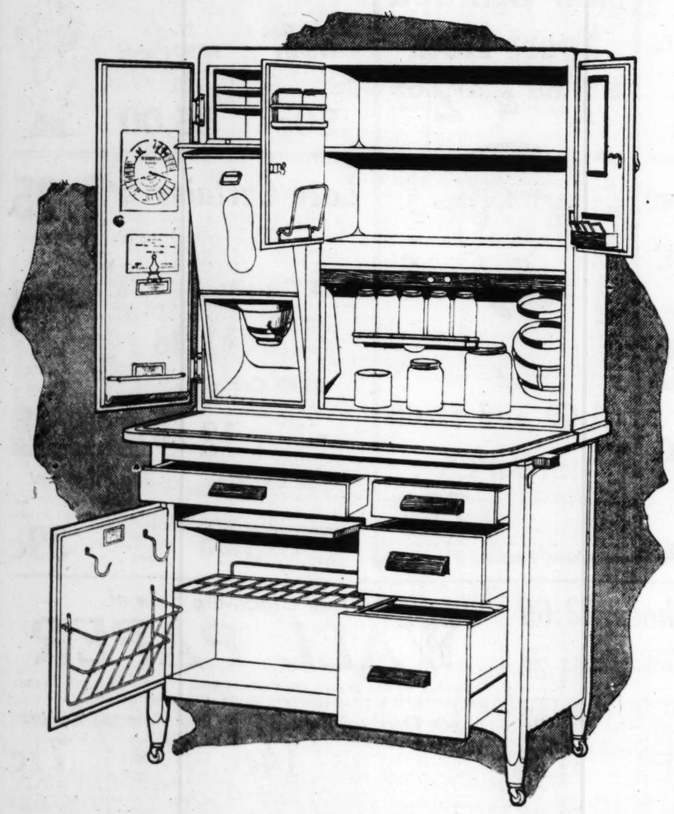
A Tremendous Sale of 3 Carloads of the White Enamel

"Kitchen Maid" Kitchen Cabinets

Begins Tomorrow Morning in the Basement Salesroom



For this Great Showing we have given over nearly a quarter of a block in our Basement Salesroom, because we could not display such a tremendous quantity in our regular House-furnishing Department—but remember—this is not a sale of Basement Merchandise, but a sale of the best Kitchen Cabinets you can buy.

Three carloads of Kitchen Cabinets is a very large quantity and this great purchase makes this extraordinary sale possible.

We have thoroughly examined and gone into the merits of the "Kitchen Maid" Cabinet and have found that it fully measures up to the Vandervoort Standard of Quality; that is why we recommend it—we believe it will give you the service you expect of it—and that it is a splendid investment at even the regular price of $58.50.

The Regular $58.50 "Kitchen Maid" Kitchen Cabinets for $47.50

Kitchen Cabinets bought during this sale on charge account will appear on June bills.

The "Kitchen Maid" is a revolutionary step in cabinet making; it cuts out all waste; not a grain of sugar, flake of flour, or crumb of baking it "houses" is lost. All keep perfectly—and are kept perfectly clean—it's the cleanest cabinet ever constructed and the easiest to keep clean.

There are so many good things that we could say about the "Kitchen Maid" Cabinet that we could write several pages—but the best way to convince yourself that you need one, is to come and see these beautiful clean cabinets and let us explain its many advantages—if you have beeu thinking of buying a Kitchen Cabinet—do so TOMORROW—don't delay.

Every Housewife in St. Louis Wants One of These Beautiful White Enamel Cabinets

This wonderful new cabinet establishes the highest standard of sanitation ever attained in kitchen cabinet making. Its superior conveniences spell greater freedom from kitchen service.

All surfaces of the "Kitchen Maid" are smooth as polished marble. There are no panels, in the doors or sides. The most sanitary and easily cleaned surface that ever covered a kitchen cabinet; it stays free from dirt and remains beautiful throughout years of severe service.

A "Kitchen Maid" Kitchen Cabinet is a splendid investment—not an expense—not a luxury. The more you have to watch costs, the more you need this wonderful cabinet—it will help you to save time, money and many steps every day.

There are many real good reasons why you should buy this "Kitchen Maid;" aside from being pure white enamel throughout—there are many more conveniences and ways of reducing work unknown to all other makes—many reasons why you'll prefer the "Kitchen Maid" after you have seen it.

Five Exclusive Features Found Only in the "Kitchen Maid" Cabinets

1. The Smooth Surface Exterior
2. The Rounded Interior Corners
3. The Sanitary Flour Bin
4. The Automatic Sugar Container
5. The Air-Tight Pastry Compartment

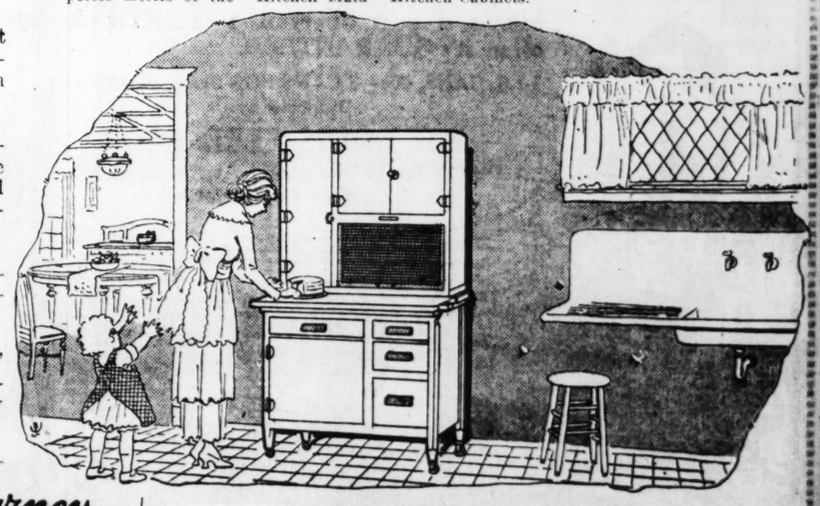
Come in tomorrow and let us demonstrate these features and explain the many superior merits of the "Kitchen Maid" Kitchen Cabinets.



Only This Week You Can Buy the $58.50 "Kitchen Maid" for $47.50

After this week the regular price will prevail, therefore we urge you to take advantage of this opportunity now—don't delay.

OLIVE AND LOCUST FROM NINTH TO TENTH

Let the "Kitchen Maid" Be Your Kitchen Aid.

Concerning an Embarrassment of Orders

During the war, with our tire production curtailed and thousands of customers' orders standing unfilled on our dealers' books, we found encouragement in thinking of the coming time when supply would equal demand.

With the armistice we set about the immediate readjustment of our factories, and laid down for them a tire production schedule by far the heaviest they had ever known.

That schedule is now in being—by dint of great labor we have even surpassed it—last week's output, for example, averaged the enormous figure of 24,536 finished tires per day.

Yet notwithstanding our most careful preparations, made in anticipation of an unprecedented business, our passenger car tire volume is still insufficient fully to meet all existing demands.

There is for us a considerable element of embarrassment in so great and growing a preference on the part of the public for Goodyear Tires, and in our own failure properly to satisfy this preference.

In one sense we feel it to be a reproach to our own estimate of Goodyear Tires' popularity, which, although we knew it to be great, has now exceeded anything we had imagined.

There is the regret on our part, too, at our inability to serve immediately all the people who look to us for service, since we do appreciate their friendship and their custom.

But so far it has been not humanly possible for us to produce tires of standard Goodyear quality in the volume all these people demand.

There are probably many Goodyear Service Station Dealers that have full stocks of Goodyear Tires; on the contrary there are many others whose stocks are very low.

Should you encounter one of the latter and be unable to have your wants filled there, we ask you to absolve that dealer of any fault in the matter whatsoever.

The fault, if there is a fault, is entirely our own, in our temporary inability to build enough Goodyear Tires to satisfy public needs.

Night and day we are pushing the Goodyear factories to remedy this condition, in an endeavor to make Goodyear Tires as easy to get as they are worth while to use.

HOW SILESIANS FEEL TOWARD ANNEXATION

Correspondents Impressed With Opposition of People to Becoming Part of Poland.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, May 24.—Advices from Silesia regarding the attitude taken by the population toward annexation by Poland is calling forth much comment in London. It must be made clear, however, that the German army referred to in dispatches is not a new feature of the situation. This army has been mobolized for more than two months and has been distributed along the Polish and Czecho-Slovak frontiers, where constant disputes have taken place, accompanied by a number of skirmishes. It is composed entirely of volunteers and is commanded by Field Marshal von Hindenburg.

Practically the whole population of 2,000,000 or more is decidedly opposed to incorporation in the Polish republic. George Renwick writes in the Chronicle:

"Nobody I could find really wants to fight, but all feel that they must. Breslau, Koenigsburg and the East have saved Germany before. Perhaps they can do a little in that direction again, is the frequently expressed consolation. Among the working classes the feeling is particularly bitter. Herr Lichtenstein, the Independent Socialist leader, hates this flame up of national feeling. 'But,' he adds, 'who can blame the workers? Here in Germany they have an eight-hour day and wages are rising. There are sick insurance benefits and our unions are recognized. If Upper Silesia is handed over to the Poles they feel that they will lose all these. In addition, they fear Bolshevism.'

"Indeed, all political parties have dropped their antagonism and stand together to face this totally unexpected turn of events. I also talked to many workers of Polish extraction, but not one could I find who wished the region to be turned over to Poland. I have delt with this because I believe that the Upper Silesian question contains for all of Europe potentialities of serious trouble and that the case from this side ought, late as the hour is, to be stated impartially as I have tried to do with a view to the avoidance of at least one menace which threatens Europe's tranquility."

When the correspondent entered Silesia in March he was struck immediately by the contrast with other parts of Germany. Everywhere the people were hard at work tilling the soil and putting the factories in shape to resume business while mining was in full blast despite the strike troubles. There was none of the political unrest or uprisings which obtained in other sections of the country. The first sign of Bolshevist activities in Silesia came upon the heels of the announcement of the possibility of the cession of Upper Silesia to Poland, which previously had not been dreamed of by the populace. The correspondent covered the region pretty well, visiting Breslau, Oppeln, Meisse, Kattowitz, Beuthen, Lamsdorf and other centers and found the sentiment overwhelmingly German.

It is a rich country—one of the richest in Germany—and the inhabitants were working with just the sort of spirit needed to pay the indemnities demanded by the Entente.

Seeking Union With Finland.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The Olonets in western Russia are seeking a union of their territory with Finland, according to Halsingfors report to the Swedish press transmitted today to the State Department.

BE CAREFUL WHAT YOU WASH YOUR HAIR WITH

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—ADV.

Returning Soldier Is Slain.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ISABEL, Ok., May 24.—Six hours after his return home from France, where he served 17 months on the firing line, Carroll Sargent was killed last night. He was assassinated when returning from his first visit to Marion Woods, daughter of a merchant, to whom he was engaged when in the army. Bethel Kicaird, a rejected suitor, is under arrest.

Prof. C. A. Ellwood to Speak.

Prof. Charles A. Ellwood, instructor in sociology at Missouri University, will speak on "Bolshevism and Democracy" at the Open Forum, 119A North Thirteenth street, this evening. Those who arranged the meeting announced that Ellwood is opposed to Bolshevism, and that he was induced to come to counteract the favorable impression of Bolshevism that has resulted among radical thinkers here from recent speeches by Raymond Robins and others, and to cure the bad impression left by some speakers who have attacked the Soviet Government.

OUR DAILY LIST OF BARGAINS

A BETTER PLAYER FOR LESS MONEY

Some rare bargains in new and slightly used 88-note Player-Pianos, Upright and Grands. Every Piano we sell is thoroughly guaranteed, used ones as well as new ones, and when we advertise a bargain, it is here for sale at the price advertised. Here are a few of the bargains:

No. 1—WURLITZER DE LUXE PLAYER, with patent double sounding board, brand-new, $775. We include $10 worth of music and a beautiful bench. There are four reasons for the musical value of the Wurlitzer Double Sounding Board. They are as follows:

The Staccato Tones are developed keen and clear.

The Legato Tones are developed with more resonance.

The Chord Tones are developed more harmoniously.

The Scale Tones are developed more uniform in quality.

Be sure to see this Player before buying. Terms can be made to suit each purchaser.

No. 2—$475 buys a fine oak case, 88-note STRAD PLAYER, with $10 worth of music and bench. Fully guaranteed. Case is very plain and is well worth the money.

No. 3 — A BRAND-NEW KINGSTON PLAYER, 88-note, for $495. Worth $100 more; greatest value on earth. Our slogan is: "A Better Player-Piano for Less Money." Make us prove it. We include $10 worth of music and a beautiful bench. Cash or monthly payments can be had.

No. 4—AUTOPIANO, 88-note, mahogany case. An excellent purchase for $295. A fine opportunity. Price very low; see at once. Cash or monthly payments.

No. 5—GABLER UPRIGHT, specially priced at $125; in fine condition. Easy payments.

No. 6—WURLITZER—APARTMENT GRAND, now only $495; $700 style, in splendid condition; fine bargain. Cash or time.

No. 7—H. P. NELSON PLAYER, $345; plain mahogany case; almost new; an excellent bargain. Terms to suit.

No. 8—STERLING UPRIGHT. Could not be told from new. A special at $145. Fully guaranteed. Easy payments.

No. 9—$285. EMERSON PLAYER. A fine walnut case. This Player has been used but very little. It is a fine bargain. We include $10 worth of music and bench. Terms made to suit.

No. 10—Slightly used mahogany KINGSTON PLAYER, has been used for a short time only; in excellent condition. Big bargain, $35. $510 worth of music and bench.

No. 11—$325 buys a slightly used CRANFORD & CO. PLAYER, mahogany case. This was taken in trade on a Wurlitzer Player; fine bargain; music and bench included. Terms $3 weekly.

No. 12—KINGSTON PLAYER—A beautiful 88-note oak case; just as good as new, only slightly used. $10 worth of music and bench. Price, $395. Cash or monthly payments.

No. 13—AUTOPIANO; full 88-note, mahogany case; only $295. Exceptional value; has sweet tone; looks like new. Terms, $2.50 weekly.

No. 14—KINGSTON, mahogany case; excellent bargain; $295. Used for demonstrating. Sweet, mellow tone; latest design. Case could not be told from new. Big snap. Terms to suit.

No. 15 — STEINWAY PLAYER, $420. Ebony case; slightly used; has a very rich tone.

No. 16—APOLLO; mahogany case; $385; full 88-note; good condition throughout. Small terms acceptable.

No. 17—Mehlin & Sons' Inverted Grand Player-Pianos are the only Inverted Grand Player-Pianos offered by any manufacturer. Owing to the fact that Player-Pianos are used considerably more than the regular pianos the Inverted Grand construction is of inestimable value. Price $950. We include $15 worth of music and a bench to match. Terms can be had.

No. 18 — KIESELHORST UPRIGHT, $125; mahogany case; has seen but very little usage; very good tone; fine condition. Terms $5 per month.

No. 19—HARDMAN UPRIGHT, ebony case, $95. A very good piano for a child to take lessons on. It is only slightly used. Terms to suit. See opposite page.

RED CROSS OFFICIALS TO TELL OF PEACE PLANS

Conferences to Be Held During June at St. Louis, Wichita and Dallas.

The peace program of the American Red Cross will be outlined to directors of the Southwestern Division by officials of the national organization at three conferences, the first to be held in St. Louis June 16, the second at Dallas, Tex., June 18, and the last at Wichita, Kan., June 20.

Dr. Livingston Farrand, chairman of the Central Committee of the Red Cross, and Willoughby Walling, vice chairman of the committee, both of Washington, will attend the conferences. George W. Simmons, director of the Southwestern Division, now en route to St. Louis from Russia, where he headed a Red Cross mission to Siberia, and Alfred Fairbank, acting director of the division, will also attend.

Dr. Farrand recently returned from Europe, where he assisted in the formation of the League of Red Cross Societies, the purpose of which is to unify the Red Cross organizations of the world in a systematic effort to anticipate, diminish and relieve misery caused by disaster and disease.

War Relief Work.

The work of the American Red Cross will not slacken until all the misery caused by the war has been overcome, is the advance message of Dr. Farrand, and while the Red Cross of each nation has its part to play in the new work, a large proportion of the relief work must be undertaken by the American organization.

The most interesting and touching situation now confronting America and the American Red Cross, according to Dr. Farrand, is that in the Balkans and Eastern Europe. The diseases which are likely to spring up among a people ill-nourished and with poor sanitary surroundings are beginning to ravage Eastern and Southeastern Europe. Typhus fever is spreading at an alarming rate.

The main item in the peace program of the Red Cross will be to use the membership of 19,000,000 as machinery for the protection of public health. It has been decided to continue the Junior Red Cross, with its 9,000,000 members, and to encourage them to help the children of Europe to obtain an education and fit themselves for their life work.

The relief of distress and disease, the prevention of accidents and problems of motherhood, child welfare and sanitation will be important items on the program. First aid will be taught, together with home care of the sick. The Red Cross will also be prepared to alleviate distress at points where there is no other social agency.

Red Cross League Objects.

The objects of the League of Red Cross Societies as formally set forth in the articles of association are:

1. To encourage and promote in every country in the world a duly authorized voluntary National Red Cross organization, having as purposes the improvement of health, prevention of disease and mitigation of suffering throughout the world, and to secure the co-operation of such organizations for these purposes.

2. To promote the welfare of mankind by furnishing a medium for bringing within reach of all peoples the benefits to be derived from present known facts, and new contributions to science, and medical knowledge and their application.

3. To furnish a medium for coordinating relief work in case of great national or international disasters.

The original members of the League are to invite the Red Cross societies of other nations to join, each organization to preserve its national autonomy and all to remain constitutient members of the International Red Cross of Geneva. The control of the League will be by general council, composed of representatives of all members of Red Cross societies meeting at designated periods. A governing board of 15 members will be chosen by the general council to direct the affairs of the League in the intervals between such meetings.

Henry P. Davison of New York, formerly chairman of the War Council of the American Red Cross and since January chairman of the Committee of Red Cross Societies which formulated the League's program, is chairman of League's first Board of Governors.

LAWN FETE FOR SOLDIERS

Dance Thursday Evening at Home of D. R. Francis.

A lawn fete and dance for returned soldiers, sailors and marines will be given next Thursday evening by the girls' clubs affiliated with the Community Service League of the War Camp Community Service Organization, Girls' Division, at the residence of Ambassador and Mrs. D. R. Francis, Maryland and Newstead avenues. The grounds will be illuminated and a dance floor will be erected on the lawn. In addition to the especial friends of the girls who belong to the clubs, a certain number of invitations have been issued to men at Jefferson Barracks, the Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus, and the convalescent hospitals, and to the hospital nurses.

A community sing, folk dancing by club girls, numbers by the Woodrow Wilson Choral Club, and a playlet by the Century Girls Club, are on the program.

Mrs. Clarence V. Beck is chairman of the entertainment committee of the Girls' Division, War Camp Community Service; Mrs. B. F. Bush is honorary chairman of the board; Mrs. George A. Bass, chairman, and Miss Teresa Fields, director of the division.

MAKING SOIL SURVEY IN ST. LOUIS COUNTY

Samples to Be Analyzed by Missouri University Will Determine Character and Possibilities.

Samples of St. Louis County soil are being obtained for chemical analysis at the State University at Columbia, Mo. When the analysis is completed a report giving an account of each soil type, including a description of the characteristic appearance, topography, character of subsoil, etc., a summary of the crop uses to which it is put, the method of handling the soil and a general statement of the range of crop production and its fertilizer needs, will be published for free distribution by the United States Bureau of Soils, Washington, D. C., and the Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station, Columbia, Mo.

Work to Take Five Months.

The work necessary to making the soil survey was begun May 5 and will be completed in about five months. H. H. Krusekopf of Columbia, soils expert in charge of the field work in the soils department of the State University, is in charge of the work in the county. He is being assisted by D. B. Pratapas of the United States Bureau of Soils.

In addition to being of great value to those farming in St. Louis County the report of the survey is expected to induce other farmers to locate in the county.

The St. Louis County Farm Bureau is given credit for bringing about the survey. County Agent Kinzy took the matter up with Prof. M. F. Miller, head of the soils department at the State University, and later, on Feb. 10, at the conclusion of the mass meeting of farmers held in Clayton to name officers of the Farm Bureau for the year, an application was circulated among the Farm Bureau members requesting that the survey be made as soon as possible.

From the soil survey reports the individual farmer may learn the relationship of the soil upon his own farm to the soils in the immediate neighborhood and to the soils in other parts of the county. He may thus observe and study understandingly the methods and results obtained under the most favorable conditions by successful farmers upon those soils.

Value of Reports.

The reports will be a valuable reference for the Experiment Station and the County Agricultural Agent in answering the thousands of inquiries that come to them annually. In this State all experimental work with fertilizers on soils and of variety tests of crops is carried on with reference to soil types. Thus, it has been found that by the use of phosphate fertilizer on wheat on the gently rolling brown soil, which is extensively developed in St. Louis County, the annual yield has been increased six to nine bushels per acre.

Another value of the soil survey is that it gives those who are growing specialized truck or farm crops an idea as to where they may find these same soils in their own community or elsewhere in the State should they desire to extend their operations or move from one section to another.

One of the most important provisions of the Federal farm loan bill is that all loans be based on the productive capacity of the soil. The soil survey reports, together with auxiliary publications, are the only source to supply this information.

LEAGUE CONVENTION ON MAY 30

Taft to Address Missouri and Kansas Meeting at Kansas City.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 24.—From every section of Missouri and Kansas on May 30, delegates and delegations will assemble here for the league of nations convention. Arrangements are being made by the joint Missouri and Kansas committee to seat 20,000 delegates in Convention Hall for the night session.

The big night meeting will be presided over by ex-President William H. Taft, who will deliver the principal address. Mr. Taft is scheduled to speak in the afternoon at Topeka.

Throughout Decoration day demonstrations will be held in different parts of the city. A meeting for the women of Missouri and Kansas who will attend the convention has been arranged, at which Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, honorary president of the American Woman Suffrage Association, will speak.

John H. Walker, past president of the United Mine Workers of America, will address some 5000 union labor delegates from throughout the Southwest.

"Y" GIRL GOES BACK TO FRANCE

Miss Florence Putnam Was Called Home by Death of Father.

Miss Florence Putnam, daughter of the late John W. Putnam of 758 Clara avenue, St. Louis, Mo., has returned to France. She entered the overseas work of the Y. M. C. A. last August, coming back to this country in January. She had been in the work at St. Nazaire and had she not been called home by the death of her father, would have been put in charge of the equipment for that large region. She will be abroad about six months.

Strawberry Festival at Blind Home.

The annual strawberry festival at the Blind Girls' Home, 5235 Page boulevard, will be held Wednesday from 2:30 to 10 p. m. A special invitation is extended to returned soldiers.

OUR DAILY LIST OF BARGAINS

A BETTER PLAYER FOR LESS MONEY.

Some rare bargains in new and slightly used 88-note Player-Pianos, Uprights and Grands. Every Piano we sell is thoroughly guaranteed, used ones as well as new ones, and when we advertise a bargain, it is here for sale at the price advertised. Here are a few of the bargains:

No. 20—Mehlin & Sons' Inverted Grand Player-Pianos are the only Inverted Grand Player-Pianos offered by any manufacturer. Owing to the fact that Player-Pianos are used considerably more than the regular pianos the Inverted Grand construction is of inestimable value. Price $950. We include $10.00 worth of music and a bench to match. Terms can be had.

No. 21—H. P. NELSON—A beautiful 88-note mahogany case; just as good as new, only slightly used. $10.00 worth of music and bench. Price, $345. Cash or monthly payments.

No. 22—$425 buys a fine oak case, 88-note WURLITZER PLAYER, with $10 worth of music and bench. Fully guaranteed. Case is very plain and is well worth the money.

No. 23 — A BRAND-NEW KINGSTON PLAYER, 88-note, for $495. Worth $100 more; greatest value on earth. Our slogan is "A Better Player-Piano for less Money." Make us prove it. $10.00 worth of music and a beautiful bench. Cash or monthly payments can be had.

No. 24—AUTOPIANO, 88-note mahogany case. An excellent purchase for $295. A fine opportunity. Price very low; see at once. Cash or monthly payments.

No. 25—SCHILLING UPRIGHT, specially priced at $125; in fine condition. Easy payments.

No. 26 — WURLITZER — APARTMENT GRAND, now only $495; $700 style; in splendid condition; fine bargain. Cash or time.

No. 27—NEWBY & EVANS PLAYER, $340; plain mahogany case; almost new; an excellent bargain. Terms to suit.

No. 28—SCHILLER UPRIGHT. Could not be told from new. A special at $245. Fully guaranteed. Easy payments.

No. 29—$285, EMERSON PLAYER. A fine walnut case. This Player has been used but very little. It is a fine bargain. We include $10 worth of music and bench. Terms made to suit.

No. 30—Slightly used mahogany KINGSTON PLAYER. Been used for a short time only. In excellent condition. Big bargain, $495. $10 worth of music and bench.

No. 31—$325 buys a slightly-used CRANFORD & CO. PLAYER, mahogany case. This was taken in trade on a Wurlitzer Player; fine bargain; music and bench included. Terms $3 weekly.

No. 32—WURLITZER DE LUXE PLAYER, with patent double sounding board; brand new, $775. We include $10 worth of music and a beautiful bench. There are four reasons for the musical value of the Wurlitzer Double Sounding Board. They are as follows:

The Staccato Tones are developed keen and clear.

The Legato Tones are developed with more resonance.

The Chord Tones are developed more harmoniously.

The Scale Tones are developed more uniform in quality.

Be sure to see this Player before buying. Terms can be made to suit each purchaser.

No. 33—AUTOPIANO; full 88-note, mahogany case; only $295. Exceptional value; has sweet tone; looks like new. Terms $2.50 weekly.

No. 34—STARCK UPRIGHT; walnut case; excellent bargain, $275. Used very little. Sweet, mellow tone; latest design. Case could not be told from new. Big snap. Terms to suit.

No. 35 — STEINWAY PLAYER, $420. Ebony case; slightly used; has a very rich tone.

No. 36—APOLLO; mahogany case, $295; full 88-note; good condition throughout. Small terms acceptable.

No. 37—HOWARD, $255, mahogany case; has seen but very little usage; very good tone; fine condition. Terms $5 per month.

No. 38—KRAKAUER UPRIGHT, mahogany case, $135. A very good piano for a child to take lessons on. It is only slightly used. Terms to suit.

DRY GOODS MEETING OPENS HERE TUESDAY

Feature of National Convention Will Be $100,000,000 St. Louis Market Sale.

The annual spring convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association will begin Tuesday at Hotel Statler and continue over Thursday. It will be the first of that body's meetings in this city, Chicago having heretofore been its convention city, with New York its headquarters. The coming to St. Louis is due to enforced recognition of the fact that this city occupies conspicuous rank as a manufacturing and wholesale dry goods center.

Visiting dry goods merchants and buyers, thousands of whom are expected, are to be adequately entertained, arrangements for which are in the hands of the St. Louis Retailers' Association and jobbers and manufacturers of dry goods lines. The latter interests have planned an all-day breakfast, at which time there are to be only two brief talks, and following which the visitors are to be conducted on a tour of the city's manufacturing, jobbing and retail dry goods establishments, embracing the market as a whole. The evening of the final day will be spent at Forest Park Highlands.

A feature of the gathering will be a special "St. Louis market sale," organized by 42 buyers of the foremost wholesalers and manufacturers of numerous lines. For this incidental event, which is to extend over the entire week, it is announced that more than $100,000,000 of seasonable goods will be on the floors of the establishments, ready to ship, and on which the lowest possible prices have been placed. This special enterprise, it is stated, has been organized as a demonstration of the city's merchandising power and resources.

$150,000 ALIENATION VERDICT

Awarded Chicago Army Officer Against Sugar Man.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 23.—The affections of Mrs. Ruby M. Davies, wife of Lieut. La Verne A. Davies, U. S. A., were valued at $150,000 yesterday by a sheriff's jury, which heard a $250,000 alienation suit of Lieut. Davies against Alfred C. Harrison Jr., owner of sugar plantations in Cuba, and son of Alfred C. Harrison, a wealthy business man of Philadelphia. The defendant, who failed to defend the action and is now in Cuba, lives with his wife in this city. His sister is the Countess Karl Hoinstein.

Fare 55c round trip. All G. A. R. members will be admitted free. Moonlight dancing excursion Decoration Day night and every night thereafter at 8:30 p. m. Fare 55c.

FAMOUS METROPOLITAN JAZ-E-SAZ BAND

KEEP MISSIONARIES AT HOME, SAYS CHALDEAN

Tells City Club Audience That Their Teachings Sound Childish—No Converts in 2000 Years

A lecture at the City Club yesterday on the announced subject, "Where and What is Mesopotamia," by Raphael Emmanuel, a native Chaldean, proved to be a satirical comparison of "Christian" and "heathen" customs by the speaker, who described himself as a "benighted heathen."

"The Chaldeans' idea of America is drawn almost entirely from what your missionaries have told us," he said. "As a result, most Chaldeans think America is a holy city somewhere under the sea, where there are no saloons or child labor, and where the angelic inhabitants spend all their time expressing their devotion to God, or in climbing the Jacob's ladder that leads from America to heaven.

'Of course, our people are modest heathens. When men swim in the River Tigris they always stay six or seven blocks apart, although I found that your Christian boys and girls in New York and Chicago splash around together like a lot of frogs.

"In Chaldea we are all children of one Father, and your missionaries tell us that all should live in harmony. Imagine my surprise, on coming here, to find that you have several dozen kinds of Christians, all criticising each other, and each shouting that the others are wrong, and all kinds of political parties, each denouncing the others as a band of thieves and robbers! It is all very confucing to a poor heathen from the Orient, like me.

"When I arrived at New York your customs inspectors asked me of what nation I came. I told them I was a descendant of Abraham and Melchisadek. They inquired where I was born. I replied, 'In Mesopotamia, in the Garden of Eden,' and the inspector said, 'By gosh, I never heard of any such country.'

"Now, I find that there are many things in your country that are great and sublime—I get most of my inspiration from reading Shakspeare, Dryden and Pope—but there are some things in the Orient that you would do well to copy. For instance, you might keep your missionaries at home. It is a waste of time to send them to Mesopotamia, anyhow, for they haven't made a genuine convert in 2000 years. Our religion is so much older than yours, and has so much more basis in historical fact, that your teachings sound childish to our people."

The speaker then explained that the Chaldeans claim direct descent from Abraham, and that they worship "the God of Abraham." They have been bitterly persecuted, he said, not only by Turks and Kurds, but also by Armenians. There are about 50,000 Chaldeans under Turkish rule, he said.

In closing, he sang a love song in Armenian, and a battle hymn in Kurdish, and, on request, recited the speech which the Kaiser delivered from his palace balcony announcing the declaration of war. Emmanuel having heard the speech. He imitated the pose and gestures of the former Emperor, as he remembered them.

GREATEST SINGLE FEAT BY ST. LOUIS BOY IN THE WAR

Soon after, an own child was born to her and then a second. They are Antoinette, 14 years old, a sophomore at Yeatman High School, and Helen, 12. Mrs. Moczydlowski says as closely as she can reckon that Michael is 24 years old. He has two brothers, Steve and John, in St. Louis, she believes, but she says that Michael had had only very infrequent communication with them.

Expects to Bring Bride Home.

Mrs. Moczydlowski was asked what sort of a boy Michael was. She replied: "Just like other boys, only he was a good boy."

His foster sister, Antoinette, put in: "Yes, he scrubbed the floor and he nursed sister and I till we grew up."

The mother shook her head in assent. "Yes, he was a good boy, never went out at night and was always helping about the house."

After he finished at school he helped about the Polish printing office and then enlisted in the army. He was at Vera Cruz and went through the Mexican campaign with Pershing. After the period of his first enlistment was up, he returned and spent six months at home, reenlisting. His present enlistment will be completed in December and his letters from France talk of little but his eagerness to get back, and his loneliness.

One was written March 8 and in it he speaks of a certain French girl, Miss Olga Masson, "whom I expect to make my own." In it he tells also that he has passed his examination for commission as a First Lieutenant in the Reserve Corps. It also contains the only reference any of his letters have had to his honors. He apparently had the belief that he would have to go before Congress to explain his past as a qualification for his medal, seemingly shuddering at that prospect more than he did German machine guns. In part, the letter reads:

Lonesome for St. Louis.

"Dear Antoinette—I try so hard to speak to you across the sea. It seems all a dream, this dreadful war, but now it is over and we commence to find a little rest. I am so anxious to hear you again playing the piano. Will you play it for me? Thank you. These are my favorite pieces: 'The Rosary,' 'The Heavenly Star,' and 'The Dream that Passed.' I am a lover of sad or sentimental music.

"I do not know when I am to return, but maybe I will before my division. You know, Sis, that I am to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor and in France I am to receive the Medalle Militaire. I must appear before Congress for investigation of my past life. Are you proud of your brother Mike? I can picture you when you were a little girl and I sang you to sleep and played with you, and Helen, too. Oh, I do so often, so often think of home."

Another letter was brought in person to Mrs. Moczydlowski by a fellow sergeant of Ellis whose name she does not recall. It was written from Boden, Germany, on March 29, and again expressed his loneliness for home. In it he says:

"I am about 20 kilometers from Coblenz on the Rhine. I hope the day will come soon when I can see you. Just to see good old St. Louis would make me faint." It was signed: "Your loving son."

Asked if her son showed any signs to her of the great courage he was to display in war, Mrs. Moczydlowski replied:

"No, he was just a good boy."

Off Comes Corn In One Piece

"Gets-It" Leaves Toe as Smooth as the Palm of Your Hand.

There's only one corn remedy in the world that peels corns and calluses off like a banana peel, and that's "Gets-It." For walkers and standers, for shoppers and dancers, there's immediate relief from corn pains, and a quick finish for any corn or callus. "Gets-It" is applied in two or three seconds. There's no work, no fussy plasters, no wrapping of toes. "Gets-It" dries in a second or two. That's all. As easy to use as signing your name. The corn loosens from the true flesh and you peel it right off with your fingers while you wonder at the sight and smile. That's why "Gets-It" is the biggest selling corn remedy in the world today. Be corn-free at last. "Gets-It," the guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, the only sure way, costs but a trifle at any drug store. Manufactured by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill. Sold in St. Louis and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by Judge & Dolph Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Enderle Drug Co., Pauley Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Third National Bank

When the agreement to consolidate the St. Louis Union Bank, the Mechanics-American National Bank and the Third National Bank becomes effective at the close of business July 3, 1919, your transactions will be with the same officers who have served you in the particular bank which you favored with your business before the consolidation, and your arrangements and relationships will remain exactly the same.

In order to be very sure that the personal service which each bank has been giving to its customers will not be interrupted in any way, we have arranged to maintain intact the entire personnel as to both officers and employees of the three institutions.

The result will be that when the three banks are finally brought together the business of each individual bank will continue to be handled by the same officers of each bank who have handled that business in the past.

We believe that one of the primary factors in establishing a large banking business is the element of personal service, and we know that every officer of each of the banks will see to it that the individual customer to whom he has given his personal attention will continue to receive the same individual service.

In addition to having this same personal attention which you have had in the past from the same officers, you will be in a position to receive broader banking service because of the increased facilities of the new institution which will enable it to work to the very best advantage with all of the customers of the three banks.

For the present the three banks will continue business in their present locations without interruption.

We wish to assure you that each of us personally will appreciate your continued patronage at the individual bank of which you are now a customer.

BRAZILIAN'S ARTICLE PRAISES U. S. SPIRIT

Sebastiao Sampaio, Consul Here for Last Year, Defends Country's Idealism.

Sebastiao Sampaio, who for the last year has been Brazilian Consul in St. Louis, and formerly was a widely known Brazilian journalist, has written an article in praise of the United States for the Jornal do Commercio, of Rio de Janeiro. It has attracted much attention because of recent attacks on this country in South American newspapers.

The article defends the policy of the United States toward Mexico, praises the idealism of President Wilson and the people of the United States and gives a glowing account of the preparations and sacrifices made in helping to win the war.

Sampaio has furnished to the Post-Dispatch the following digest of his article:

"Before the war, the world was amazed at the material progress of the United States and did not understand America, did not understand the American spirit. The world did not see that each day, with each new factory, with each new business, the American people always inaugurated a new church, a new hospital, a new gymnasium, a new school, a new library, a new paper.

"Of course, after the entrance of the United States in the war in 1917 the world at first saw Wilson as the 'wizard of idealism' in his country; as a man that moved the tendencies of the nation from material development, from the dollar, from self-interest, from materialism, to a spiritual sacrifice to save civilization.

"The world was wrong. Wilson was in 1917 and in 1918, and Wilson is in 1919, exactly the exponent of the idealism of the American people; a marvelous exponent. Without the American people of today the President Wilson who won the heart and spirit of the world would have been impossible."

After reviewing the history of American ideals from the signing of the Declaration of Independence, he replies to many objections which have been put forth in South American countries to the procedures of the United States in the Spanish-American war, in Mexico, Cuba, the Philippines and the Panama Canal. He also gives a comprehensive review of the work done in increasing the army and navy and floating loans for the war in supplying food and munitions and ships for the allies. He then says:

"In 1917 and 1918 America saved Europe and in those same years Europe again discovered America. With her devotion to American idealism and with her help in the great war America has attracted to the Western Continent the attention, admiration and respect of the Old World.

"Brazil in 1917, as always, understood the United States. Immediately after the United States entered the war Brazil did likewise and the President of Brazil said that with the United States in the war it was impossible for Brazil to stay out. That was a beautiful and practical expression of the spirit of pan-Americanism.

"It would be well if Brazil, largest of the Latin-American republics, would always attempt to follow the example of the United States, in material progress and idealism."

Stewarts Surmount

High Cost—Road Delays—Exclusive Up-Keep and Constant Repairs

Save You $200 to $300—Have 600 to 700 Fewer Parts

And in 5 years no Stewart has worn out.

All these are wanted qualities in any truck. Truck efficiency is told in the reliability of its performance and in the money it saves in first cost, and in operating expenses.

No other consideration counts in the long run.

Better Transportation at Lower Cost

Look at the truck question from any angle, and to the careful buyer there is but one answer. It is reliability and what it costs. Stewart through eliminating much weight without sacrificing strength; reduces selling and repair costs.

Much of the weight is taken from the unsprung portions—the axles, driving mechanism, etc. That gives greater tire service; for driving and road shocks are absorbed through the springs.

No Wasted Power

The Stewart drive delivers 92% of the motor power to the tires. At low speeds, in starting, on rough roads, up grade and heavy pulling through sand and mud, the maximum of power is applied. It is not lost within the driving mechanism. That saves fuel. It means a longer lived truck.

More than 200 businesses in 27 countries use Stewarts. Some of the largest fleet operators have from 5 to 50 Stewarts. Their experience proves Stewart reliability, and low operating costs.

The advantage in first cost, saving you from $200 to $300 according to size truck you require should make it your choice. There is a Stewart truck for every need.

ESSEX MOTOR CARS

Whenever Talk Turns to Motors

The New Light Weight ($1395 Detroit) Car That Also Has the Qualities of Performance, Comfort, Endurance and Elegance of Large Costly Automobiles

You Will Hear About the Essex

From the start we purposely avoided making claims for the Essex. Our restraint was that of absolute confidence.

We knew it was certain to become popular and that public favor would carry its fame further and with more effect than anything that could be written about it.

Therefore, we decided to let those who tried the Essex advertise it.

Today a rapidly multiplying army of friends is giving it the most powerful advertising known—disinterested, but enthusiastic, praise from living lips. From some of them you probably already have heard about the Essex; enough to make you curious and eager to examine and ride in it.

It is interesting to hear the Essex discussed from the view-points of widely diverging types of people.

What the User of Small Cars Has to Say

For instance, the man who has always owned a small car. He is the most enthusiastic of Essex admirers. It gives him a new sensation of power and stability. He likes its complete, comfortable atmosphere. He does not hesitate to drive it over cobbled streets or rough roads. Squeaks and rattles are not annoyingly present in the Essex. He is proud of the easy way it passes the more costly and more powerful cars in traffic because of its acceleration. The big, roomy seats, the fine finish, the handsome appointments—all appeal to his pride of ownership.

Owners of Large Cars Admire Essex Economy

You will hear other men compare the fine performance of the Essex with that of large, high-priced automobiles. Certain features of Essex performance remind them of such-and-such fine car. Other points recall the gratifying behavior of other costly machines. And all are delighted with the low operating and upkeep costs.

It is because the Essex appeals to this universal love of comfort, beauty, power and pride of ownership, and brings them within reasonable economy, that it has won more friends, perhaps, than any other car ever did within the same length of time.

You will find much to admire and desire in the Essex, too. When are you coming for your demonstration?

The sides of the Marmon pressed steel frame are nearly twice the depth of the ordinary frame, yet the total weight is less.

More Strength—Less Weight

IT has become almost a habit with engineers to point to the Marmon 34 as the highest expression of the engineering that will rule the next period of automobile construction. One reason is Marmon's girder-like frame which provides great strength notwithstanding that it is much lighter than frames of conventional design.

The frame is built to the width of the body which is bolted directly to it without the use of sills. This is one important factor in obtaining low center of gravity and in preserving the equilibrium of the car even at higher speeds.

Numerous parts found in conventional construction, which add weight and nothing to the structural strength of the frame, are entirely eliminated in the design of the Marmon. The sides of the frame replace side-aprons, a rear cross member acts as the rear heelboard, steel running boards are integral frame parts, with fenders bolted to them. There are no step hangers, fender irons, or similar supports, which add nothing but weight and provide opportunities for squeaks and rattles.

As in the frame, throughout its entire structure, the Marmon 34 is a simplified, scientifically designed car—a car of the new school that is to supersede the conventional cars of today.

Christmas Festival Workers to Aid the Milk and Ice Fund

YOUNG women workers for the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival are planning to give either a dance or a card party—probably the former—for the benefit of the Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund. A preliminary meeting was held Thursday and another will be held tomorrow in the Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney auditorium (sixth floor) at 1 o'clock.

Festival workers who have not been reached by letter or telephone and may see this announcement are requested to attend the meeting.

"GIVE BABIES VICTORY YEAR," IS SLOGAN OF MILK AND ICE FUND

the affair. The use of the tickets is not compulsory, but they will be supplied to all who wish to save the expense of having special tickets printed. Any number likely to be used can be obtained, and unused ones returned.

"Buttons and Membership Cards"—The usual buttons and membership cards will be presented to all children who take part in affairs to help the poor babies. New membership cards, dated 1919, have been printed. The buttons will be of the revised design used last year.

"Placards"—Workers wishing to conduct lemonade or ice cream stands can obtain printed placards upon application. Telephone requests will bring them by mail.

"No War Tax"—The law placing a war tax on amusement tickets provides that it shall not be charged when an entertainment is entirely for the purpose of raising money to be put to purely charitable uses by a bonafide charitable organization. Persons giving entertainments, all of the receipts of which, less necessary expenses, go to the Milk and Ice Fund need not, therefore, charge a war tax on admissions. This statement is approved by the Collector of Internal Revenue in St. Louis as being a correct interpretation of the law so far as it applies to Milk and Ice Fund entertainments.

"An exception would be in the case of a theater proprietor giving a "Milk and Ice Fund Night," sharing the receipts of the night with the Fund. The usual war tax would then be charged, because only a portion of the receipts would go for charitable purposes and the remainder to a private individual, the theater owner.

"The Milk and Ice Fund no longer approves amateur entertainments in its name unless the entire receipts, less necessary expenses, go to help the babies."

FIRST LARGE SHOW BY DANCING SCHOOL

STUDENTS PLAN HOME IN "HUT"

Temporary Project Pending Erection of Building at Washington U.

Pending the erection of a students' building at Washington University, an undertaking to which organizations of students and kindred interests of the institution have pledged their endeavors, plans have been formulated for use of the "hut" on the campus recently donated to the University by the Y. M. C. A. Chancellor Hall has not formally approved the plan as yet, consideration being delayed by his illness.

The plan contemplates a governing committee of three members, under whose direction two men are to have charge of the building and derive compensation for this service from free board and lodging and operation of a concession for the sale of candies, tobacco, cigarettes and soft drinks. The main room of the hut, it is proposed, may be used by organizations of the university for public performances but not for rehearsals.

Medical School Registar Resigns.

Miss Bertha Emille Rombauer, who has been registrar at the School of Medicine of Washington University for several years, has resigned, effective at the close of the current school year, and will be succeeded by Miss Dorothy Eugenia Kremer, secretary to the registrar of the university.

Indigestion, Gas and Bloat From Acid-Stomach

An acid-stomach cannot digest food properly. Instead, the food sours and ferments and, passing into the intestines, becomes a breeding place for countless millions of deadly germs—toxic poisons they are called. These poisons are absorbed into the system and cause untold misery. So, you see, it is just acid-stomach, nothing else—that makes so many people weak, listless and unfit; saps their strength and energy, robs them of their vigor and vitality. Biliousness, bad liver, nervousness, blinding, splitting headaches, rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica—these and many other still more serious ailments often are traced to the common source—an acid-stomach.

Take EATONIC and get rid quickly of the pains of indigestion, heartburn, that horrible, lumpy, bloated feeling after eating; disgusting, belching, food-repeating; sour, gassy stomach. These stomach miseries are caused by what doctors call "Hyperacidity." It's just ACID-STOMACH. And in addition to the pains and miseries it causes, ACID-STOMACH is the starter of a long train of ailments that most people never dreamed are in any way connected with the stomach.

Pleasant tasting EATONIC TABLETS that you eat like a bit of candy, quickly put an end to your stomach troubles. They act as an absorbent—literally wipe up the excess hurtful acid and make the stomach pure, sweet and strong. Help digestion so that you get all the power and energy from your food. You cannot be well without it!

If you are one of those who have "tried everything" but in spite of it still suffer all kinds of acid-stomach miseries—if you lack physical and mental strength and vigor—begin at once to take EATONIC. Get back your physical and mental punch and enjoy the good things of life. Like thousands of others you will say you never dreamed that such amazingly quick relief and such a remarkable improvement in your general health was possible.

Your druggist has EATONIC. We authorize him to guarantee it to give you instant relief or refund your money. Get a big box of EATONIC today, it costs but little and the results are wonderful!

Portage Tire Prices Unchanged

The Portage Rubber Company believes that a generous proportion of tire users consider quality more important than price.

We began in 1911 to build tires that should honestly serve the interests of such buyers, and throughout the years that have followed, that standard has never consciously been lowered.

Portage Tires today are selling as low as they can be sold, considering the quality of materials that go into them, and the painstaking, deliberate methods prevailing in the Portage plant. Present prices allow a fair return—no more—on capital investment.

Facing widely-advertised price reductions on the part of other manufacturers, The Portage Rubber Company feels obligated to outline its own policy clearly, in ordinary fairness to a nation of car owners.

To reduce prices while maintaining present quality would involve ruinous financial loss. Reducing prices and cheapening production would mean the shattering of the very foundation stones of this business.

Neither course can be considered. Portage prices will not be cut. Portage standards remain unchanged, that we may keep the faith with those who have stood by us.

TEN APPLICATIONS FILED FOR APPOINTMENT TO COAST GUARD

Special Board of Officers to Examine Applicants to Sit at Washington University June 16.

Ten applications for appointment to the Coast Guard, embracing the former revenue cutter and life-saving services, as cadets or cadet engineers, have been received at the office of Chancellor Hall of Washington University. Examination of applicants will take place at the university June 16, before a special board of officers of the Coast Guard, provided enough of them are available to warrant the board's coming. Application blanks may be had at the Chancellor's office.

Age limits for cadets (line) are 18 to 24 years, and those for cadet engineers 20 to 25. The former class are given three years of instruction at the Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn., and upon successful completion of the course are commissioned Third Lieutenants of the Guard, a rank equivalent to Ensign in the navy and Second Lieutenant in the army. The pay of a cadet is $500 a year, plus commuted rations at the rate of 45 cents a day.

Cadet engineers are given instruction for one year at the Academy and receive $75 a month and commuted rations. Upon completion of the course at the Academy they are commissioned Third Lieutenants of engineers.

Third Lieutenants, line and engineers, receive $1700 a year and are in line of promotion.

"The Labor Situation in America Today"

Discussed by William B. Wilson, Secretary of Labor in the President's Cabinet

"Confidence Among Employers Is the Key to the Solution of Any Unemployment Problems Growing Out of Demobilization," He Declares in Defining the Duty of Every Head of a Business Concern to Get His Organization to Work on a Pre-War Normal Basis as Quickly as Possible.

Asserts That Workingmen Themselves Should Be the First to Realize the Fallacies and Industrial Poisons in I. W. W.-ism and Bolshevism, but Points Out That Capital, Too, Must Do Its Part in Convincing Labor That the Partnership Idea Is the Right One.

WHAT is the greatest problem of American labor today?

What does the future hold for the American workingman?

What is Bolshevism? What is the greatest need of the business world today? How are the manifold problems of reconstruction to be solved?

How is the unemployment problem, complicated by the return to peace-time activities of Uncle Sam's warriors, being solved?

Is America grasping her opportunities?

Can the United States hope to compete with Great Britain and other foreign nations successfully in the field of foreign trade?

These—and many other questions and problems hinging around the labor problem are answered and discussed in the accompanying exclusive article by Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson.

For the first time since the declaration of war, Secretary Wilson, upon whose shoulders have fallen heavy war burdens, enters into a lengthy discussion of the ins and outs of the labor problem.

"Confidence," he declares, "is the greatest need of the business world today. If every man engaged in business in the United States were filled with the idea that the thing for him to do is to get going, to get his establishment on at least as large and effective a basis as it was prior to the war, then our demobilizing and unemployment problems would be readily solved," asserts the Secretary of Labor.

It is Secretary Wilson who is directing the Government's activities for finding jobs for discharged soldiers and sailors, of directing the nation's immigration policy, of harmonizing the differences and narrowing the breach between labor and capital. All these matters are taken up by Mr. Wilson in the following article:

By WILLIAM B. WILSON,
Secretary of Labor.

IF EVERY man engaged in business in the United States were filled with the idea that the thing for him to do is to get going, to get his establishment on at least as large and effective a basis as it was prior to the war, then our demobilizing and unemployment problems would be readily solved.

Confidence is the great need of the business world today, and the employer who starts to build now on the promise of tomorrow will have a tremendous advantage over his competitor who holds back waiting for prices of material to fall or for wages to decline. It is the business man who proceeds now to strengthen his organization, to build up his working force, who will reap the first fruits of the revival of trade and industry that is coming. The employer who hesitates is closing his eyes to physical facts which unerringly point to unprededecented trade expansion and industrial development.

I believe there will be no more than four or six months at the most of interim between the signing of the peace treaty and our getting into regular post-war swing. I am strengthened in this belief by many considerations.

In the first place, in nearly all lines of industry and commerce there has been depletion of stocks, except those that are closely related to supplies for military purposes. The shelves are emptied and they have to be filled to their normal business weight. Then again, the supply of labor is not so ample as an offhand examination of the situation might indicate. Before the war broke out we were admitting to the United States from all nations of the world approximately 1,200,000 aliens annually, who were used for the development of our industrial enterprises.

Of this number 400,000 returned, leaving us a net gain of 800,000 every year. After four years of war we are confronted with a shortage from this source of 3,200,000 workers, because during that period the number who have gone out have equalled those who have come in.

500,000 Absorbed by Shipbuilding.

Before the war we had but a few tens of thousands engaged in shipbuilding; we now have approximately 500,000 engaged in that industry and our merchant marine program will keep our shipyards increasingly active for many years to come.

We took 4,000,000 of our workers from industry and put them in trenches and training camps. We are now sending them back to the industries, but the best that we can hope for is that 3,000,000 of them will be demobilized at the end of the calendar year. Thus there are more than 4,000,000 workers less than the usual supply under normal conditions. This shortage becomes of even greater concern when we contemplate the almost certain increase in demand.

Our workers, our wage earners, have enjoyed more remunerative pay during the war than they ever received in peace time. Due to overtime, working on Sundays and having steadier employment than customarily, they have been enabled to invest in Liberty Bonds and to lay by something for reserve. Their savings mean a tremendous amount in the aggregate added to the purchasing power of the United States.

Our farmers have been placed in a similar situation. The returns for farm products have been the highest, computed in real money, that have ever been received in the history of the world. The farmers also have extensive funds in reserve, and that reserve will be used to a very considerable degree, in equipping their farms and their households as they have never been equipped. The farmers constitute a vast potential buying power.

Then there is this great South American country that lies with its doors open waiting for us. German influence in Latin America is at an end and the vast volume of commerce that brought wealth to the ports of Germany will now be diverted to other routes. The United States will get its share of this trade.

Reconstruction Demand for Products.

Rebuilding of devastated France and Belgium will cause a heavy demand for our products. Eastern Europe holds out manifold opportunities, and sooner or later Russia and the Central Powers will enter the market for our wares. Release of trade restrictions enforced against the neutrals to the north through fear that they might become the gateway for movement of supplies into enemy countries will add another quickening impulse to our trade. All these markets of the world are open to us and the opportunities in greater abundance than ever have been known challenge the enterprise and the spirit of our leaders of industry. I believe our business men will be quick to act on the promise the future holds forth and the problems of demobilization and unemployment will disappear in the full measure of their success. It is my purpose in connection with the Department of Labor to do all that I can to establish confidence among all our people, to the end that the coming of the days of humming business activity may be hastened.

In all of the early wars of the world, in fact up until very recent times, it was generally possible for armies engaged in conflict to find means of subsistence in the countries through which they were operating. That was true from the time that Joshua overcame the enemies of Israel until Sherman made his great march to the sea. In modern warfare that is not longer possible. It has been variously estimated, and it is only an estimate, because no one has made a scientific survey to determine the facts, that it requires anywhere from six to 10 workers in the rear to maintain one soldier in the trenches. Because of that, labor became a very important factor in all of our war activities. It became necessary for us to take men and women from industries that were not considered essential and place them in industries that were considered imperative for the conduct of the war, for the production of materials necessary for our armies. With the signing of the armistice it became our task then to take those workers who had been moved from nonessential industries into essential industries and bring them back into their normal peace-time work; and that, in a general way, has come to be spoken of as reconstruction.

We usually have a considerable amount of unemployment in the United States, even during periods of industrial activity. My own judgment is that the reason for this lies in the fact that we have the highest ideals existing anywhere, and whenever you have a people with high ideals and their surrounding circumstances, there is a tendency on their part to keep moving on and on in search of the ideal, that creates for us the larger number of migratory workers in the United States. So that in our periods of industrial activity, we have in the neighborhood of a million unemployed. During the periods of industrial depression we have sometimes as high as three millions unemployed. The total now runs very close to 400,000 in the reports that we are receiving, and we are receiving reports from about one-half of the industrial establishments of the country. That means then that we have about 800,000 unemployed in the United States at the present time, the number is not in itself alarming, because it isn't greater than we frequently have during periods of industrial activity. — SECRETARY WILSON.

SECRETARY W. B. WILSON.

Our Good Fortune in Raw Material.

The term "reconstruction," as applied to post-war activities, we get from Great Britain. As early as 1916 the British War Ministry believed that they had a reconstruction question confronting them, and they appointed a committee to investigate the subject matter and report a solution of the prospective problem. But in a report made by the War Cabinet last year they very frankly admitted that there were so many phases of the situation that could not be determined until after peace had been signed that it was impossible for them to develop any working program of reconstruction until that time. But Great Britain has entirely different conditions to deal with from the situation confronting us, and she means something different and something broader when she uses the term "reconstruction" than we have had in our minds in dealing with the same problem. The British people from the beginning of the development of the modern factory system have had to depend to a very great extent upon access to raw materials for their factories. They have not had within the limits of their own country the things needed to supply the factory system of Great Britain, and they have had to go out to the colonies and to other countries to get their raw materials. That is not the case with us. Nearly all the raw materials we need in our industrial system are available in our own territory, and some that were not available at the beginning of the war have developed methods of production since the war began. The matter of raw material, therefore, is not one of our problems of reconstruction. With Great Britain a very large portion of the products of her factories have had to find a market abroad. She has been interested in her foreign trade and her foreign commerce, because foreign commerce is essential to the continuance of her industries. With us only a small proportion of our total product has been sent abroad, and in the natural order of things as they exist amongst us, we can only spare a small portion of that which we produce for foreign shipment. Whatever of access to foreign markets may be necessary for the welfare of our industries, we had already taken steps to look out for before we engaged in the war.

Looking for New Business.

The first thing needed in developing a foreign trade is to find out where the trade is to be had, and we had organized recently, but prior to our engaging in the war, a system of commercial attaches to our embassies, legations and consulates whose duty it was, and is, to locate the opportunities for foreign business, and report the same to the Department of Commerce through the Department of State. That system is in existence and will continue in existence for the purpose of advising our business men of the opportunities that may be available in foreign countries for the extension of their trade.

The next step necessary in developing a foreign trade is the furnishing of the necessary credits suitable to the country in which the business is to be done. Those who are familiar with the development of the German commerce in South American countries know that she developed her immense overseas trade there principally by virtue of the fact that she furnished for the South American countries the best system of credits suitable to their circumstances that they were able to find in any of the commercial countries of the world, and because of those credits Germany built up a wonderful trade in South America. In the passage of the Federal reserve act, a clause was included that gave for the first time in our history the banking institutions of our country the privilege, under certain restrictions and regulations, of establishing branch banks in foreign countries, by means of which we can furnish the necessary credit for the building of our foreign trade.

Our Own Shipping Problem

The next thing necessary in taking care of foreign commerce is that of shipping. Our shipping had dwindled. It had gone almost out of existence. I can remember that even up in the hills of Pennsylvania the campaign orators during our political contests spoke of the shrinkage of our merchant marine; the fact that our flag no longer floated in foreign ports; that all of our business was carried in foreign bottoms. I was so impressed with it as a landsman that when I came down to Congress, one of the questions that I turned my attention to was that of building up an American merchant marine with an American personnel. One of the bills that I succeeded in getting Congress to pass, and which, by the way, found a pocket veto on the part of President Taft, after I had secured the passage of it, was what became known afterwards as the La Follette bill, and there has been a considerable amount of misunderstanding and a considerable amount of misrepresentation as to just what the La Follette bill, or as it was known in the previous Congress, the Wilson bill, proposed to do, or what it would do, and some misunderstanding as to what it had done. My investigations of the merchant marine situation disclosed to my satisfaction that there were two very distinct reasons why our merchant marine had been driven from the seas, and the first of these reasons was that our ship owners had to buy their vessels in an American market, a protected market, prices enhanced by virtue of that protection, and yet had to utilize their vessels in free competition with the vessels built in all the countries of the world. In other words, it cost the American ship owner more for his vessel of the same carrying capacity than it cost his foreign competitor. It required the investment of a greater amount of capital to get the same business-transacting plant. That was partly remedied by some of the legislation recently passed, giving to American ship owners the privilege of American registry for certain kinds of foreign-built ships.

The Labor Question on Our Ships.

The second reason was that it cost the American ship owner more for his operating expenses than it cost his foreign competitor. It did not cost him anything more for his supplies, for his ordinary repairs, for his insurance or any of the costs of that character. It cost him more for his operating expenses because he had to pay more for his labor. He had to pay a higher rate for his seamen. An illustration in 1913-1914, before the European war came on, before the seaman's act was passed, American seamen shipping from New York to Liverpool were paid $30 per month. British seamen shipping from Liverpool to New York were paid $25 per month. British vessels trading with the Orient, with British colonies in the Orient, were able to secure foreign crews, British crews, lascars, at $8 per month, coming to American ports, while the American ship owner had to pay $30 per month to secure a crew to engage in exactly the same trade. That meant that the American ship owner was at a decided disadvantage in his operating expenses; and if was not to be expected that American capital would seek investment in American vessels where it was placed at such disadvantage in competition with the shippers of the world, when it could find more profitable investment in industries on land, so American capital drifted out of the shipping industry. The reason why the American ship owner was compelled to pay more for his seamen than his competitor was that the seamen under the maritime laws of the world under the treaty obligations that we as a nation had entered into with some 23 commercial countries of the globe, were compelled to fulfill our civil contracts as to labor. When a seaman signed the ship's articles in Liverpool and came to New York and his vessel was in a safe harbor, there was no longer the community of risk that requires that the master shall be absolute in control. If he undertook to leave his vessel and seek employment on some other vessel, we were under treaty obligations to take that seaman wherever we could find him, take him back and put him upon the vessel that he had deserted and compel him to fulfill his civil contract, something that we had never attempted to do in this country with the men who are engaged in industrial pursuits; and when a vessel came from Calcutta to New York with a crew of lascars at $8 per month, if they undertook to leave their vessel in New York and seek employment on other vessels, we used our police powers under our treaty obligations to run down those seamen, take them back on board of the vessel they had shipped on, and compel them to return at the same terms and under the same conditions as they signed for when they left Calcutta.

Sailors' Wages Same Everywhere Now

By our treaty obligations, by our own police laws, under those treaty obligations, we maintained for the shipping interests of the world outside of the United States, a labor advantage that was disastrous for our own shipping interests. What the seamen's act did do, and the principal thing that it did, was to give freedom to the seamen. It was based upon this principle; that the Constitution of the United States declares against slavery, that every man in the United States, irrespective of race or color, or previous condition of servitude, is a free man, and the principles of the seamen's law is that whenever any vessel comes into American waters under the jurisdiction of the American Government and this vessel is safe from harm, then every seaman upon it becomes a free man. It provides that those seamen shall have the right to leave their vessels when in a safe port, when they are in any port of the United States, and the effect has been what the originators and the advocates of the bill believed it would be. It came much more rapidly than they had expected it would come, but the effect has come nevertheless, and today the wage rates of the British vessels and the Norwegian vessels and the other vessels of the world, with the exception of France and of Japan, are the same wage rates that the American ship owner is paying, and that is all that American ship owner ought to ask. I have every confidence in the skill, in the energy, in the business ability of the American skipper; and I believe that if you place him upon an equality with the skippers of the other nations of the world, with his ingenuity and skill and business ability, that he will get a proper share of the business for American bottoms; and that alone would help to build up our merchant marine. But some things have interrupted and have changed the conditions since then. Our engaging in the war, the destructive submarine warfare carried on by Germany, the necessity of furnishing ships and still more ships, as Lloyd George said, turned our attention to shipbuilding operations, and as a result we now have the second largest merchant fleet in the world, already floated; and we have more vessels in the stocks under construction, soon to be launched upon the waters of the world, than any of the other countries of the globe.

"Demobilization and Remobilization"

That will furnish us, then, the third necessity of overseas trade; and with these things in our hands, already prepared for us, when our business men have reached the point where it is necessary to develop overseas trade on an extensive scale, they will find the means of vitalizing the laws we already have in existence.

So that our problem resolves itself down into the problem of demobilization and remobilization. There has been a great deal of hysteria about the question of reconstruction. We are passing through the same kind of an atmosphere that we passed through at the time that we engaged in the war. Then there was a very general fear that we would not be able to mobilize our forces with sufficient rapidity to be of assistance in the conflict. That if we could mobilize them we would be unable to train them, and if we trained them, we would be unable to carry them across the ocean because of the shortage of shipping, and if we did carry them across the seas, that they would be unable to participate in the war over there through lack of equipment; and yet when the great crisis came, when the German forces had broken through the western front and there was nothing between them and Paris but 30 miles of space, it was those same boys that we feared we could not mobilize, could not train, could not transport to France, could not equip, who stepped into the breach at Chateau-Thierry, stayed the oncoming horde of Huns, turned them backwards toward Berlin, restored the morale of the French and British forces and by the combined efforts won victory for our armies. And surely, if we can take a peace-time organization and turn it almost overnight into a great military machine, we can take a military organization and, with the same energy and the same intelligence, transform it into a peace-time machine.

About 800,000 Unemployed, He Says

If our industrial activities could be restored immediately to their pre-war magnitude, even though it might be on a post-war basis, there would be no problem of remobilization. At the time that we engaged in the war there was very little unemployment. Not any more than we normally have. We usually have a considerable amount of unemployment in the United States, even during periods of industrial activity. My own judgment is that the reason for that lies in the fact that we have the highest ideals existing anywhere, and whenever you have a people with high ideals and their surrounding circumstances, there is a tendency on their part to keep moving on and on in search of the ideal, that creates for us the larger number of migratory workers in the United States. So that in our periods of industrial activity, we have in the neighborhood of a million unemployed. During the periods of industrial depression we have sometimes as high as three millions unemployed. Since the signing of the armistice there has been a gradual increase in the number of unemployed. The total now runs very close to 400,000 in the reports that we are receiving, and we are receiving reports from about one-half of the industrial establishments of the country. That means then that we

What President Said in His Message About the Partnership Between Labor and Capital

"WE cannot live our right life as a nation or achieve our proper success as an industrial community if capital and labor are to continue to be antagonistic instead of being partners; if they are to continue to distrust one another and contrive how they can get the better of one another. Or, what perhaps amounts to the same thing, calculate by what form and degree of coercion they can manage to extort on one hand work enough to make enterprise profitable, on the other justice and fair treatment enough to make life tolerable. That bad road has turned out a blind alley. It is no thoroughfare to real prosperity. We must find another, leading in another direction and to a very different destination. It must lead not merely to accommodation, but also to a genuine co-operation and partnership based upon a real community of interest and participation in control. There is now, in fact, a real community of interest between capital and labor, but it has never been made evident in action. It can be made operative and manifest only in a new organization of industry. The genius of our business men and the sound practical sense of our workers can certainly work such a partnership out when once they realize exactly what it is that they seek and sincerely adopt a common purpose with regard to it."

TO BE WELL DRESSED A CRIME IN MOSCOW

Armenian Engineer Pictures Distress in Capital of the Bolsheviki.

By the Associated Press.

BAKU, Trans-Caucasia, March 17.—Glimpses into the fastastic life in Moscow under Bolshevik rule are given by an Armenian engineer who has arrived here from the capital of Soviet Russia. He says the people of the city live in terror of the Bolshevik Red Guard and that the former bourgeoisie have very few privileges. To be well dressed is a crime. The hated upper classes must masquerade as poorer folk whenever they go into the streets. Good clothes or furs bring down upon them the cry of "bourgeois." One word of protest or of non-submission to the ruling powers is quite sufficient to evoke the damning word, "counter-revolutionary." That means prison and sometimes death. The jails already are full of counter-revolutionaries and the Armenian says almost daily from 30 to 50 men and women are shot.

The Strasnoi monastery is now a "people's law court," where the bourgeoisie are tried and condemned for "crimes" of opposition or alleged opposition to Bolshevik rule.

The churches, he says, are safe but their valuables have been removed. Many priests have been killed or imprisoned because, after the death of the former Emperor and his family, they prayed in secret for the dead.

Only Soldiers at Theaters.

Some of the theaters are still open. The great imperial theater is used for Bolshevik meetings but in the evenings opera and ballet continue. The greatest artists have all escaped from Moscow but many good ones remain. Only soldiers go to the theaters. The bourgeoisie apparently dare not.

Most of the banks are closed. Only one bank with several branches exists. It is known as the "People's Bank of the Russian Federal Soviet Republic." Sums not exceeding 1000 rubles a month may be drawn but usually one has to pay an agent 50 to 60 per cent of his draft as a commission for obtaining it.

It is dangerous to employ any servants—a sure sign of bourgeoisie. Servants are in some cases retained secretly. But on the paper showing the number of people in the house the servants are listed as poor relatives.

The streets are filthy. Every now and then the bourgeoisie are ordered to clean their own streets, men, women and children are given spades and ordered under penalty of imprisonment to shovel filth away. As a rule the bourgeoisie have to load and carry their own supplies. No one else will work for them.

There is no gasoline for private automobiles and alcohol is used for fuel. This is stolen by the chauffeurs, mixed with water and sold as vodka for 400 rubles a bottle.

Hugh Profits for Soldiers.

Soldiers of the Red Army commandeer the peasants' stores of grain and food, give them ridiculously small prices in payment and then sell the food at huge profits. Often they visit houses on the pretext of searching for arms, take what valuables they can find and sell them in the streets. They loot, rob and even murder anyone daring to say a word against them.

The slightest offense in the army is now punished by death but when the Red soldiers are not on duty they seem to be able to do as they like with impunity. Most of the civilians who have been mobilized into the army are discontented and are awaiting the first opportunity of turning against the Bolsheviki.

There is no protection for foreigners. A decree was recently published declaring there were no longer any foreigners and that everyone living in Russia henceforth would be deemed a Russian and have to submit to Bolshevik rule. Paper money to the face value of 1,250,000 rubles is printed daily. Only two newspapers are permitted to be published, The Soviet News and the Soldier's Truth.

ST. LOUIS GIRLS AT LE MANS

Two "Y" Workers Helping to Amuse Returning Soldiers During Waiting Period.

Miss Susan Fritsch of 5475 Cabanne avenue and Miss Edith McCormick of 4522 Westminster place are with eight other Y. M. C. A. girls who, under careful chaperonage, are going from camp to camp where the American soldiers are stationed around Le Mans, France.

The camps are spread over a collection of villages with miles of mud between them. Since Le Mans is a nonleave area, the Y. M. C. A. has organized to bring some of the amusements of the leave area to the camps. The group, which is spending a month in that section, is equipped with a rolling kitchen. A vaudeville entertainment is put on at each of the villages where the soldiers are encamped.

EXCURSION FOR CHILDREN'S FUND

Money to Be Used in Aid of "Back to School" Movement.

A boat excursion will be given next Saturday for the benefit of the Child Conservation Fund which was started in St. Louis by Mrs. Charles Stix with a gift of $1500.

The National Parent and Teacher Associations are trying to make this a permanent institution and have started the "Back to School" movement here. This fund is for the benefit of those children who have to discontinue their grade-school education. The child is sent to school and the parent is provided with a weekly allowance equal to what the child could earn if working. The boat will leave the foot of Washington avenue at 1:30 p. m. and return at 5 p. m.

FRANCE RELIGHTS FURNACE

LONGWY, France.—Louis Loucheur, minister of reconstruction, relighted the blast furnace in the Senelle factory at Maubeuge, the first to be reopened in liberated territory in Northern France.

Albert F. Lebrun, minister of blockade and invaded regions, and many men prominent in industrial life in France were present.

Whistling Solo at Bible Class.

Miss Hedwig Meyer will render a whistling solo at the entertainment of the Evangelical Bible classes Tuesday evening at Swiss Hall, Arsenal street and Iowa avenue. A cast under the direction of Miss Mabel Fisher will produce two farces, "Neighbors" and "A Twice-Told Tale," with special music by the Eden Seminary Orchestra. The entertainment is for the benefit of the young people's work of the Evangelical Sunday schools and churches of the city.

Tendency to Constipation?

USE THIS LAXATIVE!

Dietitians advise a "careful diet," but that is troublesome to most people; physical culturists advise "certain exercises," which is good if one has both the time and the inclination. Doctors advise diet and exercise and medicine. The question is, shall it be a cathartic or purgative medicine? Or a mild, gentle laxative?

Thousands have decided the question to their own satisfaction by using a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known to druggists as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. A small dose gives a free, easy movement of the bowels. It is the best substitute for nature herself. In fact, since the ingredients are wholly from the vegetable kingdom it may truthfully be said it is a natural laxative.

Its positive but gentle action on the bowels makes it an ideal remedy for constipation. The dose is small, and it may be taken with perfect safety until the bowels are regulated and act again of their own accord.

The druggist will refund your money if it fails to do as promised.

PRICE AS ALWAYS

In spite of greatly increased laboratory costs due to the War, by sacrificing profits and absorbing war taxes we have maintained the price at which this family laxative has been sold by druggists for the past 26 years. Two sizes—50c and $1.00.

CIVIL ENGINEER ALSO IS AN EVANGELIST

The Rev. Mr. Horsfield, Here at Presbyterian Assembly, Is in Charge of Coney Island Work.

The Rev. T. C. Roberts-Horsfield, a delegate to the Presbyterian General Assembly from Brooklyn, N. Y., is in charge of the Coney Island "Gospel-by-the-Sea" work of the Brooklyn Evangelistic Society when he is at home, and says that in the 18 years of his connection with the work he has reached about 5,000,000 people with his evangelistic teachings. Horsfield is of English birth and is a graduate of an English college, being a mechanical and civil engineer and a successful business man, but holding the greatest affection for his church work, which takes up most of his time. He is secretary of the Reid Brass Manufacturing Co. of Brooklyn.

Horsfield told a Post-Dispatch reporter who saw him at the Odeon that he finished his college course 36 years ago and went to London to work.

"I was a country lat," he said "and came to London to take a position in the office of the Great Northern Railway Co. After I had been in London about a year I became a member of the Y. M. C. A. and there received a call to preach the gospel. One Sunday evening after our service in the big auditorium I was invited to go to a lodging house to speak to the 'down-and-outs'. It was the first time in my life that I had ever been in such a place.

"I saw the wretchedness of the men there. That night I dedicated my life to bring to these men the remedy, the cure, for such lives as they were leading."

Began Evangelistic Work.

He left the railway and began his practical evangelistic work, meanwhile remaining in business as a consulting engineer. Business friends interested him in coming to America, which he did over 30 years ago with his wife and little son and daughter. "I landed in Brooklyn," he said, "and I've been there ever since."

"I entered Christian work there," he continued, "preaching to the sailors along the docks in connection with the Life Line Mission, still working, having organized a business.

"Eighteen years ago I commenced evangelistic work on the sands of Coney Island, and during these 18 years I have personally reached no less than 5,000,000 people with the Gospel, distributing also the Bible and Gospels in 36 languages and dialects."

In addition to the Coney Island work, Horsfield carrie son the Tillary Street Rescue Mission and Gardner Memorial, in connection with a lodging house, at 14 and 16 Tillary street, Brooklyn. Lodgings are provided there for from 150 to 180 men every night of the year, described by Horsfield as the "flotsam and jetsam of the city." As a result of his various missions Horsfield says that 19 young men have entered the Christian ministry in various denominations.

Assisted by Former Bartender.

Horsfield is sometimes known as "the Coney Island Evangelist." Associated with him in that work is the Rev. Robert Rein. Rein, he said, used to be a New York City bartender and singer on the Bowery. He received his "call" when attending a mission on the Bowery, and a gentleman who became interested in him sent him to Moody Institute, Chicago, where he was ordained a minister of the Congregational Church.

Horsfield carries small pocket mirrors with him, inscribed on the back with the familiar quotation, "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Beneath this is printed, "YOU will see on the other side whom God so loved."

Dr. Lewis D. Mason, a Brooklyn physician and co-founder and generous supporter of the "Gospel-by-the-Sea," who is also a commissioner to the General Assembly, came to the assembly with Horsfield. Mason is entirely blind and Horsfield's solicitousness in caring for his friend has been remarked upon by many at the assembly. Mason is also vice president of the American Society for the Study of Alcohol and Other Narcotics. Horsfield is superintendent and secretary of the Brooklyn Evangelical Society. He is 57 years old.

NEW ROUTING OF NATIONAL HIGHWAY INCLUDES ST. LOUIS

Burlington Way Markers Being Placed on Telephone Poles for Guidance of Auto Tourists.

Markers of the Burlington Way, a national highway running from Duluth, Minn., to New Orleans, La., which formerly ran through Illinois by way of East St. Louis, are being placed along downtown streets in St. Louis by the Automobile Club. The markers consist of orange bands painted high up on the poles of the United Railways, flanked by white bands. Each band is four inches wide.

The route followed takes tourists from the McKinley bridge west on Salisbury street to Ninth street, to Washington avenue, to Twelfth street, to Chouteau avenue, to Seventh street, to the Free Bridge. In East St. Louis the route goes over Tenth street and Illinois avenue to the Boulevard, to State street, thence to Belleville, continuing to New Orleans by way of Cairo, Ill., and Corinth, Miss.

Automobile Club officials say that some tourists used to mistake East St. Louis for St. Louis, and that the larger city was losing trade and opportunity by letting tourists go by, hence they decided to request the rerouting of the highway, the club itself marking the new portion of the route. The Burlington Way has been in existence about eight years. It runs through Minneapolis, Minn., and Cedar Rapids and Burlington, Io., entering the St. Louis district by way of Alton and Granite City.

Pillsbury's Best
You Don't Know The Best Flour

FOR all baking purposes, flour from selected hard wheat has advantages you will quickly recognize. It is dry and very rich in gluten. Because of this high quality gluten it absorbs lots of water in mixing and the dough rises so wonderfully that bigger loaves are obtained.

Then, too, the flavor is delicious and the color a rich, creamy white. In nutriment, it furnishes all that can be obtained from the most nutritious wheat in the world.

To Keep the Face Fresh, Clear, Youthful

More important than the cosmetic care of the complexion is its physical care. To keep the face clean, fresh, youthful there's nothing better than common mercolized wax. It absorbs the soiled or faded worn-out skin particles. Cosmetics simply add unwholesomeness to the complexion. That's the difference. By all means, acquire the mercolized wax habit. It's so easy to get an ounce of the wax at the druggist's, apply at night like cold cream and wash it off next morning. There's no detention indoors, the old skin coming off so gradually no one suspects you're using anything. When in a week or two the alluringly youthful, rose-like underskin is fully in view—well, you won't want, or need, a make-up complexion after that. It must be apparent that this process means complete riddance of all cutaneous blemishes, like freckles, pimples, blotches and blackheads.—ADV.

MISSOURI HEALTH CONGRESS TO BE HELD THIS WEEK

1500 Delegates Expected to Attend Conference at Springfield and Outline Statewide Program.

Fifteen hundred delegates, representing all lines of educational and public health work in Missouri, are expected to attend the Missouri Public Health conference at Springfield, Mo., this week, and will, it is expected, outline a State-wide program for instruction in personal hygiene and household sanitation in the public schools of Missouri.

The conference is to be held under the joint auspices of the Springfield Chamber of Commerce and the Missouri Tuberculosis Association and will be addressed by men and women of national fame, among whom are Col. R. R. Sayers of the United States Public Health Service; Dr. John Ritter of Rush Medical College; Mrs. Philip N. Moore of the Women's Committee, National Council of Defense; Dr. Charles F. Hatfield, director of the National Tuberculosis Association; Dr. W. S. Small of the United States Bureau of Education; Dr. George T. Palmer, president of the Illinois Tuberculosis Association and director of medicine of the National Council of Defense; Katherine M. Olmstead, secretary of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing; Dr. Owen R. Lovejoy, general secretary of the National Child Labor Committee; Dr. John M. Dodson, dean of Rush Medical College; Rev. James P. Falkner, director of the Raoul Foundation at Atlanta, Ga.; Prof. Charles A. McMurray of Peabody College; John Tombs, executive secretary of the New Mexico Public Health Association; Dr. Varelia Parker of the National Y. W. C. A. War Work Council.

A Three-Days' Convention.

The conference will open Thursday morning and will continue three days, closing Saturday night. Dr. Clyde M. Hill, president of the Springfield State Normal School, will be the chairman of the convention, although other presiding officers are scheduled for special sessions. Among these are Mrs. Philip N. Moore, Dr. James Stewart of St. Louis, Herman Pearse of Kansas City and A. A. Speer of Jefferson City. Dr. Walter McNab Miller, secretary of the Missouri Tuberculosis Association will be in general charge of the convention.

Among the prominent Missourians scheduled to take part are Gov. F. D. Gardner, Attorney-General Frank W. McAllister, Superintendent of Public Schools S. A. Baker; Dr. W. A. Clark, president of the State Board of Health; Arthur T. Nelson, president of the State Board of Agriculture; A. L. Harty, superintendent of the State Insurance Department; Miss Mary E. Perry, vice president of the State Board of Charities and Corrections; William H. Lewis, State Commissioner of Labor; Dr. W. A. Ruddy, president of the State Board of Dental Examiners; Dr. W. D. Dobson, president of the State Board of Osteopathic Registration and Examination; Miss M. A. Gillis, president of the State Nurses' Board; Dr. D. F. Luckey, State Veterinarian; Dr. A. Ross Hill, president of the University of Missouri; John R. Kirk, president of the Kirksville Normal School; E. L. Hendricks, president of the Warrensburg Normal School; W. S. Dearmont, president of the Cape Girardeau Normal School; Clyde M. Hill, president of the Springfield Normal School; Ira Richardson, president of the Maryville Normal School; Lieutenant-Governor Wallace Crossley, Speaker O'Fallon of the Missouri Legislature; Dr. Herman Pearce of Kansas City; Mrs. E. R. Kroeger, director of the Junior Red Cross of the Southwest Division; Dr. Max A. Starkloff, Health Commissioner of St. Louis; Dr. H. de Lemater, health officer of St. Joseph; Miss Elizabeth Moore of St. Louis.

Statewide Co-operation.

All the universities, normal schools and colleges, as well as the public and private schools, have co-operated in the plans for the conference, Dr. Miller says, and all will send representatives. The various departments of the State Government which touch any angle of work of the conference also will be represented, and the opening speech of the convention will be made by Gov. Gardner. Women's clubs and parent-teachers' associations also are co-operating. Representatives of each of the following will attend: The Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, the Missouri Suffrage Organization, the W. C. T. U. of Missouri, the P. E. O. Sisterhood, Maccabees, Rebeccas, Parent-Teachers' Association.

Delegates to the conference will be entertained by the citizens of Springfield in their homes, and numerous large affairs will be given in their honor between the formal sessions of the convention.

A campaign which the promoters of the conference hope will grow out of the deliberations will deal not only with the question of obtaining health education for the Missouri school children, but will provide for a health survey of all the school districts of the State, outlining a feasible plan for co-operation between the parents and teachers for promoting child welfare, especially in the rural communities, so that children of this State may be assured a sound body as well as a trained mind.

Exhibits showing what has and what has not been accomplished in public health work in Missouri, particularly in the way of fighting tuberculosis, will be installed by St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joseph, and a special health exhibit will be sent to the conference from Teachers' College, Columbia University, New York.

A Woman's Verdict

Tells of Suffering Greatly With Kidney and Bladder Trouble and How Balmwort Brought Relief.

Her Letter Well Worth Reading

Mrs. Nellie McGinn, 609 East 138th street, New York City, writes:

"For the last year I had suffered greatly from Kidney and Bladder trouble, distressing pain in the back and hips, with rheumatic twinges and frequent severe headache, accompanied by nervousness, chills, and fever, and a pain in the region of the bladder. I would have to arise at night, my sleep being disturbed by the inflammation in bladder. Beginning the use of Balmwort Tablets I noticed almost instant relief, and continuing to use them I am now totally well and relieved of all pain and distress from which I suffered. I am glad to recommend Balmwort Tablets as a reliable, beneficial medicine and trust others may find relief and freedom from pain and distress as I did, etc."

The above letter is a true statement and is on file in our offices. Balmwort Tablets bring relief when other medicine has failed. Sold by leading druggists, $1.00 per tube.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Today's Beauty Help

We find you can bring out the beauty of your hair to its very best advantage by washing it with canthrox. It makes a very simple, inexpensive shampoo, which cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly of all the dandruff, dirt and excess oil, leaving a wonderfully clean, wholesome feeling. After its use, you will find that the hair dries quickly and evenly, is never streaked in appearance and is always bright, soft and fluffy; so fluffy, in fact, that it looks more abundant than it is, and so soft that arranging it becomes a pleasure. Just use a teaspoonful of canthrox, which you can get from any good druggist, dissolve it in a cup of hot water; this makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head.—ADV.

ASKS RED CROSS AID IN FINDING HER BROTHER

Illinois Woman Wants to Hear From Members of 138th--Other Requests for Information.

The Home Service Section of the St. Louis Chapter, Red Cross, requests members of G Company, 138th Infantry, who have information about the fate of Private William A. Harre of that company to communicate with his sister, Miss Katherine Harre, 1400 South Adams street, Beardstown, Ill. In a letter to the Home Service Section Miss Harre writes:

"My brother was reported severely wounded in action Sept. 28th. No information could be obtained all winter until April 2d, we received another telegram from the Adjutant-General Harris that my brother died, 'date and cause of death to be determined.'

"We do not know whether my brother died on the battlefield or was taken to a hospital. Capt. A. C. McDonald of the 138th wrote me he know nothing of my brother as, when he fell, their company passed on, but judged my brother had died.

"As the 35th Division is made up of St. Louis boys, probably some one could give us some information as to whether William Harre was taken to a hospital, how he was wounded or whether he died on the battlefield and what date."

Other Inquiries.

The Home Service Section has received a request from the War Department, office of the chief of staff, and is very anxious to get in touch with Mrs. Laura B. Barrere, the wife of Corp. Stanley W. Barrere, D Company, Central Records Office, Battalion A. S. C., A. P. O. 902; and with the following: Mrs. Marie Temple, whose only address we have is "General Delivery;" Anna and Ernestine Perrie, wife and daughter of Percy J. Perrie; and Walter Gibbs.

An inquiry has been received from the Adjutant General, asking for the present address of Mrs. Mattie Fisher, formerly 205 Lucas avenue, St. Louis.

The Home Service Section is anxious to get in touch with the following discharged disabled soldiers, to advise them of their rights under the War Risk Insurance Law:

Walter J. Bowing, Victor Guille, George Lanial, Otto Lawson (John W. Lawson father), Clarence P. Luck (Company H, Thirty-eighth Infantry), Lee Maxwell (Mrs. Ethel Maxwell sister), Jacob Ribitsch (Mrs. Alice Ribitch wife), Robert Peacher.

Checks for These Returned.

The Bureau of War Risk Insurance has asked the Red Cross to locate the following named persons, to whom checks have been sent, but which were returned to the bureau without sufficient information:

Viola Pearce Koolmeyer, 4521 Kennerly avenue; Mary May Kuhn, St. Louis avenue; Elizabeth Meador Lawrie, General Delivery; Mittie Bell Lefebre, Jefferson Barracks; Lena May, 2239 Warnet street; Dora Monroe, Fairfax avenue; Mrs. Mosgrove, 5041 Kossuth avenue; Ruth Campbell Mueller, 2254 North Moreland street; Irene Murphy, 3304 Washington avenue; Caroline Fern Pollocks, P. O. Box 565, St. Louis; Madora Polk, 822 Lordin avenue; Thomas William Pooley, 5334 Halsey street; Mamie Price, 3200 Rice avenue; Mary Preston; Armenda Stacy Reuter; Mary Reynolds; Rosa Rubinstein, General Delivery; Tillie Vanburen Sellers, 1545 Oliver street; Nellie A. Sheahan, 4211 Harrison avenue; Lottie Charolette Silveus; Dora Shaw Smith, 1600A 14th street, 2600A 14th street; Susan Dorthey Stein, 3212 Minnesota avenue; Laura Catherine Stevens; Fern Mathews Stevenson; Maggie Tendall; Emma Blackwell Thorpe, 2245 Virginia avenue; Clara Tinton, 2847 Washington street; Nicholas Pierce Todd, Hammond, La., St. Louis, Mo., Louisiana near New Orleans; Mrs. Henry J. Walker Jr., 200 Viehl avenue; Mary Alice Widger, 6178 Hemlock avenue; Miss Elsie Elizabeth Woehlke, 5728 Clemens street; Amelia Wolz, Utah place; Charles Woodruff, 4527 Barrettman avenue; Pallie York, 413 Huron avenue.

The Red Cross has been unable to deliver through the mails messages from abroad for the following named persons:

Josef Nuszpl, 2917½ Arsenal street; Josef Frank, care Buck, 1100 Lynch street; Albert Gitse, Frank Josef, 2003 South Second street; Georg Gmelnwieser, A. Brewer.

These messages will be delivered to the owners of them, if they will call or write to the Home Service Section, 1019 Frisco Building.

Letters to These Returned.

The Bureau of Communication of the Red Cross in Washington has endeavored to reply to inquiries addressed to it in regard to members of the A. E. F. The letters have been returned to the bureau by the postal authorities. Anyone knowing the present address of the persons named should communicate with the Home Service Section.

Mrs. Charles G. Dhooge, 728 Bayard avenue; Mrs. Bell, Field, Mo.; Mr. Albert Kuhn, Luxemburg, Mo.; Miss Viola Anderson, St. Louis, Mo.; Mr. Marris Lerman, St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. Grace Davenport, 3968 North Eleventh street, Flat A.; Mr. John Stoll, 2409 North Twenty-second street; George MacDonald, St. Louis; Mrs. Emma Terry, 2240 Washington avenue; Mr. D. E. Horn, 4729 Washington boulevard; Mrs. A. W. Henderson, 145 Florissant avenue.

All communications or inquiries should be addressed to the Home Service Section, American Red Cross, 1019 Frisco Building.

INVESTMENT MEN TO MEET HERE

At the quarterly meting of the board of governors of the Investment Bankers' Association of America at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., a few days ago, it was unanimously voted to hold the next annual convention in St. Louis in October. Last year's convention was changed from St. Louis to Atlantic City, due to influenza.

The association is composed of the principal investment banking houses of the country, including banks and trust companies, who conduct an investment banking business. It is officered by some of the best known investment bankers in the United States.

Membership is rather difficult to obtain, the qualifications being more stringent than in any similar national association. The body never maintains a lobby but does aid governmental and State authorities in framing legislation based on good business ethics and sound banking business.

NO TOURING TO EUROPE IN 1919

Resumption of Travel to Wait on Return of Troops.

Information received at the St. Louis offices of the steamship companies is that there is not likely to be resumption of tourist travel to Europe this summer.

Transatlantic passenger traffic cannot become normal until all the members of the American Expeditionary Force have been returned home from overseas. According to latest advices from the Secretary of War, it is the plan of the administration to have all American troops on this side of the Atlantic by the end of August or September of this year. This includes the present army of occupation.

Until they are home they have the right of way on all steamship sailings. Meantime only such space is given to civilian passenger traffic as is not needed for the accommodation of troops.

Passenger travel for any but strictly necessary purposes is discouraged by the American as well as European Governments, and control is exercised in this respect through the issue of passports, which all transatlantic passengers are required to have.

What Standardization Means in a Watch

We hear it said that the mechanism of the automobile is standardized. That is to say, the vital parts or units are similar in all cars both in function and in purpose, yet we know them to be made differently, of varying material, design and workmanship.

Now let us tell you about the standardized watch. That is to say, a watch the qualities of which are uniformity of material and workmanship, perfection of design to which may be added intrinsic and excelling worth not found in any other watch made here or abroad.

There is only one watch in the world that can claim certain, undeniable superiorities of design and material which make it a different watch in regard to its "works" (which produce time), and that watch is the Waltham.

Let us see what standardization really means. Suppose you own a Swiss watch. Its mainspring was bought in the open market in short lengths of varying quality — a spring that was hardened and tempered in short lengths — so, this kind of a mainspring is an uncertain quantity and remember, the mainspring supplies the power of the watch.

Or, take the balance wheel of the Swiss watch. It was made by hand, out of steel, somewhere, 4,000 miles away, brought to a factory by an individual and put in some Swiss watch. Swiss balance wheels are made in a thousand different homes by a thousand different people and carried to different factories where these varying wheels are assembled in watches. And the balance wheel governs the time of a watch.

The mainspring in a Waltham watch is cut from a long roll of uniform steel of special quality — then tempered in resilient form by a secret process. Every spring is a known quantity — not one different from another — and fourteen tons of them are made every year. This is scientific standardization; nothing haphazard here.

The balance wheel of a Waltham watch is made of steel and brass, forged together in a single unit — a Waltham invention. The static quality of one metal counteracts the elasticity of the other, taking care of expansion and contraction, the sphericity and weight of this important part of a watch. That is why Waltham Watches are such good time-keepers in any temperature.

And we could go on talking Waltham standardization — give you many more examples of those exclusive Waltham inventions that have placed "America First" in watchmaking.

When you buy a Waltham Watch you own a watch chosen by the horologists of the leading nations as a standard of quality that placed it first in their expert, well-trained estimation over all other watches examined for their respective governments.

When you own a Waltham Watch you do not have to worry if it needs cleaning or oiling or repairs. Every watch repairer in America knows what Waltham standardization means. Parts are quickly obtainable. Waltham watches are more easily repaired than watches of any other make. The whole watch is standardized.

Remember, the Waltham isn't an assembled watch, each part made by a different individual 4,000 miles across salt water. It is an American watch that is, and has been the despair of the Swiss artisan because of its beauty, its uniformity of material, its superiority of design — its standardization.

Your jeweler will show you Waltham Watches ranging in price from $22 up to $1,000 and over, according to the case. Each watch standardized and embodying principles of advanced watch construction not found in any other watch in the world.

The Heel of Achilles in Tires

The weak spot in a tire is where tread stops and sidewall begins.

On any road but smooth, flat pavement, the spears of the road—stones and broken rock—are constantly jabbing at this Heel of Achilles. And the sides of wagon tracks, when you ride ruts, grind wickedly at vulnerable flanks.

Your eyesight tells you that. Now look at the SAFETY TREAD of Goodrich Tires. See how it spreads the Goodrich interlocking safety bars beyond the ball of the tire, and lays extra tread rubber along the sidewall.

Notice further, how the extra wide tread carries on up the sides of the tire, extending beneath the sidestrips.

Thus an extra thickness of tough tread rubber fortifies Goodrich Tires at the Heel of Achilles.

Remember, that is one of the many reasons why Goodrich Tires lead in mileage over all roads, rough or smooth.

LABOR SITUATION IN AMERICA TODAY

have about 800,000 unemployed in the United States at the present time. The number is not in itself alarming, because it isn't greater than we frequently have during periods of industrial activity. The only cause for alarm, if there is any cause for alarm, lies in the fact that the number is still increasing, although not so rapidly as it did. For the first weeks in December and during the months of January and February, there was frequently an increase weekly as high as 50,000 in the number of unemployed. That has been reduced until we are now having an increase of from 7000 to 9000 per week in the number of unemployed. We are getting nearer to the point where we are absorbing the demobilized soldiers and war workers as rapidly as the demobilization takes place. We have not reached that point yet. There has been a reason for it. The reason has been that employers generally, business men generally, have feared to engage in their usual business enterprises, lest their competitors starting later have a decided advantage over them. There has been a feeling that the cost of material is higher than it ought to be and higher than it will be, and that the price of labor is likely to come down; and fear exists among business men that if they go into the market for the raw material for their particular enterprises, that the fiprices they will have to pay now may be 10, 20 or even 50 per cent higher than their competitors may have to pay for it tomorrow; and if their competitors can buy the raw material at a lower price than they can buy it, then the competitor has an advantage over them when seeking a market; and the disposition has been to hold off on that account.

Predicts Little Reduction in Wages.

My own judgment is that there will be little or no reduction in the wage rates, that it would be folly on the part of business men generally to attempt any general reduction in the wage rates, that if reductions in the wage rates could be forced it would not last for a very long period of time, because as sure as we get through our period of readjustment, and we are going to get through it, just so sure will we have a prolonged period of industrial activity that will create a demand for workers that will be difficult to fill and compel employers to pay as high or higher rates than they are now paying. But that is not true with regard to the cost of materials. Wage rates went up. They went up higher in some industries than they did in others and yet there was comparative uniformity in the increase in the wage rates. The cost of material in some lines of industry kept pace with the increase in the cost of wages. In other lines of industry the increase in the cost of material was higher, in others still higher, and in others still higher. In one line of industry, in certain branches of the metal trades, the cost of labor had gone up 80 per cent, and the cost of material coming from the hands of that labor, the selling price of that product, had gone up 275 per cent. Now, there is a possibility of squeezing down that accordion and reducing the cost of material until it comes down to the equivalent of the increase in the cost of labor, and that could be done without disturbing labor in any shape or form. It has been undertaken by the Department of Commerce. Whether it will be successful in carrying it through or not, time alone can tell. But in any event, the employer of labor who fails to maintain his organization during the period of readjustment will find himself at a disadvantage when the period of readjustment is over.

Immigration Problem a Factor.

Before the war we were receiving into our body politic in the neighborhood of a million and a quarter aliens annually. Of that number 400,000 were returning, leaving us a net increase of 800,000 immigrants, nearly 600,000 of whom were working for wages. For four years we have not had that increase in our working population. With the beginning of the European war, immigration fell off almost entirely. We were getting some, principally over the Mexican and Canadian borders; but the number coming in was about equal to the number going out and so we have had a shortage of some 2,400,000 in what would have been the increase in our working population. We have taken a ship-building industry with but a few tens of thousands in it, and we have built it up to a point where there is approximately half a million workers. That half a million workers have been drawn from all the walks of life. They have been gathered together in our shipbuilding centers and trained to new lines of activity. They are taken out of our other industries, and are likely to remain out of the other industries for a prolonged period of time. Our armies will take time to demobilize. We possibly have a million and a half, or upwards of a million and a half, of soldiers now on the rolls of our military forces. In a year from now we are likely to have anywhere from half a million to a million. They have come from the industrial and commercial activities. So we have that shortage in our labor power over what we would have had if there had been no war, and when we get back into our natural industrial swing we will find ourselves short of that amount of man power; and hence my statement that the business man who fails to take care of his industrial organization during this period of readjustment will find himself at a decided disadvantage when he has to build up his organization after we get into our natural and proper swing.

Has No Fear of Revolution.

There is a period, however, in which we are likely to have some unemployment. We are having some of it now. I am not one of those who fear that we are going to have a social or political revolution in the United States. I do not believe the conditions are such that any social or political revolution in the United States can be made successful. Whatever imperfections there may be in our institutions, the fact stands out to all the world that we have the most perfect democracy that has ever yet been created, and that as a result of our more perfect democracy and the long period of its establishment, the great masses of our people have a very much higher standard of living than they had else-

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul."

The Superiority of the Phonograph Now Reflected in Case Design.

What the New Edison Means to You

IT MEANS entertainment of the highest order, a phonograph as a great entertainer.

IT MEANS that your discriminating musical friends will expect an Edison when visiting your home.

IT MEANS the better the phonograph the greater the pleasure derived by its possession.

IT MEANS the living artists in your home, exactly as they sing on the stage.

IT MEANS a perfect re-creation of the human voice, to life without alteration.

IT MEANS a phonograph in true period furniture made of genuine mahogany or selected white oak, following periods: Heppelwhite, Sheraton, Chippendale, Jacobean, William and Mary and Eighteenth Century models.

IT MEANS, no matter what its price, the New Edison is encased in a period cabinet.

IT IS DIFFICULT to write a word picture of the New Edison; no words in the dictionary can describe its ultimate perfection and cannot be compared with existing talking machines; it is a different phonograph with features entirely distinctive.

IT IS EASY to hear the greatest phonograph in the world, our music parlors are open to you.

IT IS TIME you should demand an actual recreation of sound, without alteration. This is the age of advancement.

IT IS YOUR PRIVILEGE to witness the perfection of the New Edison by attending any one of our tone-tests which we give from time to time.

IT IS OUR CHALLENGE to any manufacturer of sound-reproducing instruments to duplicate our tests of placing the original artist and record for comparison.

IT IS EASY to own an Edison under our club plan. Write for particulars by return mail.

The Leaders of Tomorrow

are the Players of Today

It pays to get an early start if one wants to be a leader.

There's nothing like athletic sports for developing sound bodies, keen brains, self-reliance and all qualities of leadership so vital to success.

Encourage your boy, your girl, to play baseball, football, basketball, tennis. Teach them to swim. Let them put on the boxing gloves and "go to it."

The hero of the back-lot baseball team—the winner of the foot race—are simply getting "warmed up" for the great game of business.

The youngsters who will some day be picked out as Presidents, Senators, Governors—as heads of great Commercial, Financial and Industrial enterprises, are those who are now active participants in every form of physical exercise.

Co-operative and helpful suggestions for the promotion of sports invited.

WASHING WON'T RID HAIR OF DANDRUFF

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—ADV.

LABOR SITUATION IN AMERICA TODAY

where, and it is not to be thought that our workmen would take the chances of bringing themselves to the conditions of the Russian workmen by the processes of undertaking to overthrow our political and industrial institutions. I have a great deal of sympathy with some of the isms that are propounded. I can realize the motives of many of the men who are propounding those isms. I have no objection to their going before the people of the United States and endeavoring to convince them that their respective isms are sound and ought to be put into effect, but I have no use for the man, no matter what his "isms" may be, who proposes to put it into effect in a democracy by the use of force. The use of force to overthrow an autocratic form of government may be the highest kind of patriotism, but the use of force to overthrow a democratic form of government is treason to the masses of the people. For two years the Department of Labor has been endeavoring to counteract some of these philosophies, particularly those that undertook the use of force or advocate the use of force for the accomplishment of their purpose. We have had a small group of workingmen going from one place to another and pointing out in the language of working men themselves the fallacies and the poisons existing in these philosophies, and among those have been the philosophies that have been taught by the Industrial Workers of the World, the Russian workmen's union and more recently that which we have come to speak of as the Bolsheviki, and, as it has found expression in the United States, the philosophy of the Industrial Workers of the World. Under certain circumstances it is very alluring to the average workingman. They lay down certain basic principles that are sound, and then upon these basic principles build a structure that is absolutely false. They lay down as the basis of their philosophy, for instance, the theory that every man is entitled to the full social value of what his labor produces. To my mind tht is a true "ism." It is a Socialistic doctrine, purely Marxian in its origin. Every man is fully entitled to the full social value of what his labor produces. Not only the Socialist, but the individual can subscribe to a doctrine of the kind. The difficulty, however, is that human intelligence has not as yet devised any method by which you can determine what the social value is of anyone's labor, and until you are able to compute the value to society, it will be futile to lay down as the basis of any philosophy, that every man is entitled to the full social value of what his labor produces.

Putting Sand in the Bearings.

Then they follow with another "ism"—that is that all property is valuable only in so far as profits can be secured from the property. And that also is sound economically. No one wants to retain property that is not valuable in some sense. If it does not bring returns either in finance, in pleasure or in some other way. If you destroy the value of the property so that it is impossible to earn profits, then the owner of it would not have any desire to retain the property. And that seems sound. And then they say that the way to destroy the value of the property is to strike on the job, to soldier, as we say here in America. To do a stint, as they say over in England. To put sand upon the bearings, to destroy the machines in any way that it can be done with security to the person who destroys it. To mutilate the property, to do anything that will reduce the amount of production and increase its cost; and when you have reduced the production and increased the cost, then the profits will be eliminated, the owner will no longer wish to retain it, the workers can take it over, operate it themselves collectively and procure the full social value of what their labor produces.

Those who advocate and are advocating that theory and practice fail to realize the kind of minds the American workmen possess. The great bulk of them have more or less a smattering of industrial history, and they know that before the rebirth of the inventive genius of man, before the coming of our modern factory system, when everything that was produced was produced by hand, very much less was produced per individual than would be produced by any system of sabotage that they could possibly hope to carry into effect, and yet in those days there were still profits for the employers, there was still value to the property and the only thing that did result was a very much lower standard of living for the wage-workers; and if these people succeeded in putting their philosophy into effect instead of destroying the profits of the employer, and the value of the property, they would reduce the standard of living of the American workingman. The employer and the employe have a mutual interest in securing the largest possible production with a given amount of labor, having due regard for the health, the safety and the opportunities for rest, recreation and improvement of the workers.

Council Table Aids Understanding.

Their interests only diverge when it comes to a division of that which has been mutually produced; and the wisest thing for them to do under the circumstances is to sit down 'round the council table, and endeavor to work out the division of the product on a basis as nearly just as the circumstances surrounding the industry will permit. There have been many elements at work in endeavoring to spread these fallacies. There have been agencies beyond doubt that have come from over the seas. There have been the natural discontent that is bound to exist in any country with as great a population as ours has, but one of the greatest elements and one of the greatest factors in making unrest has been the arbitrary disposition on the part of many employers in the country dealing with the wage workers of the country. Many of them have assumed that the wage-worker was simply a part of the machinery of their plant. They deal with them in exactly the same terms, although they are entirely different. If the machine is broken, it requires money on the part of the employer to replace it. If it is driven beyond its capacity and as a result is broken, it requires the finances of the owner to replace it. There is a definite means by which the working strength and the breaking strain of a machine may be determined, and it may be so regulated as to keep it nicely within the working strain; but no man has as yet been able to determine any method by which you can calculate the breaking strain of a human being. The human being himself is unable to calculate his own breaking strain and yet these people undertake to class that living, moving, sensitized human being in the same category with the inanimate machine. The wage-worker has hopes, the wage-worker has aspirations; yet these people are doing all that they possibly can to destroy the faith of the Doctor Tells How to Detect Harmful Effects of Tobacco

Try These SIMPLE TESTS

New York: Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, says: Many men who smoke, chew or snuff incessantly and who are seemingly healthy are suffering from progressive organic ailments. Thousands of them would never have been afflicted had it not been for the use of tobacco and thousands would soon get well if they would only stop the use of tobacco. The chief habit-forming principle of tobacco is nicotine, a deadly poison which, when absorbed by the system, slowly affects the nerves, membranes, tissues and vital organs of the body. The harmful effect of tobacco varies and depends on circumstances. One will be afflicted with general debility, others with catarrh of the throat, indigestion, constipation, extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of memory, lack of will power, mental confusion, etc. Others may suffer from heart disease, bronchial trouble, hardening of the arteries, tuberculosis, blindness or even cancer or the common affliction known as tobacco heart. If you use tobacco in any form you can easily detect the harmful effects by making the following simple tests: Read aloud one full page from a book. If, in the course of reading, your voice becomes muffled, hoarse and indistinct, and you must frequently clear your throat, the chances are that your throat is affected by catarrh and it may be the beginning of more serious trouble. Next in the morning before taking your usual smoke, walk up three flights of stairs at a regular pace, then stop. If you find that you are out of breath, your heart beat is forced, trembling or irregular, you may be a victim of functional or organic heart trouble. If you feel that you must smoke, chew or snuff to quiet your nerves, you are a slave to the tobacco habit, and are positively poisoning yourself with the deadly drug, nicotine. In either case you have just two alternatives—keep on with the self-poisoning process irrespective of the dangers and suffer the consequences, or give up the habit and escape the dangers. You can overcome the craving and stop the habit in a very short time by using the following inexpensive formula. Go to any drug store and ask for Nicotol tablets, take one tablet after each meal, and in a comparatively short time you will have no desire for tobacco, the craving will have left you. With the nicotine poison out of your system your general health will quickly improve.

Note—When asked about Nicotol tablets, one of our leading druggists said: "It is truly a wonderful remedy for the tobacco habit; away ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the money to every dissatisfied customer, and we would not permit the use of our name unless the remedy possessed unusual merit." Nicotol tablets are sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all up-to-date druggists, including Judge & Dolph, Wolff-Wilson, Enderle.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Just Apply This Paste and the Hairs Will Vanish

(Boudoir Secrets)

The judicious use of a delatone paste insures any woman a clear, hairless skin. To prepare the paste, mix a little of the powdered delatone with some water, then apply to the objectionable hairs for 2 or 3 minutes. When the paste is removed and the skin washed, every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain attends the use of the delatone, and it will not mar the most sensitive skin, but to insure results see that you get real delatone.—60c.—ADV.

How to Rent a Flat

Listen Lester! If you are looking for an apartment this Spring, remember that "all is not gold that glitters." A stylish entrance, sepia brown walls and cosy sun-parlors won't keep your frame warm when Winter gets busy. Go into the basement first and find out what kind of a heating boiler is there. That's your flat-hunting-religion.

Kewanee Smokeless Boiler, Portable, for Heating

If you find a Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler there, rent the apartment on the spot. If you don't find it, Lester, you are flirting with "Flu" and all the ills that human flesh is heir to, if you sign your name to that lease. The boiler is the very heart of your happiness in whatever apartment you rent.

There are lots of boilers that work bully in the summer time when they are not used, but as soon as Winter pokes his nose in the door, they go on a strike and refuse to warm things up. That's why we warn you to settle this boiler question first. You don't want to eat breakfast with your furs on or sit on the radiator when you read your magazine. And you run those chances if you ignore the boiler question.

If you are sure of heat, you are sure of comfort. If you are not sure of heat, better get a doctor to live with you. The Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler assures you of constant and ample heat. It is a splendidly constructed, all-steel boiler and not one of those accordion-pleated affairs moulded of cast-iron. We've given you your warning, Lester. See to it that you heed it.

workers in our institutions as a means by which they may progressively go forward to higher and better things. Yet we can carry the message to the wage-workers, as we have been carrying it for years, that they have a mutual interest with the employer in securing the largest possible production with a given amount of labor, and that the point of contest and conflict between them is not at the point of production, but at the point of distribution; and if any conflict is to come at all, the conflict should come at the point of distribution.

But when you have hundreds of thousands of workers idle for a prolonged period of time, men willing to work, anxious to work, eager to have an opportunity of taking care of themselves and their families, and yet because of the disturbed conditions in society, unable to find employment, it doesn't appeal to them. It doesn't appeal to the unemployed that there is a mutual interest between employer and employe in securing a large production when they have not even the opportunity of engaging in the production. For that reason, if for no other, all of our governmental divisions are interested in seeing that all possible public work shall be furnished to take up the surplus of the unemployed. I would not have them engage in public works purely for the sake of giving employment. There is plenty of public work to be done that is needed, and I would have them engage in needed public works in order to furnish buffer employment to the unemployed, tiding us through the period of readjustment to the period when we get into our post-war activities, carrying us through the possibility of riot, carrying us through a period when there is likely to be disturbances in our social and political structure if we have large numbers of unemployed men. And, then, when we have tided through that, when we have gone through that period of readjustment we can take up the questions of social reconstruction, political reconstruction, economic reconstruction and deal with each of the problems deliberately, intelligently and without passion, working out our destiny in a manner that Almighty God intended it should be worked out—in a progressive movement toward the highest standards possible for human beings to reach.

Labor Supply and Demand.

We have passed the peak point of unemployment and are now steadily moving toward the goal of equality in labor supply and demand. There is still a large labor surplus, but our weekly reports indicate that it is declining in increasing ratio. Latest reports from 58 representative cities show 27 of them reporting a surplus of labor of 59,957, as against 73,575 the previous week. This comparative showing is again an improvement over the weeks that have gone before. It is probable that there are approximately now 700,000 unemployed workers in the land, but that number need not alarm, as it is not in excess of the average rate of unemployment in normal times; in fact, it is rather less, for the average of idle workers even in periods of brisk industrial activity has been about 1,000,000.

What makes the situation more than ordinarily acute, however, is the necessity of finding work for our returning soldiers. This we regard in the nature of a natural obligation resting upon us—an obligation which we are striving to discharge by means of all the agencies at our disposal.

Our first effort was to endeavor to stimulate the construction of public works and other needed enterprises which had been held up during the war, so that emergency employment might be immediately provided. Splendid results have been achieved along this line and a marked spirit of co-operation has been evidenced throughout the coutnry. This construction is especially timely since there is a shortage, estimated, of 1,000,000 dwellings. The national "Own-Your-Home" campaign, in connection with our efforts to push construction, has given most satisfactory results in the building trades. U. S. Employment Service Effective.

Our efforts to restore the men to jobs have been greatly facilitated by a plan of co-operation which has linked the national and local machinery of the national welfare organizations with the United States Employment Service. By this action, thousands of agencies, such as the local units of the Council of National Defense, the 10,000 home service committees of the Red Cross and tens of thousands of churches, social, civic and other bodies were brought to the aid of the Federal Employment Service. Up to the present approximately 2000 placement bureaus for returning soldiers and sailors have been established by the Employment Service and co-operating welfare organizations in towns and cities throughout the country.

We have begun with the returning soldier even before he is discharged from the service. At each demobilization camp there is a representative of the Employment Service who interviews all the men 24 hours before they are discharged and makes a record of each case. They are classified into groups and each man is questioned as to the kind of work he desires and is best fitted for. He is then furnished a card, directing him to some "opportunity" open to the employment office in his home city or to one of the 2000 community boards which are assisting the Employment Service in the placement of the returned soldier and sailor.

If the man is sent to the United States Employment Office, duplicate cards are made out, one copy of which is given to him, the other being sent to his home office, with a letter asking that he be placed in his line of work. These cards are sent out a day or so before the man is discharged, so that the employment office will be able to place him by the time he arrives or shortly thereafter. Follow-up cards are used and efforts on the part of the Employment Service to place the man do not stop until he is in employment.

Acknowledgment should be made of the rapid response of the public to the needs of the Employment Service, the activities of which threatened to be seriously impaired by failure of Congress to pass the

THIN PEOPLE NEED BITRO-PHOSPHATE

Increases Weight, Strength and Nerve Force in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances

"Take plain bitro-phosphate" is the advice of physicians to thin, delicate, nervous people who lack vim, energy and nerve force, and there seems to be ample proof of the efficacy of this preparation to warrant the recommendation. Moreover, if we judge from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by Judge & Dolph, Enderle Drug Stores, Johnson Bros. Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Company in St. Louis and most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance, the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Josephine Davis, the charming actress says: "It is remarkable what BITRO-PHOSPHATE did for me. After a few days I began to regain my strength, felt full of life, slept soundly and gained twelve pounds in four weeks."

Clinical tests made in St. Catherine's Hospital, N. Y. C., showed that two patients gained in weight 33 and 27 pounds, respectively, through the administration of this organic phosphate; both patients claim they have not felt as strong and well for the past twelve years.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which usually always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

Physicians and hospitals everywhere are now recognizing its merits by its use in over-increasing quantities. Frederick Kolle, M. D., editor of New York Physicians' "Who's Who," says: "Bitro-Phosphate should be prescribed by every doctor and used in every hospital to increase strength and nerve force and to enrich the blood."

Joseph D. Harrigan, Former Visiting Specialist to North Eastern Dispensatory, says: "Let those who are weak, thin, nervous, anaemic, or run-down, take a natural, unadulterated substance such as bitro-phosphate and you will soon see some astonishing results in the increase of nerve energy, strength of body and mind and power of endurance."

Bitro-Phosphate is made entirely of the organic phosphate compound referred to in the National Standard Dispensatory as being an excellent tonic and nervine and a preparation which has recently acquired considerable reputation in the treatment of neurasthenia. The standard of excellence, strength and purity of the substance is beyond question, for every Bitro-Phosphate tablet is manufactured in strict accordance with the U. S. Pharmacopoeia test requirements. Bitro-Phosphate is therefore not a patent medicine and should not be confounded with any of the secret nostrums, so-called tonics or widely advertised "cure-alls."

CAUTION—Although Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness owing to its remarkable flesh growing properties it should not be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

SERATHOL BEST THING FOR STOMACH TROUBLE

Recent investigations of the treatment of a large number of cases of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and conditions arising from hyper-acidity of the stomach prove that there is nothing more effective in the treatment of these ailments than ordinary serathol, which can be obtained from Judge & Dolph, Enderle Drug Stores, Johnson Bros. Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., in St. Louis and any good druggist at trifling cost. Many a sufferer from these complaints has been agreeably surprised at the almost instantaneous relief and subsequent permanent benefit from its use. In many cases of hyper-acidity a single dose of seratholi produces almost magic effects.

Today's Health Hints

CONSTIPATION—If people troubled with constipation would spend three to five minutes each day in taking a bodybending exercise that combines the muscles of the abdomen and at night before retiring take a little purified toxiol, permanent and highly satisfactory results will soon follow. Drink plenty of fresh water, avoid strong purgatives and foods that have a constipating tendency, and this simple plan cannot fail. The purified toxiol is inexpensive and can be obtained from Judge & Dolph, Enderle Drug Stores, Johnson Bros. Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., in St. Louis and any good druggist.—ADVERTISEMENT.

GIRLS

No One Will Know You Use Face Powder

If you use derwillo the very latest thing in powders. It's impossible to detect it and it gives the skin that rosy, peach-like appearance and baby softness everybody raves about. You put it on in the morning and it stays there all day. No touching up to keep your nose from shining. Perspiration does not affect it and it will not rub off on clothing. It instantly beautifies the complexion, puts color in your cheeks, and is a wonderful tonic for the skin; prevents blackheads, coarse pores, hides freckles, tan, sun spots and other blemishes on the face, neck, hands and arms. Rough, chapped skin quickly disappears and leaves you with a complexion of youth, which will attract attention anywhere. Apply derwillo before going to theater or parties, and just note the favorable comments of your friends. It feels so good on your face that you will never be without it, and you will forever discard the old forms of face powder. It contains no rice powder, which clogs the pores or injurious chemicals, such as bismuth or pearl white, so often found in many high grade powders. Its principle ingredient is used by the leading skin specialists in the treatment of many skin diseases, as it is a genuine tonic to the skin, is absolutely harmless and will not stimulate or produce a growth of hair. Here is a fair offer: Get a package from your druggist today, use it for a week or two, and if you are not satisfied ask him for your money back and he will gladly give it to you. If it were not something out of the ordinary, do you suppose we could afford to make you such an offer? If you really want a beautiful complexion, here is your chance to have one without any expense if it fails. Ask for derwillo and accept nothing else, then you will not be disappointed.

NOTE—When asked about derwillo one of our leading druggists said: "It is truly a wonderful beautifier, away ahead of anything we have ever sold, and those who use it are wild over it. It is giving such excellent satisfaction that we gladly refund the money to every dissatisfied customer." Derwillo is sold under an iron-clad money back guarantee in this city by all druggists, including Wolff-Wilson, Judge & Dolph, Johnson Bros. & Enderle.—ADVERTISEMENT.

urgent deficiency bill. The outside support coming from state and city governments, welfare and community organizations, chambers of commerce, labor organizations and private contributors aggregates $100,000 a month. With this help we are able to keep in operation 461 employment offices, which is 405 more than the Employment Service itself was able to finance after the failure of the bill.

Every day brings its message of encouragement that the coming of great industrial activity is hastening. Reports from the clothing trades within the last few days disclose that there is now a shortage of woolens and materials, and to meet this condition great improvement will be experienced in the textile centers.

What is true of textiles is true of all commodities. The shelves are bare and they must be replenished to their normal business weights. The work of restoration cannot be long delayed. The normal needs of our people and of the peoples of the world speedily will solve our unemployment problem.

What Women Need Is Not Cosmetics Or Stimulating Drugs But Plenty Of Pure Red Blood Rich In Iron

To Give Them Health, Strength and Beauty

Says Dr. George H. Baker, Formerly Physician and Surgeon Monmouth Memorial Hospital of New Jersey.

Explains How Organic Iron—Nuxated Iron Enriches the Blood, Strengthens the Nerves, Builds up Physical Power and Helps Make Weak, Nervous, Run-down Women Keen, Active and Tingling With Energy.

Sleepless nights spent worrying over supposed ailments, constant dosing with habit-forming drugs and narcotics and useless attempts to brace up with strong coffee or other stimulants are keeping thousands of women pale, weak, nervous and constantly longing to be strong and well, when their real trouble may be nothing more than lack of iron in the blood. Without iron the blood has no power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good—you don't get the strength out of it. When iron is supplied it enriches the impoverished blood, gives Nature's own color into the cheeks, strengthens the nerves and gives renewed vitality to the whole body. But to take the wrong kind of iron in the hope of getting rem-ored strength may prove worse than useless, so physicians have been asked to explain below why they prescribe only organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which, unlike the older inorganic products, is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, or upset the stomach.

Dr. George H. Baker, formerly Physician and Surgeon, Monmouth Memorial Hospital, New Jersey, says: "What women need to put roses in their cheeks and the springtime of life into their step is not cosmetics or stimulating drugs, but plenty of rich, pure red blood. Without it no woman can do credit to herself or to her work. Iron is one of the greatest of all strength and blood builders, and I have found nothing in my experience so effective for helping to make strong, healthy, red-blooded women as Nuxated Iron. From a careful examination of the formula and my own tests of Nuxated Iron I feel convinced that it is a preparation which any physician can take himself or prescribe for his patients with the utmost confidence of obtaining highly beneficial and satisfactory results."

Dr. Kenneth K. MacAlpine, a prominent New York surgeon, member of the New York State Medical Society and for 10 years Adjunct Professor of the New York Post Graduate Medical School and Hospital, says: "You can tell the women whose blood is rich in strength-giving iron; they have the beautiful, healthy, rosy-cheeked ones, radiant with life, vim and energy—envied and sought after everywhere they go. Yet, in spite of all that has been said and written by physicians about the alarming iron deficiency in the blood of the average American woman of today, there are still thousands who need something to increase their red blood corpuscles and build up their strength and endurance, and are either careless of their condition or do not think what to take. In my opinion there is nothing better than organic iron—Nuxated Iron—to help make healthy, full-blooded, beautiful women. By enriching the blood and increasing its oxygen-carrying power, Nuxated Iron will often transform the flabby flesh, tasteless tissues and pallid cheeks of nervous, run-down women into a glow of health and make them look years younger within a surprisingly short time. If people would only realize that iron is just as indispensable to the blood as is air to the lungs and be just as particular about keeping up a sufficient supply at all times, there would, in my opinion, be far less disease resulting from anaemic, weakened conditions. For years it was a problem with physicians how to administer iron in a form that could be taken up by the system and increase the red blood corpuscles without upsetting the stomach, blackening the teeth or producing other disorders almost as serious as the lack of iron itself. But the introduction of Nuxated Iron has done away with all the objectionable features of the old mineral salts of iron and given to every careful, thinking physician a tried and valuable prescription which he can recommend nearly every day with benefit to his weakened and run-down patients." In my opinion, Nuxated Iron is the most valuable tonic, strength and blood-builder any physician can prescribe for his patients.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians, is not a secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Co., Enderle Drug Co., Pauley's Drug Store Co. and all other druggists.—ADVERTISEMENT.

"What an awful moment when woman first realizes that she is growing old—that without her make-up, skillful hair-dressing and the whip-like effect of temporary stimulants, her face is haggard, pale and worn—her body tired, weak and drooping.

"The strong, healthy, beautiful woman relies upon pure, red blood, rich in strength-giving iron to keep her cheeks rosy, her nerves steady and her whole being filled with radiant life and vitality."

TRUCK EXPEDITION POSTPONED BY RAINY WEATHER

Entries Are Coming in Fast for 5-Day Run; More Than a Hundred Entries Are Expected.

Because of the rainy weather of the past week and the possibility of the country roads not being in favorable conditions by June 2 it has been arranged to postpone the St. Louis Motor Truck expedition to Quincy and return until June 9, it was announced yesterday by L. H. Amrine, chairman of the Executive Committee.

More than 100 motor trucks representing different makes and designs of commercial bodies built for use in the small community as well as the types for use in larger communities, are expected to enter by the close of the week, according to Chairman Amrine. The truck train is scheduled to leave St. Louis at 6 a. m. the morning of June 9 from the circus lot at Sarah and Pine streets, where all entries will be parked the day before.

Entries will be received until June 2, Amrine said. Any size truck up to, and including two tons may be entered. The type of body does not matter. A chassis alone is eligible for entrance according to the expedition regulations.

Route of the Expedition.

The route of the expedition is to be as follows: From St. Louis to St. Charles, thence to Troy for dinner Monday. Supper will be had the same day at Louisiana where the truck train will remain over Monday night. Motion pictures of road tours and the process of making automobile tires will be shown by several St. Louis tire dealers and short talks given on modern transportation, good roads and other subjects of interest to motor enthusiasts at points where the caravan halts over night. These addresses or "four-minute talks" will be given by a delegation of speakers chosen especially by the automobile dealers represented in the expediton. F. W. Fenn of New York, secretary of the National Motor Truck Chamber of Commerce, has accepted an invitation to attend.

Tuesday morning early the expedition will leave Louisiana for Hannibal, expecting to arrive there in time for dinner. Thence it will proceed to Quincy for supper on the same day if possible. Tuesday night will be spent in Quincy, where a demonstration will be given, and the expedition will depart Wednesday morning for Rushville and Beardstown, where it will spend Wednsday night. By noon Thursday it is anticipated that the train will arrive at Jacksonville.

Thursday night will be spent in Jerseyville and it is the plan to have dinner Friday in Alton, arriving in St. Louis either Friday night or early Saturday morning. The total distance is 370 miles.

Explorers Going Over Route Today.

P. W. Duffey and C. A. Aldrich, who laid out the tour, said they intended traversing the route today, weather permitting, to study the road conditions. Duffey toured to Hannibal and back last Sunday and found but few poor stretches of road, he said.

Robert E. Lee, at a meeting of the Motor Truck Expedition Executive Committee last week, was appointed truck master of the expedition. Lee said if the train is composed of 100 trucks or more it would be divided into sections of not more than 33 trucks each. There will be assistants selected to take charge of each section. A minimum speed schedule is being arranged according to road conditions in order that it may be followed closely in an endeavor to arrive at the principal points along the route on time.

Officials of the tour will ride in passenger cars. No other passenger cars are privileged to take part according to the regulations. Three motorcycles and sidecars will be used for scouts and the lieutenants in charge of each section.

Regulations that have been drawn up solicit the entrance of trucks of private owners as well as dealers who feel so inclined for the benefit they may derive from advertising their business. It is not required that a dealer necessarily be a member of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association to make an entry. The purpose of the expedition is to carry motor truck advertising to the door of the prospective buyer in the small community in an endeavor to visualize the possibilities of motor transportation.

POLICE BUY MOTORCYCLES

The Police Department of St. Louis has just purchased 15 Harley-Davidson motorcycles from the Olive Cycle and Motor Co., also 4 side cars to be used for parade and escort use. The St. Louis Police Department has used motor cycles for 12 years, in that time purchasing 87 of all makes.

AUTO CLUB OBJECTS TO GLASS IN ALLEYS

The largest meeting in the history of the Missouri Automobile Club, formerly the South Side Automobile Club, was held at the Western Rowing Club Thursday night. The attendance was 315 members. The club gave instructions during the meeting to the officers of the club to take up a number of matters important to automobile owners. Among these was the spreading of nails on the street from buildings being wrecked; needed repairs on brick streets; the removal of railroad cars from the switch at Ninth and Branch streets, which has brought several accidents to motorists, and the regulation of wagons carrying long ladders or long pieces of timber or iron.

A letter was ordered written to the Chief of Police asking him to give a general order requiring policemen to inspect alleys and to warn householders of glass, tin cans and other debris in the alleys. The club will also take up with the city authorities a plan to immediately rebuild the bridge on Gravois avenue which crosses the River des Peres. At present it is a very narrow, crooked and dangerous passage way.

W. L. Patterson of the St. Louis Motor Service Co. delivered the first of a series of lectures which he will give to the club on the care and operation of an automobile. Patterson was asked and answered many questions after his talk. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

NEWELL HOLDS SCHOOL.

For the past week the Newell Motor Car Co., Paige & Stearns, distributors, have been conducting a school for their employes under the supervision of Mr. Wayne Hearne, sales and efficiency expert, who for a number of years had charge of the efficiency and sales course at the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co. in Detroit, Mich.

Mr. Hearne is accepted as being an authority in educational work of this particular line because his broad and varied experience in the automobile industry practically since its origin. The purpose of the course is to assist all of the organization in better understanding their particular duties and to render better service to the purchasing public.

TBANSCONTINENTAL TRIP SHOWN IN MOVIE

The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. will show moving pictures of the Boston to Boston—by way of San Francisco—Transcontinental Truck trip, at the Empress Theater, at 11 a. m. Wednesday, May 28.

In showing these pictures of the two big three-ton trucks, which crossed the continent twice last fall, the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. is demonstrating the possibilities of motor truck transportation even under the difficulties of present road facilities in some parts of the country.

These pictures show the big trucks operating over the wonderful highways of California, at better than railroad speed, and also, on the other hand, show them plowing through the desert trails where no roads worthy of the name exist. The necessity of hard-surfaced roads and modern bridges is shown in an unmistakable manner.

There can be little question—after seeing these pictures—of the place that the motor truck is going to occupy in taking care of the transportation problems which are facing this country.

These trucks stood the test in remarkable shape, and the big pneumatic tires, which made the trip possible, demonstrated without question their value for long distance hauling, where traction, maximum daily mileage and saving of truck vibration are absolutely necessary.

A great many St. Louisans saw these trucks when they were on the return trip from San Francisco to Boston. They were parked on Twelfth street for two days, after having fought about the hardest battle of their trip across Missouri from Kansas City.

TOWNSEND TO PUSH HIS HIGHWAY BILL

At a conference called by Charles E. Townsend, United States Senator from Michigan and member of the Postoffice and Post Roads Committee, at which were present men prominent in highway and other national welfare movements, including representatives of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the Senator outlined his plans for a reintroduction in Congress of his bill providing for a national highway system and a Federal highway commission.

The feeling was unanimous that the time had come for the adoption of a policy specifically providing for the building outright by the national Government of highways of interstate importance, including those essential to the national defense, and development of the public domain.

The Style and Grace of An Aeroplane

In the Holmes body design the graceful lines of the modern bird body, the swift flying plane, were copied and made practical in a motor car to match its swift, easy riding flight over the road.

And this swift road flight is obtained in a large, roomy, beautifully finished seven-passenger touring car with a body of the finest aluminum, on a gasoline consumption; 18-20 miles to the gallon—

tire service; 10,000 miles to the set.

That a car of such luxury, comfort and style can show such economy of operation, is proof that low operating cost is possible without paying the price of cramped discomfort and restricted carrying capacity.

Dual exhaust valves, with eighteen valves all in the head, are a motor development presented by Arthur Holmes after 16 years of building air-cooled motors for passenger cars—and after his notable work as consulting engineer on aeroplane motors of the air-cooled type for combat use.

They have produced silent operation, and power to carry the touring model over the road at 3 to 50 miles an hour on high gear.

To ride in the Holmes after seeing its Style and Beauty is to carry your impression of a "better built car" still further. A demonstration will leave you dissatisfied with anything but the Holmes.

REO

With Electric Starter and Lights, and on Pneumatic Tires This Reo "Speed Wagon" was the Forerunner of its Type

IN 1915 WHEN this Reo "Speed Wagon" was first introduced, those features—electric starter, electric lights and pneumatic tires—constituted a liability.

TODAY, THEY ARE its greatest asset.

THEN, REO DEALERS said that the one "sales resistance" was the reluctance of buyers to "experiment with pneumatics on a truck."

NOW, THOSE SAME dealers say that it is mainly because of these features that this Reo enjoys such a tremendous popularity and demand.

THEN, THERE WERE only a few Reo "Speed Wagons" in hands of a few daring owners.

NOW, MORE THAN 20,000 in hands of the most conservative and critical class of customers.

THEN, THERE WAS a fear of "punctures and blow-outs."

NOW, THOSE bugbears are forgotten in the light of the great proven efficiency and economy of this Reo.

THEN, EVEN the tire makers were skeptical of this Reo innovation.

NOW, TIRE MAKERS without exception, advocate pneumatics for trucks not only of this type, but up to five tons and over.

THEN, THE AVERAGE buyer considered an electric starter a non-essential and electric lights superfluous.

NOW, HE WOULD as soon buy a "street starting" automobile with kerosene lamps, as a motor truck of that obsolete type.

THEN, ONLY THE REO engineers appreciated the superiority—the greater efficiency, speed, economy and lower upkeep—of a truck mounted on pneumatics.

NOW, RIVAL ENGINEERS are copying this Reo as closely as they can.

THEN, ONLY DRIVERS knew the saving of time and fuel and motor wear effected by the electric starter.

NOW, THE OWNER knows even better—through his cost accountant.

NOR NEED WE NOW show how the working day is lengthened and the radius increased by the electric lighting system—for that, too, is patent.

AGAIN, IS REO "conservative progressiveness" justified.

AGAIN, IS THE LEADERSHIP of Reo shown—and by imitation, that sincerest form of flattery—is the leadership of Reo design and the soundness of Reo engineering proven.

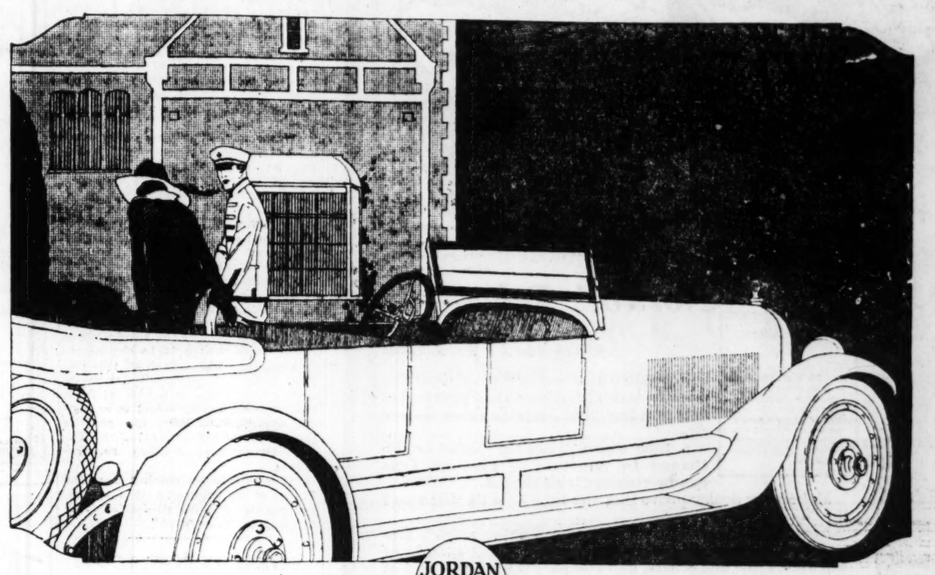
JORDAN



You cannot afford to carry extra weight

THE extremely light car of short wheelbase vibrates up and down. The extremely heavy car, whose wheelbase also is short considering its weight, cannot escape the wear and tear of side sway.

You cannot afford to carry extra weight. Yet who would sacrifice it at the cost of jerky up and down vibration?

The Jordan Silhouette has banished both difficulties forever.

It is the lightest car on the road for its wheelbase.

Yet it possesses that peculiar balance which cannot be attained in cars weighing twelve to fifteen hundred pounds more—nor in extremely light, short cars.

Its whole tendency is toward forward movement.

It is a new kind of a car. And heralding the new, it has naturally marked the passing of the old.

Picture the perfectly balanced chassis of finished mechanical excellence equipped with this new custom style all-aluminum body.

Picture the new European wide-opening doors—the rectangular mouldings—the smart French angle at the dash—the cocky seat cowl—the perfectly straight flat top edge—the distinctly different fenders—the tall hood with twenty-nine louvers—the slanting sport-type wind shield—the gun metal instrument board—the artistic hardware—the floor rugs of velvet texture—the tailored top—the cordovan leather boot and saddle bag built into the tonneau.

Imagine stepping into this car—sinking down at a perfect comfort angle with knees not too high, wheel and pedals just where you want them, arm rests just right—and slipping away—with no bouncing—no jouncing—no side sway.

Such is the new Jordan Silhouette.

Built in both four and seven passenger. Optional colors Brewster Green and Burgundy Old Wine.

"The automobile thieving profession is a great deal more lucrative and not nearly so daring as the old-time stage coach and express train holdups, judging from the statistics just released.

"These statistics reveal that more than 100,000 motor cars are stolen annually. This number is far greater than the combined output of five big plants, and the production managers, executives and sales force of these plants would feel a great relaxation if they had for their production the number of motor cars stolen in the United States each year.

"After an exhaustive study and careful investigation of locking devices to protect motor cars from being stolen, those agencies have decided that the transmission type of lock will foil the joy rider and prove a stumbling block to the professional thief, for he will have to cart around a tool kit or more tools that his pockets can carry without bulging out, which would attract unsual attention, and even they would not avail him much.

"This lock is the integral type, and is a built-in part of the transmission cover, from which it is impossible to separate. The action of this device is to lock securely the gear-shift lever solidly in a neutral position, making it impossible to engage the transmission gear, but permits the car to comply with all of the Police Department traffice requirements.

"It is this device coming from the brains of its engineers, that is preventing the thieving profession from thriving on Paige cars."

SAYERS SIX IN ST. LOUIS.

H. P. Federspiel, president of the Southern Motor Co., has returned from Cincinnati, where he completed arrangements for handling the Sayers Six, heretofore not seen on St. Louis streets. The car is made by the Sayers-Scoville Co. of Cincinnati, who for over 43 years have been known as builders of high-class vehicles. For 33 years this company manufactured buggies and carriages, but for the last 10 years have devoted their plant very largely to the building of hearses, ambulances and sedans for the undertakers' trade. Four years ago the first Sayers six-passenger car was produced.

This year, in spite of the overwhelming demand for automobiles, the Sayers-Scoville Co. refuses to be hurried into volume production, insisting that each car receive the same careful individual care which has gone into each car in previous years. With the closing of this contract with the Southern Motor Co., the manufacturer's entire output for this year is sold.

The first shipment of cars now on display by the Southern Motor Co. at 3019 Locust street shows in every detail the quality for which the manufacturer is famous. Three touring cars in special colors are being shown. The car sells at $1695 f. o. b. Cincinnati.

The Southern Motor Co. continues to handle the Grant Six and the National Six and 12, and feels that the addition of the Sayers makes it possible to please any purchaser of an automobile regardless of the amount of money he wishes to invest.

JORDAN COIL SPRING FOR BAD DRIVING

Motorists who viewed for the first time the new Jordan models now on the floor of the Saint Louis Motor Car Co., discovered several new improvements to the chassis. Most of these improvements can be classed as refinements rather than improvements, because the Jordan chassis is still the same in its essentials, made up of the best universally approved units.

Not satisfied with an aluminum body to eliminate the most annoying rattles, the Jordan company adopted a patented spring device which now practically eliminates "the last squeak." The device consists of the two coiled springs, one on each side of the main spring, with ground steel washers inserted between the chassis spring and the coiled spring to provide good wearing surface. A self-adjusting grease cover incloses the coiled springs. The whole device is packed with graphite grease.

Specially designed rear springs allow the car to hang lower, which is always a factor in improving the looks of a car. The springs have been designed, too, for fast driving over rough roads.

PROMISE OF DELIVERIES.

H. L. Schnure, president of the Velie Automobile Co. of St. Louis, who just returned from a trip to the Scripps-Booth and Velie factories, reports that conditions are very promising for better deliveries.

The Scripps-Booth factory reached 49 cars per day as the top of their production during the past week. They expect to better this soon, and in so doing will be able to take good care of the dealers.

The Velie officials are just completing their war contract for the production of Liberty trucks and expect to have a substantial increase in their production.

NOVEL SERVICE SYSTEM.

The Moerschell Electric and Auto Supply Co. has installed a novel system in its service department. When a car is brought into the shop or service yard for battery change, an expert service man quietly looks it over and puts a tag on it and then carefully wipes off the grease from the steering wheel. The tag shows to the owner waiting for his battery that water was put in his radiator; whether or not oil is needed; a test is made of the generator, the starting motor, the lights, the ignition, the spark plugs and the battery terminals. These and other conditions are shown on the card.

NEW ACCESSORY HOUSE.

An automobile accessory and supply business is being established at 1129 Locust street by the Times Square Automobile Supply Co. The opening will be held Monday, June 2. A complete and large line of supplies and standard accessories will be carried. The Times Square company now operates 27 stores in as many cities.

OVERLAND FOR RAFFLE

The retail sales department of the Overland Automobile Co. of St. Louis has sold to the Benish Restaurant Co. a specially painted model 89 Willys "six" touring car. Every diner at the Benish restaurant is to receive a numbered coupon and the holder of the lucky number will be awarded the car when the drawing occurs.

100 SMOOTH HAIR CUTS for $1.00

SAVE $49.00 ON HAIR CUTS WITH NEW DUPLEX STROPPING ATTACHMENT

$2.00 Duplex Hair Cutter and Stropper Complete Outfit for Only $1.00

PATENTED OCT. 8, 1918

We have felt for some time that if the thousands of users of the Duplex Automatic Hair Cutter could strop and sharpen their own cutting blades, the Duplex would be more satisfactory. After considerable experimental work, we now have a perfect stropping attachment whereby anyone can put all four cutting edges in proper shape in a minute. We have found that at least 100 perfect hair-cuts can be obtained from these blades by proper stropping.

100 HAIR-CUTS AT THE BARBER'S, COST.....$5.00
100 HAIR-CUTS WITH A DUPLEX, COST.....1.00
SAVING.....$4.00

Isn't that worth while? Besides the cash saving there are many other advantages. You can cut your hair in less than five minutes, any time you want to, instead of wasting hours at the barber shop. No danger of catching scurvy, dandruff or other diseases. Mothers can cut their children's hair. And you are sure of a smooth, even hair-cut at a cost of one cent, instead of paying from 35c to 50c for one that is likely to be uneven and jagged.

You Can't Go Wrong With a Duplex—The Slanting Teeth Won't Let You.

The regular price of the Duplex Hair Cutter with stropping attachment is $2.00. But to readers of "The Post-Dispatch" who order IMMEDIATELY, and send this ad with only $1.00, we will send the complete outfit with stropper all ready for instant use, postage paid to any address. Don't delay—send only one dollar for stropper and Duplex Hair Cutter. This whole wonderful outfit complete at half price. The price of all metals is going up and harder to get at any price. We will be forced to charge the full price of $2.00 in our next advertisement. Agents wanted. DUPLEX MANUFACTURING CO., Dept. B18, Detroit, Mich.

CONDENSED HISTORY OF THE 124TH FIELD ARTILLERY BY ITS FORMER COMMANDER

Organization Attached to 33rd Division, Now on Its Way Home From France, Drew More Than Half Its Members From East St. Louis.

A CONDENSED history of the 124th Field Artillery, Thirty-third Division, which was organized in East St. Louis and took more than one-half its membership from that city, and which is now on its way home from France, being scheduled to arrive in New York today, has been prepared for the Post-Dispatch by Col. Horatio B Hackett, its former commander.

Col. Hackett was severely wounded Sept. 28, the third day of the Argonne offensive, and is now under treatment in the United States Army General Hospital No. 40, 5800 Arsenal street, St. Louis. His principal wound is in the jaw, and bone-grafting has been necessary. He is 39 years old, married, and lives in Chicago, where he was formerly connected with the architectural office of D. H. Burnham. He is a West Point graduate, and served with the regular army three years.

The names of 17 members of the 124th who were killed in action, and of eight who received the Distinguished Service Cross, appear in Col. Hackett's record, which is as follows:

By COL. HORATIO B. HACKETT.

JULY 23, 1917, the State of Illinois organized the Third Illinois Field Artillery, composed of one battery from Springfield, one from Peoria, one from Champaign and three batteries, Headquarters Company and Supply Company from East St. Louis. Col. Gordon Strong, at that time Lieutenant-Colonel of the 108th Engineers, was placed in command, with Lieutenant-Colonel Horatio B. Hackett second in command.

The regiment was mustered into Federal service Aug. 4, 1917, and its designation changed to 124th Field Artillery. It formed part of the Fifty-eighth Artillery Brigade of the Thirty-third Division. Brigadier Henry Todd Jr. was in command of the Artillery Brigade, and Major-General George Bell Jr. was in command of the division. The Fifty-eighth Artillery Brigade was composed of the 122d Field Artillery, Col. Milton Foreman commanding; the 123d Field Artillery under the command of Col. Davis, and the 124th Field Artillery under the command of Col. Hackett, and the 108th Trench Mortar, Capt. Henry Kraft commanding.

The regiment assembled at Springfield, and about Sept. 8 was ordered to Camp Logan, Houston, Tex., for training.

Illness Forced Strong to Retire.

In the middle of September Col. Strong became seriously ill and was forced to resign on account of physical disability. His illness can be directly attributed to the great amount of energy, labor and time he spent in the first days of the organization of the regiment. Col. Strong, after recovering from his illness, attended an officers' training camp and later accepted a commission as Major of Artillery in the Officers' Reserve Corps, thereby showing his intense patriotism in his desire to get into the service, even though he had to accept a lower grade than the one he formerly held. Lieutenant-Colonel Hackett was promoted to the rank of Colonel, and placed in command of the regiment, and remained in command until he was wounded Sept. 28 in the Argonne offensive.

The regiment remained at Camp Logan until May 15, 1918, when it proceeded to Camp Merritt, N. Y., and embarked on the S. S. Melita May 20 for Liverpool, arriving there June 8. From Liverpool it proceeded to Winchester, England, at a rest camp for two days, then to Southampton, England, where it embarked for Le Havre, France. From Le Havre it proceeded by rail to Ornans, France, a small town near Besancon in the Eastern part of France near the Swiss border. It remained at Ornans for four weeks and then moved to Camp Valdahon for target practice and further training. After a very complete course in firing barages, destruction firing and night firing, the regiment was pronounced ready for the front. It left Camp Valdahon by train Aug. 22. The batteries loaded at Besancon, while the Supply Company and Headquarters Company loaded at Valdahon and left at 9 p. m. The regiment passed through Besancon, Vesoul, Epinal, Nancy, Toul and detrained at Pagny-sur-Meuse and Foug, Aug. 23, at 7:30 p. m., with 30 minutes to unload because of the danger of German air raids. Marched outside the town for supper along the roadside and then to Ecrouves, via Foug, where the men were billited for the day. Arrived there about 2:30 a. m., Aug. 24.

The Montsec Drive.

Left Ecrouve 7:00 p. m., Aug. 24, and marched northward through Boucq to the Foret de la Reine, arriving at 4:30 a. m. Regiment camped in woods while battery positions were being prepared around Bouconville. The batteries entered these positions the night of Sept. 19.

Regiment attached to the 1st Division for the drive on Montsec, supporting the 18th Infantry. The drive began with a heavy barrage, 1:00 a. m., Sept. 12. Montsec surrounded and taken. Orders to cease firing and to move to new positions given at 11:30 a. m. Batteries moved near Xivrey and from there to Nonsard. Arrived at Nonsard 12:30 a. m., Sept. 13, and spent the night there. Town under shell fire. Whole 1st Division withdrawn from the battle Sept. 14, and the regiment marched back to the woods near Gironville that night, where the Supply Company, Headquarters Company and the Personnel Department joined them, marching from Broussey 5 p. m., Sept. 15.

At 9 p. m., Sept. 15, the whole regiment moved out, marching via St. Julian, Pont-sur-Meuse, Sanpigny, Koeur le Petit, Koeur de Grande, to the Foret des Koeurs, where they encamped for the day. Broke camp at 8:45 p. m., Sept. 16, and marched to Nicey, arriving at 1:30 a. m. Left at 6:45 p. m., Sept. 17, and marched through Pierrefitte to Seracourt, where they encamped at 2:30 a. m. Left at 6:45, Sept. 18, and marched via Nubecourt, Fleury, to the woods just east of Waly, arriving at 2:30 a. m., Sept. 19. Spent two days encamped in the woods there and moved out at 6:45 p. m., Sept. 21. Arrived at Parois 12:30 a. m., Sept. 22. The batteries marched on beyond and took up their positions northeast of Neuvilly, near the Bertraine Farm, while the Personnel

Low Cost of Packard Reserve Power

Here is a scientific principle many a motorist overlooks. No matter how fast or how slow you want to go, you cannot go right unless your car has reserve power—rightly applied. Until a man has driven the Packard Twin Six he will never know exactly what that means.

WITH everybody reading about motors, talking about motors, swapping motor experiences, you might suppose that the basic facts of motor engineering would be generally known by this time.

Yet even such a fundamental principle as the economic value of reserve power is not understood by one motorist in ten.

Some car owners take years to wake up to what it is costing them to compromise in the matter of power.

Why should a man have to wear out one compromise car after another before he learns that it costs more to operate such a car than a car of high reserve power?

The man who has been through it all knows that the very reason why the Packard is good for 75 miles an hour is the reason why 25 miles an hour day after day costs less from the Packard than from the car of lower power.

In the Packard—the power is there—in reserve.

It costs you nothing unless you use it.

You call on it when you want it—and not unless you do want it.

The Packard Twin Six engine is a motor of live moving parts. Power is used only in moving the car—not in excess merely to keep the engine turning over.

The basic design of the Packard Twin Six motor has been wonderfully justified during the past few years of both peace and war work, so that any changes that may be made from time to time will be merely in the nature of refinements.

The Packard people are transportation experts. They have more to tell you on this subject than any other organization in the world. You can ask them to discuss your car problem without obligation. It is to your interest and profit to do so.

CONDENSED HISTORY OF 124TH FIELD ARTILLERY BY FORMER COMMANDER

Department, Headquarters Company and Supply Company were billeted in Parois.

The Germans, thinking the allied drive about to start, laid down a heavy barrage at 5 a. m., Sept. 24, and another at 11 p. m., Sept. 25. The American drive began with a heavy barrage at 2:30 a. m., Sept. 26. The 124th Field Artillery was attached to the Ninety-first Division for this drive. The batteries fired until afternoon, and then moved forward from their original positions near the Bertraine farm and Hill 290 to positions south of Very; the Second Battalion taking up positions on the left side of the road and the First Battalion on the right side. Capt. Moore's battery, Battery E, took up a forward position between Epinonville and Eolis-fontaine, and used direct fire on the enemy. The rest of the Second Battalion moved up to positions two kilometers north of Very, Sept. 29. The First Battalion moved to the Second Battalion positions late that day, and the Second Battalion then moved to positions just west of Epinonville. Col. Hackett was wounded Sept. 28, at ninety-first P. C., one-half kilometer south of Very. Capt. Sercomb, in charge of Battery F, was wounded about 6 p. m., Sept. 30, and died on the way to the hospital. He attempted to get his men under cover before seeking cover himself. In losing Capt. Sercomb, the regiment lost one of its most efficient officers. He was at all times an officer and a gentleman, and the regiment will always hold his memory in the highest esteem.

The second phase of the drive began at 2:30 a. m., Oct. 4, with the firing batteries still in the positions of Sept. 29. The regiment attached to the 32d Division for this part of the drive. Lieutenant-Colonel J. A. Rogers assumed command of the regiment Oct. 4. "Firing of Battery D on crossroads congratulated," on Oct. 7 this message was received from Brigade P. C. Lieut. Hobart A. Lawton, and seven men of Battery F killed by one shell, Oct. 7. The regiment was again unfortunate in losing one of its brightest and most efficient officers. Regiment relieved Oct. 11. Up to this time the casualties were: Officers—Wounded, 3; killed, 2. Men—Wounded, 53; killed, 9.

Back Into Camp.

The whole regiment, once more a unit, moved into Camp du Bois de Brocourt Oct. 15. Assigned to First Army Artillery Regimental Headquarters, located in Brocourt. Seventy-nine replacements arrived Oct. 20; 36 Oct. 22.

Regiment inspected by French and American officers. Oct. 18 entire brigade passed in review before Major-General McNair, U. S. A., Oct. 19. Left Camp du Bois de Brocourt 1:30 p. m., Oct. 24, and camped at Very crossroads 10:30 p. m. Headquarters Company and Personnel De-

Their Pride Is a Deeper Thing

The fact that an Overland Model 90 stock car broke the world's non-stop high gear record, does not add to the pride of Model 90 owners.

Their pride is a deeper thing. It has developed through weeks and months and years of wonderful personal experience with Model 90 cars, under the trying conditions of every days demands.

It means something to every man, of course, to know that his car is an exact duplicate of the Model 90 that smashed the world's record.

But the great satisfaction is in knowing as Model 90 owners know, that your car looks and performs as a thoroughbred car should, everywhere, all the time.

To really know how well a car can be built for $985.00 you must know Model 90.

Double Mileage Possible By New Principle in Tire Building

Double mileage, with puncture-proof guarantee!

That's what a new principle in tire construction has given the American motorist.

It's an idea that has taken the tire troubles out of the travels of owners of more than 500,000 automobiles in the United States.

It is putting Gates Half-Sole Tires on fleets of delivery cars from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Car-owners everywhere are getting 5,000 to 15,000 more miles than they've ever received from their tires before.

Every Gates Half-Sole Tire is sold with a Gates guarantee—a stronger mileage and puncture proof guarantee than you've ever had on any other tire.

Only a new principle in tire construction could make a guarantee like this possible. And the same principle gives you a tire that looks better and is better—at half the cost of other tires.

CONDENSED HISTORY OF 124TH FIELD ARTILLERY BY FORMER COMMANDER

partment moved back west of Romagne, Oct. 25. Regiment attached to 89th Division for the drive. P. C. Rogers, near La Tullerie Farm. Echelons, near Gesnes.

The batteries immediately got into the fight, firing 3600 rounds of No. 9 gas shells the night of Oct. 28-29. Subjected to heavy enemy shell fire while in these positions. Lieut. Stevenson P. Lewis killed Oct. 31. Lieut. Stevenson had been decorated with the Croix de Guerre before coming to the regiment, and was a fearless, capable officer. The drive began with an unusually heavy preparatory fire, 3:30 a. m., Nov. 1. Rolling barrage started at 5:30 a. m., and firing continued until 1:30 p. m. First Battalion moved to 1 kilometer east of Ramonville at 1:30 p. m. Second Battalion at 5 p. m. to positions along the Bentheville-Ramonville road near the D'Huy Farm. A second rolling barrage was fired at 5:30 a. m., Nov. 2, and still another at 10 a. m. Harassing fire throughout the day. The Second Battalion moved to positions 3 kilometers north of Ramonville at 6 p. m.

The First Battalion fired 409 rounds before 5 a. m., Nov. 3, on the Bois de Tailly. Left at 6 a. m. for positions north of Barricourt, near Tailly. The Second Battalion left at 10 p. m., Nov. 3, and arrived near Tailly at 2:00 a. m., Nov. 4th. Both battalions left at 5 p. m. and moved to positions north of Beauclair.

Again Under Heavy Fire.

Both battalions left Beauclair at 5 p. m., Nov. 5, and moved via Laneuville to positions northwest of Laneuville. Heavily shelled en route. Positions even ahead of the infantry. Spent the night in woods until Nov. 6, when the batteries took up positions along the Laneuville-Beaumont road—the First Battalion on the south side of the road; the Second Battalion on the north side. Heavy enemy shellfire on all roads leading to the battery positions. Positions unchanged, with all roads under direct enemy shellfire until the armistice became effective 11 a. m., Nov. 11.

The total casualties to date were: Officers—Wounded, 3; killed, 3. Enlisted men—Severely wounded, 41; slightly wounded, 66; severely gassed, 19.

Col. A. L. Keesling, assumed command of the regiment Nov. 12.

Batteries finally withdrawn Nov. 18, when the whole regiment, once more a unit, moved into billets—First Battalion and Battery F of the Second Battalion billeted in Siseppe, and the remaining batteries of the Second Battalion in Ville Franche. The regiment afterward became a part of the army o foccupation, and was stationed at Luxemburg up to the time it started for home in the early part of May.

In the St. Mihiel offensive the regimental position was on the front line of trenches, where the infantry had its "jumping off place," or where it "went over the top."

In the Argonne the battery positions averaged 500 yards behind the infantry front line, and often a battery would be in the front line, using direct fire on the enemy, just like machine guns. On Nov. 5, at Laneucourt, it took a position at night which was in advance of the infantry outposts.

The list of casualties, which are very high for an artillery regiment, shows that the regiment was under heavy German fire during most of the Argonne offensive. But in spite of this, the men of the regiment performed all the duties required of them to the entire satisfaction of the regimental, brigade and division commanders. They were cheerful under trying, uncomfortable and adverse conditions, cool and brave under fire and at all times showed by the accuracy of their fire a high grade of intelligence and efficiency. One officer and eight enlisted men were awarded the D. S. C. for exceptional bravery.

Work of Brigade Praised.

The work of the brigade as a whole has been highly praised by all who have come into contact with it, and it can be safely said that the work it has accomplished has not been excelled by any artillery brigade in the A. E. F., either regular, national guard or National Army.

In the brigade commander, Brigadier Henry Todd Jr., it had a capable, experienced and intelligent officer who was respected and esteemed by all those under his command. It was due to his administration of the work of the brigade that such excellent results were obtained.

The brigade received quite a few citations, which are given below. The first was after the St. Mihiel offensive, was from the chief of the First Division, was dated Sept. 14, and was as follows:

"The Division Commander desires me to express to you and all the officers and men of the Fifty-eighth Field Artillery Brigade his commendation of your gallant conduct in the recent operation in the St. Mihiel salient. The loyalty and devotion exhibited in the moving forward of your batteries over the most difficult country under the worst weather conditions are worthy of the best traditions of the Field Artilery. The skill and efficiency with which the guns were served are evidences of the high standard that obtains in the brigade."

Gen. Summerall at that time was commander of the First Division. From headquarters of the First Army Corps under date of Sept. 17 Major-General Dicksen forwarded the following telegram from Gen. Pershing: "Please accept my sincere congratulations on the successful and important part taken by the officers and men of the Fourth Corps in the first offensive of the First American Army Sept. 12 and 13. The courageous dash and vigor of our troops has thrilled our countrymen and evoked the enthusiasm of our allies. Please convey to your command my heartfelt appreciation of their splendid work. I am proud of you all."

After Argonne Had Begun.

The next was after the beginning of the Argonne offensive and was from Brigadier-General Edwin B. Winans, commanding the Sixty-fourth Infantry Brigade, dated Oct. 10. It says: "I desire to express my utmost satisfaction with the artillery support rendered by your Fifty-eighth Artillery Brigade in connection with the successful attack and capture by the Sixty-fourth Infantry Brigade of the Bois de la Morine, the Boise du Chene Sec and the town of Cesnes. In this operation the barrage was precise and exactly timed, the destructive and counter battery fire effective and the fire on fleeting targets prompt and accurate. The effective liaison established by your liaison officers, Lieuts. Shields and Hunter, is deserving of high commendation. It will no doubt gratify you to know that not a single report of friendly 'shorts' was received during this operation."

Gen. Winans commanded one of the brigades of the Thirty-second Division. Our next commendatory letter, under date of Oct. 25, also came from the Thirty-second Division, from Brigadier-General Frank McCoy, commander of the Sixty-Third Brigade. He said in a letter, addressed to Gen. Todd: "During the first few days of the operation of my brigade against Kriemelide Steilung, in front of Romagne, I had the very effective support of your brigade of field artillery, and I wish to express my appreciation to both yourself and your Colonels. I was keenly conscious of this support, not only when asked, but of the quick and fine initiative of yourself and staff which made it a pleasure and satisfaction to work together."

Brigade Commander's Letter.

Finally, Nov. 5, Brigadier-General Dwight E. Aultman, Chief of Artillery of the Fifth Army Corps, sent the following letter to Gen. Todd:

"I transmit herewith letter of commendation from the corps commander, regarding the action of the artillery in the operation Nov. 1.

"In transmitting this letter, I desire to add my own thanks and appreciation to you and to the officers and men of your brigade for the full-size tubes

Actual photograph showing difference in width between Michelin Tubes and other tubes.

Michelin Tubes being made full-sized fill the inside of the casing even before inflation.

Other tubes, being smaller in diameter than Michelins, must be stretched by inflation to fill the casing. The flexing of these stretched tubes under constant tension when inflated causes destructive heating which kills all the natural life and resiliency of the rubber, making it porous and less resistant to cuts and punctures.

Michelin Tubes, being full-sized, are free from these disadvantages. Insist on Michelins—the full-sized inner tubes.

hearty co-operation that has resulted in such a brilliant success.

"To have enabled our Infantry to advance in one day over a distance of nine kilometres, with small losses, capturing over 100 guns, 200 machine guns and more than 2000 prisoners, is an achievement of which the artillery may well be proud, and I congratulate your entire command on having so well performed its share in the operation.

"I desire that the contents of the letter of the corps' commander be made known to the officers and the men of your command, as well as my own appreciation of their splendid conduct."

From the Corps' Commander.

The letter referred to from Major-General Summerall, commanding the Fifth Army Corps, follows:

"I desire to convey to you, and to the officers and soldiers of all artillery serving in this corps, my profound appreciation and my high admiration of the brilliant manner in which the artillery of all classes has performed the difficult tasks allotted to it. Especially during the advance on Nov. 1.

"Although the artillery had been constantly in actious, day and night, sustaining the battle since the beginning of the present offensive, it has responded with a self-sacrificing devotion to duty and a superb efficiency that is beyond all praise. While our dauntless infantry has advanced against the enemy's prepared positions with a courage that elicits our greatest admiration, it must be recognized that without the powerful and skillful co-operation of the artillery, it would have been impossible to accomplish the results which they have so brilliantly achieved.

"The tremendous volume of fire, the skillful arrangement of all objectives, and the perfect co-ordination with the infantry and machine guns have made the action of Nov. 1 a model of completeness, and, it must be stated, a tribute to the able administrative officers, who conceived the plan, and to the technical ability and the fidelity to duty of those who executed them.

"I beg that you will convey to the officers and soldiers of all units of artillery the foregoing sentiment, and will assure them of my abiding wishes for their continued success in the campaigns that lie before them."

Those Who Got the D. S. C.

The following named men of the 124th Field Artillery were awarded Distinguished Service Crosses: Private First Class Ralph Silloway, Battery C; Sergt. Joseph D. Cassidy, Battery C; Sergt. Clarence L. Wright, Battery C; Private Milton C. Webb, Medical Detachment; First Lieutenant Mark M. Duffy, Medical Detachment; Private Perry F. Modrow, Medical Detachment; Sergt. George H. Ammons, Battery A Private William H. Fink, Battery A.

The following named men of the 124th Field Artillery were killed in action:

Capt. Albert A. Sercomb, Battery F; Lieut. Stevenson P. Lewis, Battery E; Sergt. Ulysses C. Fletcher, B; Corp. James E. Buxton, F; Mechanic Floyd Anderson, F; Mechanic Stern C. Cole, B; Private William T. Goodwin, F; Private Alfred A. Foehner, Private (first class), Richard C. Howell, F; Private William Hilliard, F; Private Peter N. Hurst, F; Private (first class) Burt F. Reynolds, F; Private Charles J. Hays, E; Private (first class) William A. Lambersky, E; Private Alfred N. Allen, B; Private William Lyman, A; and Private Douglas R. Mathews, F.

We will ever hold dear the memory of those, who so gallantly gave their lives in order that their loved ones at home might be safe from a fate similar to that of Belgium.

There is no better epitaph on any man's grave than the one: "He Died in the Service of His Country." By this death they demonstrated to the world the invincibility of the United States, and we will always be proud of them.

GRACE-HOLY CROSS CHURCH TO OBSERVE 75TH ANNIVERSARY

Celebration Will Last From June 1 to June 8; All Former Members Urged to Participate.

An event of historic and civic interest will be the week celebration of Grace-Holy Cross Episcopal Church, June 1 to 8, in honor of the 75th anniversary of the church.

Many prominent families of St. Louis have been associated with the church, and on its register are to be found names of men conspicuous in business, educational and professional life.

The Rev. Carl Reed Taylor, rector, is desirous that all who formerly were associated with the church take part in the anniversary celebration, and will be glad to have them write to him at 2600 North Twelfth street, or phone Tyler 1248.

Wednesday, June 3, will be Home Coming Day, with a reception for Bishop Tuttle and the clergy of the city, and a reunion of members of the parish. Bishop Tuttle will preach the closing day of the celebration, Sunday, June 8.

Friday, June 6, will be Men's Day, with a welcome home celebration for the returned soldiers and sailors of the neighborhood. Women's Day, Boy Scouts and Boy Club Day, and Children's Day, will be observed.

Holy Cross House, the social settlement of the church, at 2601 North Eleventh street, is a factor for betterment of living and social conditions in the northern part of the city, and includes among its activities a dispensary, kindergarten, milk station and clubs for men, women and children.

TRADE REPRESENTATIVE COMING

R. S. Barrett, U. S. Agent at Buenos Aires, to Be Here Tuesday.

Robert S. Barrett, who has been attached to the American Embassy at Buenos Aires, Argentina, as representative of the Department of Commerce and the Shipping and War Trade Boards for over a year, will be in St. Louis Tuesday and Wednesday to confer with business men interested in trade with Argentina and other South American countries.

Barrett has had extensive and varied experience in South American countries and firms wishing to interview him regarding trade conditions in those countries may get in touch with him at the local office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, 402 Third National Bank Building, where he will make his headquarters while in this city.

Barrett will also address a luncheon meeting given in his honor by the exporters of St. Louis under the auspices of the Foreign Trade Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce at the American Hotel Annex Tuesday.

THE 89TH DIVISION IN THE GREAT WAR

How the Division Which Was Organized at Camp Funston Fought at St. Mihiel and in Argonne Up to 11 a. m. Armistice Day

By Lieut. H. R. Palmer,

Who Has Been an Officer in the Division Since its Organization

(Lieut. Palmer's story is divided into five parts as follows:

Chapter 1—The Eighty-ninth Division's part in the Army of Occupation of German territory. This chapter tells how the past winter was spent and of the athletic victories of the division.

Chapter 2—The Eighty-ninth Division's part in the Meuse-Argonne battle, from Oct. 10 up to the minute the armistice went into effect at 11 a. m., Nov. 11.

Chapter 3—The Eighty-ninth Division's part in the operation for the reduction of the St. Mihiel salient. This was its first taste of battle.

Chapter 4—The work of the 177th Artillery Brigade.

Chapter 5—The incidents for which men of the division won their fine list of Medals of Honor, Distinguished Service Crosses and French decorations.)

HEADQUARTERS EIGHTY-NINTH DIVISION,
ARMY OF OCCUPATION, KYLLBURG, Germany, May 1.

The writers of this story number about 25,000. That takes in everybody in the Eighty-ninth Division.

And this is the way of it. From the very first, every khakied one of us has longed to put the war on paper. Others had seen before us, but with dull eyes, we fancied. They had failed in the telling. No doubt the thing was too big for them to grasp. Evidently their perspective was awry. And anybody knows that the first principle in the proper word painting of world wars is to keep the perspective true. An inexcusable mistake. We would be calm and avoid it.

There was that autumn night we first saw the white-hot flare of the guns on the skyline of the St. Mihiel front, flashing like heat lightning among the hills. It was in pantomime as yet. We were too far away for the voice of the tumult. But we would be nearer soon, close enough for impressions about which something would have to be written. The inspiration already was tugging at the typewriter keys and it was—well, it was a very inspiring inspiration. No doubt as it developed it would prove to be just what we had expected all along—a unique inspiration, the kind that could come only to the mind that was prepared to handle it scientifically and systematically.

We drew nearer to the wonder scene. The white road passed by shattered piles of masonry—the mutilated bodies of murdered villages. Over trenches and shell craters it led and through fields where men had planted steel and lead and wire and death had harvested the sowers. The ground was strewn with the horrible rubbish scattered by irrational men. The guns—at last we could hear them.

Now for the perspective! Where was it? Nowhere in sight. That's the trouble with perspectives. They're never around when they're wanted. But, after all, nobody could expect a self-respecting perspective to dwell in all directions that appeared to be irrelevant to the grand spectacle as a whole. No doubt the perspective, frightened, had taken wing and flown to the heights.

It would be better then, to wait until we could get up on some commanding hilltop, where we could have a Gettysburg panorama view of the whole drama. After such a survey we could compose a war masterpiece that would be sung by an international chorus of printing presses. It would be translated into 38 languages, including A. E. F. French. It might penetrate even to the Forbidden City and cause an extra edition of the Thibet Tiller & Toiler.

Heavy Tonnage of Aerial Traffic.

Not a chance. It became apparent immediately that "commanding hilltops" were not being used, promiscuously, for rubber-neck purposes at the front. Observation posts there had to be, of course. And the observers gamely used them. It was not, however, especially popular entertainment. There was no stampede by the panorama fans for tickets to the grandstand. It was deemed more—er—wholesame to get behind places, if one could. Never on top of them. On exposed crests the atmosphere was not healthful. It was too full of things. The traffic in aerial express tonnage was heavy and it appeared to be always more or less congested. One instinctively tried to arrange it so that none of those roaring, whining, snarling things would, on reaching its destination, find its chosen atmospheric berth occupied by his anatomy or any part thereof.

Below, in the trenches, the perspective was not comprehensive at all. The scope of the individual horizon in the late war was very narrow. Moreover, modern warfare, in trenches, is full of whizzing incidents that keep one jumping about all the time. This has a tendency to prevent a proper focusing on events.

Thus it came about that neither at St. Mihiel nor at the Argonne-Meuse front did a diagnosis of one's immediate intentions disclose any pronounced symptoms of sight-seeing mania. Nobody had a panoramic view except a few men far back at General Headquarters, who spent their time poring over maps and telegrams. And these men know how to keep secrets

But even if one had been able to collect some information as to what it was all about and had succeeded in catching the elusive perspective, there was that iron-bound, moss-covered censor. What chance had Herodotus or Xenophon with a two-ton censorship ball and chain attached to his wrists?

However, the thing that hit the inspiration the hardest blow of all was the fact that there was ever something else to do. A bridgeless river bobbed up to be crossed; a wood had to be mopped up; a town taken; a barrage put down; a road built; broken telephone wires strung; supplies brought up; wounded cared for. Or, if nothing else, there was "the old mule" to be looked after. Always something. Finally the inspiration and the perspective both suffered a fatal attack of smothering.

But the other day it was decided by the rest of us to let a few of us do the writing job for all of us. On a "commanding hilltop" at last. Figuratively, of course. In reality it is a second floor window corner in a Kyllburg "mansion" where the fumes of cabbage incense, burned from a long, ancestral way back and up to and including now, are omnipresent. But here, now that the battles are marching six months in the rear, the wily perspective is finally a prisoner and a view of the whole is obtainable. With the aid of maps, photographs, reports, orders, reminiscences, etc., we can try to link up the 25,000 individual views, fill in an obscured hiatus here and there and endeavor to spread out the pieced-together picture in panorama form. And if this typewriter ribbon holds out, you folks back home shall have the story of what the Eighty-ninth Division was told to do and how it tried to do it and what we thought about it all and what we were up to this winter in the conquered land. It will not, it is understood on good authority, be the masterpiece originally planned by each of us, but it will tell a lot of things.

Something else, please. Most of us will come sailing back to you very soon. Probably by the time you read the Eighty-ninth will have realized its hope to be a late May candidate on the "Home, Sweet Home" schedule of the A. E. F. Put her in high and step on her tail, old Father Time.

"Doughboys" of the Eighty-ninth long for a chance to leap up on the Statue of Liberty and smack the lady one right on her nose. We are all hungry for the things that will follow the taste of sea salt.

We of the Eighty-ninth, who are coming home, sincerely feel that we have done nothing especially heroic. We simply did what we were told to do. We know we could do our part much better if we had a chance to do it again. They have told us that the part of the big job Over Here which was assigned to the Eighty-ninth, was of vital importance to the success of allied arms. We feel gratified, even elated, over that. Certainly we did not want to be in the "villagers, peasants, spectators, etc." department of this all-star cast. But those of us who are coming home were not and are not and never will be "heroes" in our own eyes.

Heroes Who Stayed in France.

Yet we have our heroes of the Eighty-ninth. Not soon shall we or shall you forget them. But they will not ride the homebound ships. We shall leave them Over Here. These, our dead, number 1686 officers and enlisted men. They earned an eternal glory beyond the reach of our highest thinking. Their bodies sleep in France. And the rest of us have not earned the right to know to what heights of satisfaction their souls are soaring.

The wounded of the 89th number 7394. Our hats are off to these. They laughed at death. Those who could be patched up came briskly back to the front, happy to be called from the sidelines for another chance at a touchdown. The others, permanently declared out of the game by Fate and the Referee, are long since at home, gamely taking the medicine that old Dr. Chance prescribed.

The 89th has a praiseworthy list of decorated, too. Congressional Medals of Honor were awarded to 8; Distinguished Service Crosses were earned by 68, and 16 received the French Croix de Guerre. You will find them modest heroes. The official citations tell of their deeds, but if you ask one of them to relate to you the adventure behind his medal, you probably will get some such reply as this:

"Aw, I didn't do anything: Just had a little luck, that's all."

What makes a hero? What is bravery in battle? How does it feel to be under fire? What influence is mighty enough to force a sane man against a massed whirlwind of bullets and shrieking shells and terrific explosions? Let's analyze.

Take any normal group of American soldiers. By temperament and training they divide themselves automatically into three classes. The first class embraces the few who will fight for the love of combat. They cannot resist the thrill of it. These intrepid ones will go out of their way to court trouble. One doughboy of the 89th spent most of his leisure time putting a razor edge on his bayonet. And he never went out on night patrol that he did not return with it bloody. Class 2 comprises a very small percentage of the group. It averaged less than 1 per cent in the 89th. These poor devils lack the guts to put on the gloves with danger. Class 3, constituting the great majority in any group, are average soldiers. These do not enjoy fighting for fighting's sake. They do not rush to the combat. Neither do they hang back. They go doggedly, cautiously. But they go and go forward.

The Sensations of Battle.

The scenes and sounds and vibrations of modern battle are awful. It is a sort of combined thunderstorm, hurricane and earthquake. Because it is man-made and superbly abnormal, it is more terrifying than any combination of elemental disturbances in nature's repertoire.

"Forward!" is the command.

Above all the din the voices of the flesh cry out. Instinctively the love of physical safety and comfort and the dread of pain rebel.

In that stormy moment, torn by frightful upheavals within and without, the average, well-disciplined soldier, although trembling with fright and excitement, remembers his business, hears the command, puts his left foot out, says to his right foot, "Come on, old pedal! Don't lag! You've got to come, too!" And forward is his destination.

Why? Because it is the thing to do. His eyes are ablaze with the thrill of a fight to the death with a fellow man, but in them also is shining the glory of his triumph over his own weakness. He has proved to himself that he can do it. Only death or absolute helplessness can stop him after that. He continues to hold a flashlight for a comrade after a thumb has been shot off; he goes on driving a truck with a shattered jaw, he marches steadfastly into a wood that is alive with spouting machine guns; he swims a swollen, November-chilled river in the dark, with almost certain drowning or bullet-death awaiting him. And if, at any moment during this period, you should ask the American soldier if he were afraid, almost invariably he would answer you truthfully and say:

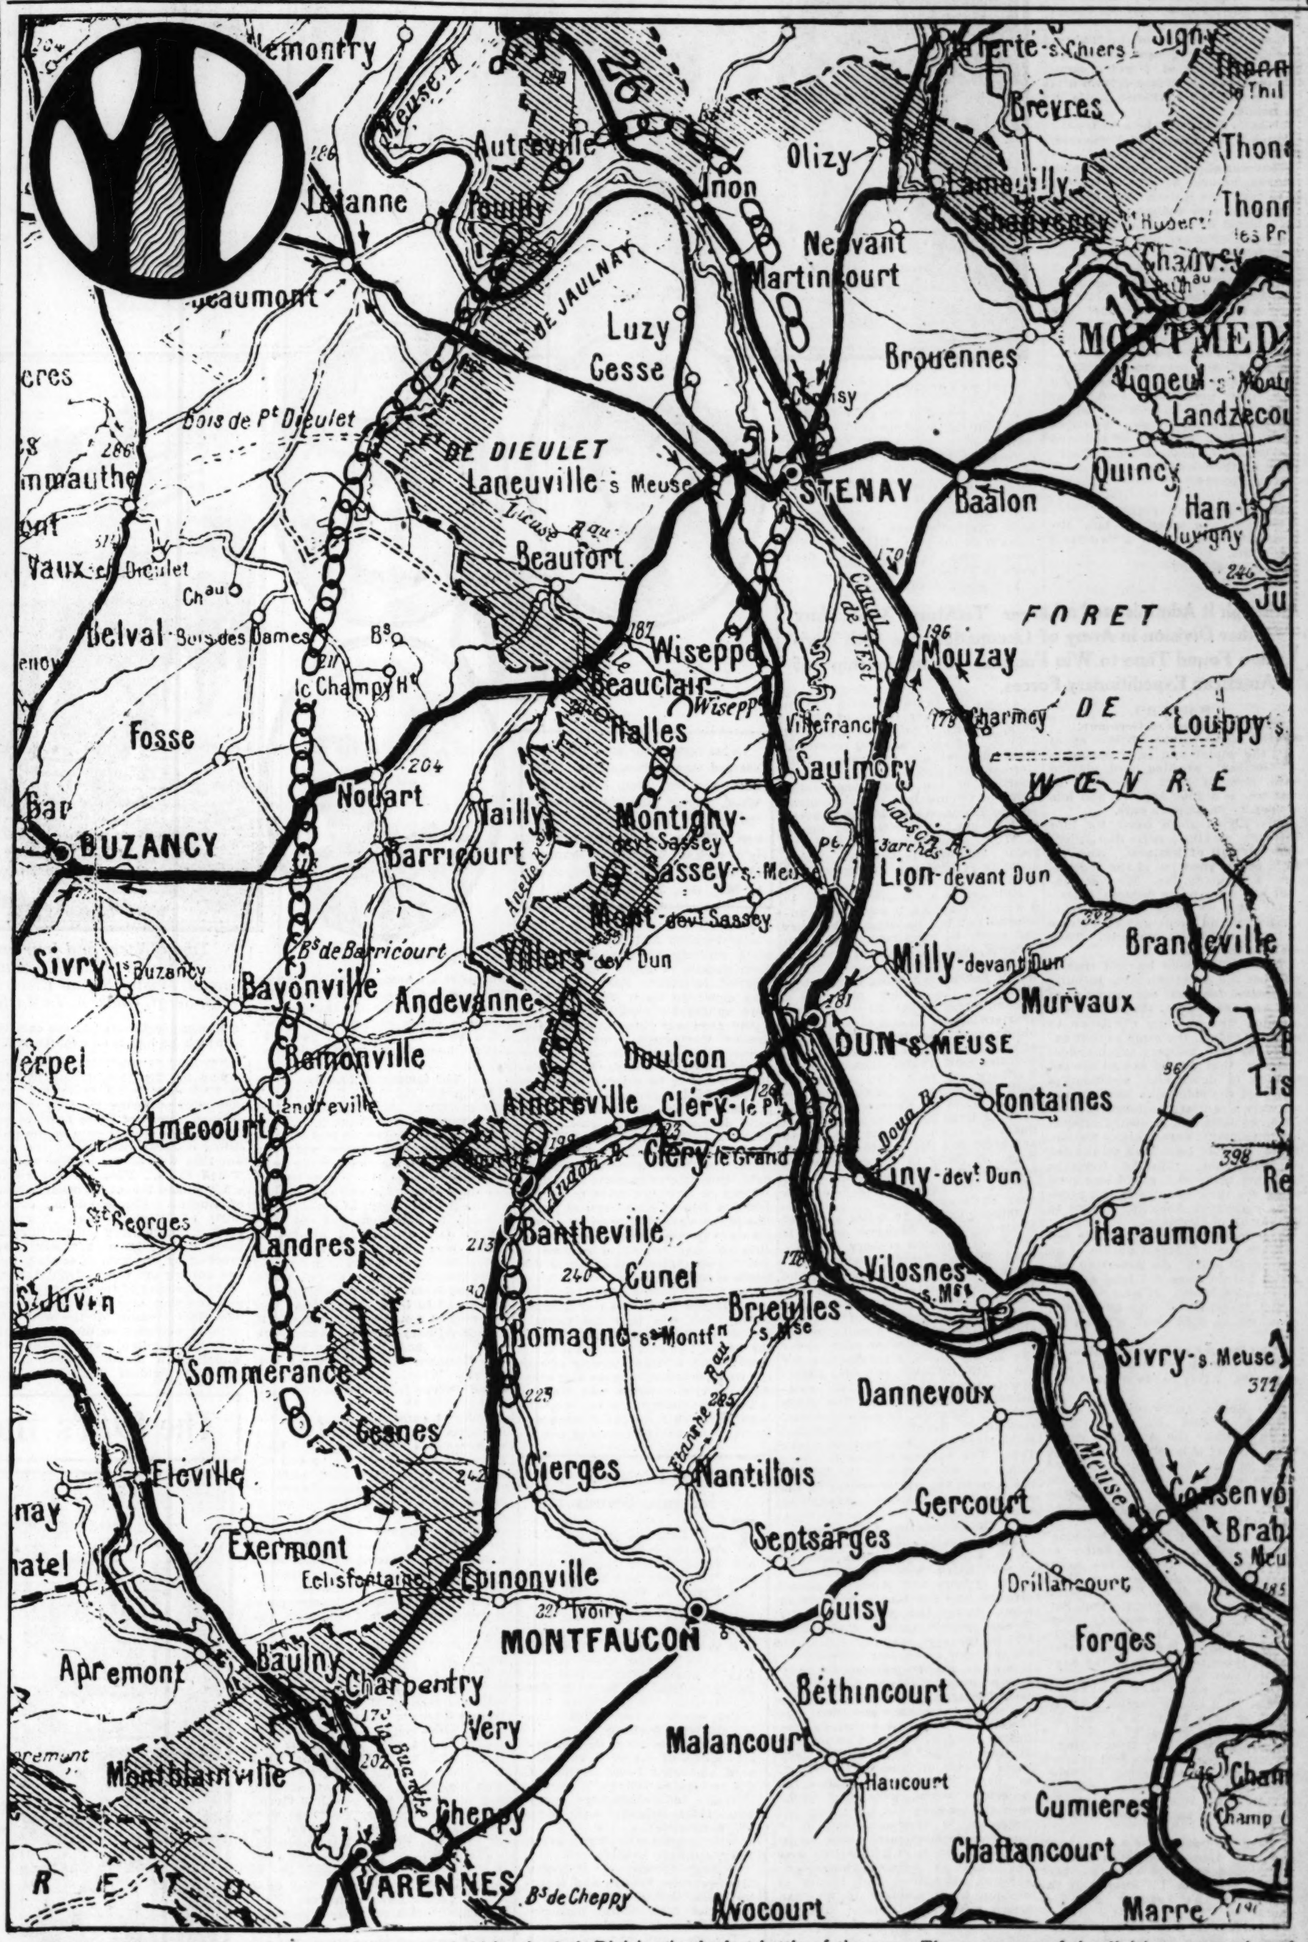
WHERE THE 89TH FOUGHT IN THE MEUSE-ARGONNE CAMPAIGN



The chain drawn on the map encloses the sector held by the 89th Division in the last battle of the war. The movement of the division was northward, of course, and the head of the northern end of the loop marks the most advanced points held by the division when the armistice became effective, Nov. 11. In the upper left of the map is inserted the divisional insigna, representing the capital letter "W" and an inverted capital "M", the combination standing for "Mid-West."

"Sure I'm scared. Aren't you?"

Is he brave? Absolutely. But thousands of doughboys of the Eighty-ninth who did these things in the line of duty, do not consider themselves heroes.

When one member of the Eighty-ninth left for overseas, a sunny-haired playmate of 7 years came running down the terraced lawn after him and put a kitchen knife in his hands.

"What's that for?" he asked.

"To kill the Kaiser with," she said, gravely.

That was about the spirit in which you sent us over here. You wanted us to "get" the Kaiser. You did not give us any very definite idea of how you wanted us to go about it. You had none. Neither had we. So we went where they told us to go and did what they told us to do. What we succeeded in accomplishing at St. Mihiel and in the Argonne-Meuse offensive was merely "our job." We feel that a large share of the credit for our showing as a division in the war, belongs to Major-General Leonard Wood, who organized the Eighty-ninth and gave its officers and men their preliminary training at Camp Funston. Gen. Wood taught the Eighty-ninth to obey first and do the kicking later. So we followed instructions as best we could. That's about all there was to it.

Was it hard?

Yes.

Harder than we expected?

Well, it was what the late Mr. Roosevelt used to call a two-fisted man's job.

Were we scared?

Hell, yes!

Were we downhearted?

Hell, no!

We are proud of the record of the Eighty-ninth Division. And there is nothing on the pages of its service in France that need bring shame to any of you. No scandals rattle their bones in our closet. We are particularly free of internal turmoil.

We may strut a little when we get back. Not as "heroes," but as Americans from the great Middle Western States who successfully did their work in France.

You won't mind, will you?

Gen. Pershing Reviewing the 89th on Conquered Ground; Division's Winter Quarters; the Three Commanders.

In its history the 89th Division has had three commanders. The first was Maj. Gen. Leonard S. Wood, (upper left) who trained the men at Camp Funston; Maj. Gen. William M. Wright (upper right) took the Division to France; subsequently it was commanded by Moj. Gen. Frank L. Winn.

Two officers and four enlisted men being decorated by Maj. Gen. Winn for heroism in the last phase of the Argonne offensive. Left to right, Lieut.-Col. Somervill, Maj. Burton A. Smead, Master Signal Electrician Elgin J. Moore, Sergt. Roy M. Sauers, Sergt. T. B. Mansfield, Sergt. Chas. A. LeMasters, Gen. Winn at extreme right, back turned.

This review took place at Goeblen Kaserne, formerly a German military barracks at Trier, Germany, on March 27, 1919.

Although It Administered a Larger Territory Than Any Other Division in Army of Occupation, the 89th Division Found Time to Win Football Championship of American Expeditionary Forces.

CHAPTER I.

The Occupation of Germany.

THE Eighty-ninth Division spent the winter and early spring in Germany, working hard, playing hard, sleeping hard. The fruit of that tree is a good appetite and lots of "pep." These were ours.

The Eighty-ninth came up into Germany, making a noise like Americans all full of business. And we did a pretty good job of the occupation of Germany, too. We were decent and humane as became Americans. But we were running their affairs for the bache and they knew it. And we did it our way. They realized that, too.

The civilian soon learned that it was not the American style to bully a defeated foe; that our orders were just and reasonable; that all we demanded was absolute obedience to military orders, the same as that exacted by our military commanders from us; that we did not go around kicking in doors and shouldering folks off the sidewalks just because we wore a military uniform; that we enforced laws and punished offenders impartially, regardless of station. Before we had been long on the job of occupation, thinking Germans said they believed it would be a good thing for their country if the armistice permitted American troops to occupy all of Germany.

The seeds of hate find sterile soil beneath the left breast pocket of an olive drab shirt. An American soldier's hatred does not long survive an enemy's defeat. It was:

"Hi, there, Fritz! We gave you a good licking, didn't we? Where's the beer?"

The Danger of Fraternization.

There was danger in that attitude, of course. Army heads realized it at once.

The Boche, accustomed to being ordered around by the military, might mistake the American sentiment. What if he should get it into his head that fear of him prompted our humane treatment of him? That might lead him to try to get a little cocky. How long would American fists hold off then?

The celebrated "No Fraternizing" order resulted. It was better so. We went our way and the boche went his—under our direction. Much has been made of the "No Fraternizing" order, without justification. Several untrue interpretations were twisted into it. But the situation solved itself to the entire satisfaction of those who made up the Army of Occupation.

Common sense was applied, of course. If a soldier carried a bucket of water or a baby up a steep hill for a woman, or patted a child on the head, was he "fraternizing?" Scarcely. Neither was a soldier truck driver who, encountering a "bone-head" teamster plodding along the middle of the road, stopped, planted himself in the path of the boche and said:

"Say, you poor boche worm, if you don't get that seventeenth century contraption of yours over the right side of the road I'll knock all the corners off that square head of yours."

The teamster may not have understood the words, but the general vein of the truck driver's remarks percolated and he took his hat off his head and his team off the road forthwith.

89th Had Largest Territory.

The 89th Division has occupied a larger slice of German territory than that assigned to any other of the eight divisions in the Army of Occupation. Our area, 68 miles long and 37 miles wide at extremities, embraced four kreiss (corresponding to counties in the United States) and included the larger towns of Kyllburg, Bitburg, Prum and a part of Treves. Advance G. H. Q. (General Headquarters) are at Treves. The Germans call this town Trier. Headquarters of the Third Army (the Army of Occupation) are at Coblenz on the Rhine, about 75 miles north of Kyllburg. Major-General Frank L. Winn, commanding the 80th Division, maintained Division Headquarters at Kyllburg throughout the stay.

Kyllburg is a summer resort. As a winter residence, it was not an unalloyed joy, but its summer beauties can easily be visualized. The town sprawls over the slope of one of a crowd of majestic, wooded hills, which just missed being a mountain chain. In the valley there is a stream, which makes the town three-quarters island. It is muddy and turbulent now, carrying a heavy load of spring rains, but its summer possibilities look trouty. The streets of Kyllburg are very steep and paved with cobblestones. It has several hotels, designed for summer tourists. A railroad hugs the valley and tunnels under the town. On the slope of an adjoining hill lies the town of Malberg. It basks in the reflection of whatever fame Kyllburg enjoys. The picture post cards all say "Malberg, near Kyllburg."

Bitburg, about 10 miles south of Kyllburg, is a brewery town. It boasts of no such scenery as Kullburg. There Brigadier-General Edward T. Donnelly, commanding the 164th Field Artillery Brigade had his headquarters. At Bitburg also was the division railhead and the chief depot for the distribution of food, clothing and other supplies for the Eighty-ninth. Headquarters for the 177th Infantry Brigade, Brigadier-General Herman Hall commanding, were at Prum. The 178th Infantry Brigade, Brigadier-General George C. Barnhardt commanding maintained its headquarters near Trier. The various regimental, battalion and other units of the Eighty-ninth spent the winter occupying the smaller towns scattered throughout the area.

The Occupation a Big Job...

The occupation of Germany proved to be a bigger task than most of us anticipated. A few of the Eighty-ninth officers and noncommissioned officers had previous experience in administering the civil affairs of a foreign people in the Philippines. But to the vast majority it was an entirely new game. International law lays down precise methods for military occupation. However, individual cases frequently arose in our territory for which no written precedent was discernible. This was especially true during the first weeks of occupancy. It was impossible to decide these cases by rule of thumb. The officers in charge of civil affairs, after the American fashion, were given roomy mental meadows for their personal judgment to browse around in. A tentative decision might kick up its heels and cavort in high spirits over the field of "Here's-where-I-get-even-with-the-Hun! But liberty of opinion lends stability to well-balanced minds and usually the final verdict was a model of American justice.

The most difficult thing for the German mind to grasp was our insistence on a clean up in the rural towns. These people were able to understand cleanliness for the sake of looks, but the philosophy of cleanliness for its own sake was miles over their heads. There are no farm houses in this part of Germany. Everybody lives in the villages. These were filthy, foul. The family bank is the manure pile under the parlor window. Riches are measured by its winter breadth and thickness. We could scarcely undertake to make them dispose of these thousands of tons of fertilizer. Next summer's crop depended on it. But the piles were unbearably unsightly.

And then our Streets, Alleys and Grades Committee conceived the happy Pine Bough ordinance, which we preceeded to enforce. Each manure pile had to be covered with pine boughs. This expediency solved the problem during the winter. In the early spring the natives carried the fertilizer to the fields. Girls and boys in their "teens" carrying baskets of it on their backs were an everyday sight. One afternoon some American officers in Kyllburg tried to photograph a trio of girls thus engaged. The baskets are similar to an Indian squaw's papoose pack. Two of the girls ran and the third refused to pose. "Your Americans at home will laugh at us," she said.

The writer once made a house-to-house search in the town of Bitburg. Information was that the German troops, in their withdrawal beyond the Rhine, had sold to civilians along their march a large quantity of motor transportation, wagons and other war material. Some was German military property and some of it had been captured from the French and British. Under the terms of the armistice it all belonged to the allies. The natives who had purchased were reported to have hidden these things in barns, sheds, cellars, under straw piles, etc. It was up to us to be finders, keepers, throughout our territory.

The Congested Family.

We unearthed quite a lot of this war material. And we found some other things, too. There were some doors we were sorry we had opened. Where cows, pigs, goats, chickens, ducks and German dwell in the same windowless room the atmosphere is not quite that of a perfumer's shop on the Rue de Rivoli in Paris. Such a room is appealing, but not irresistible as a place to loll around in. There may have been still other stolen war material in some places encountered. If so it stayed there. The searchers fell back staggering.

We had to have a clean-up. Our self-respect would have demanded it, even if military regulations and sanitary laws had permitted evasion. The Germans failed to get the idea at first. Where was the necessity of going beyond visibility in the matter?

But out came the fraus and the frauleins with brooms and the men with wagons and shovels. Each Burgomeister had his orders and our civil affairs officers held each of them individually responsible for the cleanly appearance of his village. At first there was a tendency to hide trash in alleyways and back yards. In one kreiss the situation was helped by the placing of trash boxes and half-barrels on street intersections. Our troops, meanwhile, were required to be scrupulously clean themselves in billets, kitchens and stables.

The results of the clean-up campaign were satisfactory. We kept after it and the natives soon became pretty well trained. Occasionally one read in the Division Intelligence Summary that Herr Einpfennig of Oberweiss had been fined 25 marks by the provost court for failing to keep his premises clean. Once in awhile a negligent burgomeister was soaked a couple of hundred marks because his town had shown laxity in cleanliness. The fines were not excessive. At the present rate of exchange the mark is worth not quite 9 cents. But they were effective. One rarely heard of an offender being fined more than once.

Liquor Laws Enforced.

Other offenses were punished more severely. It took some pretty stiff fines to convince them that our orders closing the cafes and wine shops at 8 p. m. and prohibiting the sale of "schnapps" at any time meant what they said. But these regulations became clearly understood. The heaviest fine imposed in our territory was one of 1000 marks against a Bitburg civilian who held out a shotgun and a rifle.

In billeting we tried to go "fifty-fifty" with the inhabitants. No natives as deprived of a place in which te live in decency and in the comfort to which he had been accustomed.

Nowhere throughout the area occupied by the 89th during its stay in Rhineland were there any evidences of suffering for lack of food or fuel. Most of these families underwent the mental pain of the published casualty lists during the war, but that was as far as the war affected them. They do not realize what it has meant to other nations of Europe. Compared to certain parts of Belgium and Northern France, where every town is in ruins, the Germans have scarcely been touched by the war. Certainly they are getting off easy. Isn't it ironical? The land of the losers, who began the war, bears not a shell scar. The final invasion of the war came without carrying to the ears of the defeated civilian population the sound of a single explosion. An amusing incident occurred in this connection. One of our artillery regiments was at target practice one day. No formal complaint was made, but we heard indirectly that the noise of the shell explosions rattled some window panes and annoyed the Germans very much. Wasn't that too bad? However, our sympathy was somewhat submerged in our amusement.

Aside from our civil affairs duties, the 89th lived much the same sort of a military life in Germany that it underwent at Camp Funston. Each branch of the service functioned much as it did in the early training days. Headquarters outfits specialized; all troops spent much time in the care of equipment; the infantry drilled, hiked and had rifle practice; the artillery had target practice and exercised and cared for its animals; officers and noncommissioned officers went to military schools, and so on throughout the regular military peace program. Were we busy? Ask some private who had the restaurant and cleaning concession to a stable of mules.

However, the 89th recreation program was large and comprehensive. Officers and men were ordered to go in for outdoor and indoor athletics of every kind. Football, boxing, wrestling, basketball, horseback riding and a little wild boar hunting were the favorite cold weather sports. Baseball, track meets, swimming, tennis and golf followed in the spring. Tournaments within the division resulted in excellent competition among unit teams and brought out fine material for division teams and the 89th shone at athletics as it did in all other endeavors overseas.

The Eighty-ninth Division football team brought fame to itself and the vision by winning the A. E. F. football championship. In personnel, the team was practically the same as the Camp Funston eleven which beat the Great Lakes Naval Training Station team from Chicago in Kansas City in November, 1917. When the 1919 A. E. F. athletic program was announced in January, it included a football tournament. Company and battery teams were to play for regimental championships and regimental teams then would battle for division championships. In this way the best football material would be obtained to make up divison teams. Division teams were to play for corps championships; corps champions would meet for army titles, and finally army and base section championship teams would fight it out in Paris for the A. E. F. championship.

Captained and coached by Capt. (now Major) Paul Withington, division athletic officer, the Eighty-ninth football team fought its way to highest football honors by winning every game it played as follows:

Eighty-ninth Division, 6; Ninetieth Division, 0; Wittlich Germany, Feb. 14.

Eighty-ninth Divison, 30; Third Army Headquarters Troops, 0; Coblenz, Germany, Feb. 20 (Seventh Corps championship).

Eighty-ninth Division, 14; Fourth Division, 0; Coblenz, Germany, Feb. 27 (Third Army, Army of Occupation, championship).

Eighty-ninth Division, 13; St. Nazaire, 0; Paris, March 14.

Eighty-ninth Divison, 17; Tours, 3; Paris, March 22 (semi-finals, A. E. F. championship).

Eighty-ninth Division, 14; Thirty-sixth Division, First Army, 6, Paris, March 29 (finals in A. E. F. championship).

Seven teams competed in the final series of games for the A. E. F. football championship. All the games were played in Paris except one of the two semi-final contests, which was staged at Bar-sur-Aube, where King Albert of Belgium and his Queen were spectators. In that game the Thirty-sixth Division, Texas and Oklahoma National Guard, champions of the First Army, eliminated the Second Army championship team while the Eighty-ninth Division team was also winning its place in the finals by defeating the Tours team in

What the Division's Insignia Stands For

THE Eighty-ninth Division has had a trio of commanders—Major-General Leonard Wood, Major-General William W. Wright and Major-General Frank L. Winn. "W" has been its lucky letter. The division insignia, designed by Col. John C. H. Lee, Chief of Staff, is a W in a circle, worn at the top of the left coat sleeve. If you turn it upside down it becomes an M. Thus we have M for Middle and W for West, the Eighty-ninth being called the Middle West Division.

The space between the two inside stems of the W is vari-colored, according to the branch of the service, as follows:

Solid blue—Infantry (navy blue, 178th Brigade; light blue, 177th Brigade).

Solid scarlet—Artillery; 164th Field Artillery Brigade.

Yellow—Cavalry— (Division Headquarters Troop) and Quartermaster Corps.

Scarlet with white border—314th Regiment Engineers.

Orange and Scarlet—340th Machine Gun Battalion.

Light blue and scarlet—341st Machine Gun Battalion.

Dark Blue and scarlet—342 Machine Gun Battalion.

Solid orange—314th Field Signal Battalion.

Red Cross on White—314th Sanitary Train.

Purple with white border 314th Supply Train.

Paris. The following Saturday, March 22, the Eighty-ninth (Third Army), and the Thirty-sixth (First Army) fought it out for the championship in Paris.

The Great Football Game.

The game was played at the Velodrome (outdoor bicycle race track) in Paris. Special trains from Germany and from Northern France and Belgium carried thousands of officers and enlisted men to Paris to see the contest. Gen. Pershing and every general officer of the A. E. F. who could arrange to be in Paris went to the gridiron. Parisians, women and men, made it a social event. The immense crowd —bands, bugle corps, flowers, color, flags and banners, cheering, marching, snake dances—all reproduced the atmosphere of one of the big Eastern college football games or the Army-Navy game at home, except that most of the spectators were in olive drab.

The Thirty-sixth Division team scored a touchdown in the first half. Its tall Indian kicker—Masheet—missed a goal. And that was the score when the first half ended—Thirty-sixth Division 6, Eighty-ninth Division 0.

Between halves, while the Thirty-sixth rooters overran the field, almost drunk with excitement, Major-General Frank L. Winn, commanding the Eighty-ninth Division, went to the dressing room of the Eighty-ninth team and reminded the players that the Eighty-ninth Division had made a fighting reputation at St. Mihiel and at the Argonne-Meuse front and it was up to them to go out on the field in the second half and uphold that reputation.

Capt. Withington and his men returned to the fight with a fresh idea of what had to be done and exhibited a variety of football that was a marvel. They rushed their way into Thirty-sixth territory and presently Lieut. A. H. Lindsey tossed a perfect pass to Lieut. George ("Pottsy") Clark and "Pottsy" went over for a touchdown. It tied the score, 6 to 6.

Lindsey's usually brilliant and reliable kicking toe has shown symptoms of treachery in his punting during the first half and he is afraid to trust it with the point on which an A. E. F. championship may depend. "Pottsy" is elected to try the goal.

What's this? What's this? Do you realize what you are doing, Quarterback Gerhardt? What will they say at West Point? You, a Captain in the United States Army and a graduate of the military academy, cleaning a subordinate's boots? Why, you are not supposed even to clean your own leather. Yet there you are down on your knees dramatically scraping all the mud from "Pottsy's" shoe. And "Pottsy" is only a Lieutenant. Fifteen thousand witness to this conduct unbecoming an officer. And only a few moments before "Scrubby" Laslett—Private Laslett—was heard to call you "Charlie" and to give you hell from the end position because he didn't hear a smothered signal.

Good old "Pottsy!" Over the bar and through the goal posts goes the ball. Simultaneously one entire side of the field and half the grand stand goes insane. Seven to six is the score. The Eighty-ninth is ahead!

It is enough. But not for "Pottsy." He chooses to pile up glory for himself although he already has all that any football hero needs.

The last 5 minutes of play. A mud-covered streak of maroon flashes around the left end from the 65-yard line. He dodges one tackler; he fights off another; he's down to one knee; he wrenches free; he's up and plunging ahead; he's down once more; again he's up and on. Finally only one Thirty-sixth man is between him and the goal. "Pottsy" hurdles him clean and races across the line to take his place in the highest sun of the lowliest solar system in the football firmament. Again he kicks goal and the football championship of the A. E. F. goes to Rhineland, forever to sparkle and gleam among the archives of achievements of the Eighty-ninth Division.

After a long time the cheers over "Pottsy's" second feat die away. And a French newspaper photographer, who has been roaming up and down the sidelines, approaches the Eighty-ninth players to ask if the game has started yet.

Gen. Pershing goes right out on the muddy field and shakes the black paw of every player. He is proud of them as fighting Americans, he says. The Arrowheads are good losers and a cheer for the Eighty-ninth roars out of Thirty-sixth's mouths.

The football team went to Nice and Cannes for a rest. April 15 the players returned to Germany and Kyllburg was the scene of an Eighty-ninth victory celebration. There were illuminated triumphal arches and band music and bugling and singing and cheering and fireworks that frightened the phlegmatic population deep into their cellars. Afterwards there was a dance and supper for which every American woman military worker for miles around had been collected in motor cars. Gen. Winn and these football players were decorated with a silver football medal:

Capt. Charles H. Gerhardt, Assistant G-3, quarterback.

Lieut. Grover C. Padfield, 340th Field Artillery, fullback.

Private Howard E. Laslett, Office of G-2, left end.

Lieut. Robert A. Higgins, 355th Infantry, right end.

Lieut. Monroe C. Lewis, 342d Field Artillery, center.

Corp. Thomas A. Thompson, 340th Machine Gun Battalion, right tackle.

Lieut. Carl A. Schweiger, 341st Field Artillery, right tackle.

Lieut. B. C. Garside, 340th Field Artillery, right guard.

Lieut. W. K. Clark, 340th Field Artillery, substitute end.

Sergt. Harry E. Flanagan, 341st Machine Gun Battalion, substitute guard.

Color Sergt. Viggo Nelson, 342d Field Artillery, substitute back.

Capt. Claude C. Fletcher, 354th Infantry, substitute end.

Private Walter McGoogan, 356th Infantry, substitute center.

Corp. John M. Imley, 353d Infantry, substitute tackle.

Sergt. Charles Barkley, 340th Field Artillery, substitute tackle.

Lieut. H. P. Scott, 341st Field Artillery, substitute back.

Boxing and wrestling went on all winter, and baseball, track and field meets, tennis, golf and cross-country running followed football on the spring athletic program of the Eighty-ninth.

The recreation program in Rhineland also included horse shows—brigade, division, corps and army—and theatrical entertainment, both domestic and imported. Practically every unit in the Eighty-ninth had its minstrel troupe or other show. These played according to schedule from town to town within the occupied area. The men dubbed it "the fertilizer circuit." After a show played its own entire division circuit, it went on tour to neighboring divisions.

There was no lack of educational advantages. The great British and French universities opened their doors to men of the A. E. F. and offered courses in letters, science, law and medicine. There were a great many more applicants for these courses from officers and enlisted men of the Eighty-ninth than there were courses allotted to the division.

Educational Advantages.

Within the division, the men of the Eighty-ninth fared well, educationally. Early in March three divisional schools were organized under Maj. George H. English, divisional educational officer. One of these schools provided vocational training; another was an agricultural school, and the third offered an academic course. These three schools had a total attendance of nearly 1200. They continued until home-going time.

In addition, there were the "post schools," which were conducted during the entire winter and spring, and were continued on the boats that carried the Eighty-ninth back to America. These schools were formen to whom the advantages of a rudimentary education in English had been denied before they joined the army.

A limited number of leaves of absence to France, England, Belgium and Italy were allowed the Eighty-ninth in February, March and April. They were of varying lengths from three to fourteen days. Officers and men made the most of them. Special weekly permits to visit Coblenz also were given. Groups of 200 enlisted men were allowed to visit the Rhenish city and take the Rhine River trip.

The men of the Eighty-ninth were tired and homesick when they were ordered from France up into Germany last November. The infantry had just concluded several weeks of red-hot fighting on the Meuse-Argonne front and the artillery had worked hard preparing for a slashing drive on Metz in the St. Mihiel sector. If it had been left to their choosing, there is no doubt that the great majority of the Eighty-ninth would have voted to start for Germany by way of New York, San Francisco and Asia. But in retrospect, few individuals of the Middle West Division are not pleased to have unergone the experience of wintering in Rhineland as a part of a victorious American army.

Sparkling Success of 89th in Meuse-Argonne Battle Due in Large Measure to Careful Plans of Its Staff—Gallantry and Dash of the Men Second to None in the Allied Armies.

CHAPTER II.

THE ARGONNE-MEUSE BATTLE.

IT WAS Sept. 26 when the allied hammer delivered its first Meuse-Argonne blow. At that time the 89th Division was still holding positions it had captured in the St. Mihiel drive, which started September 12. Therein lay the strategy of Marshal Foch. The Germans were forced to concentrate at Metz for fear of a continuation of the allied attack in the St. Mihiel salient. They had every reason to believe Foch's American sledgehammer would fall again. But where, they did not, could not know. In any event they had to safeguard Metz, the entrance to and the exit from Western Germany and the main prop of the Hindenberg line. St. Mihiel appeared to be the logical attacking place and Hindenberg himself hurried to Metz to supervise the further defense of the city. But Foch fooled them.

With amazing speed, in furthering Marshal Foch's plans, Gen. Pershing and Gen. Liggett rushed American divisions up from southern training areas; hurried others down from the north where they had been fighting with British troops in Flanders and with the French at Chateau-Tierry; swung others away from the St. Mihiel salient, and concentrated all of them along the final front that streched from the hills of Verdun to the Argonne Forest. The Germans were not prepared for such a concentration. When they began to grasp its scope, they robbed every other front of reserve divisions and hurried them to the Meuse. It was too late. They could be brought up only one at a time and each had to be shot into the front line upon its arrival, because from Sept. 26, when the Meuse-Argonne offensive began, until the windup, Nov. 11, not a day went by that did not carry to the Germans some sort of a forceful allied attack, somewhere along that front.

Finally, even Metz had been robbed of sufficient protection and left exposed. Foch knew that, of course, and Gen. Mangin's Tenth French army, with strong American support, had, it was said, fixed Nov. 14 as starting day for a St. Mihiel drive on Metz. And the Germans quit, figuring that the quitting would be much better then than a few days later.

89th Starts the Big Fight.

October 9, the 89th Division was relieved in the St. Mihiel salient by the 37th American Division and started, by truck and by marching, for the Meuse-Argonne front. The 164th Field Artillery Brigade was left at St. Mihiel. So rapid had to be the movement of all the foot troops toward the Meuse-Argonne front, that no attempt was made to have the slower moving horse-drawn artillery keep up. Accordingly, in a great many cases, artillery brigades were detached from their own divisions and linked up with the infantry to which they chanced to be nearest. Thus separated, they did not rejoin their own divisions until after the armistice.

Five days later, Oct. 14, the Eighty-ninth was in the Epinonville area, in the rear of and ready to relieve the Thirty-second American Division and prepared for what might come. On the way the men had marched through chilly autumn rains and mud, camping out or being billeted by night in towns through which they had passed. All available time since leaving the St. Mihiel area had been employed in the continuation of training and in completing equipment. More important still, however, the men had in most cases received a much-needed bath. It was not until five days later, Oct. 19, that the Eighty-ninth moved up into the line to the relief of the Thirty-second Division, and this five additional days gave more time for rest, training and equipping. Gen. Pershing visited the Division P. C. at Epinonville and advised with Gen. Wright, the Eighty-ninth commander.

The morning of Oct. 20 found the Eighty-ninth in the front line, with the Forty-second Division (Rainbow Division) on its left and the Fifth Division on the right. The Thirty-second Division had been relieved and had gone back for a rest. The relief was accomplished so efficiently by the Eighty-ninth that Major-General William G. Haan, commanding the Thirty-second, wrote the following letter of commendation:

"The brigade and regimental commanders of the Thirty-second Division have reported on the conduct of the troops of the Eighty-ninth Division in making the relief of that division on Oct. 19-20. Each and every report indicates most excellent discipline in the organizations of the Eighty-ninth Division. The brigade and regimental commanders had previously by reconnaissance and the collection of information informed themselves as to the location of our elements and when it came to make the relief hardly any guides from the Thirty-second were necessary. This was most fortunate, as you are aware that our troops were very much worn out by the long fighting they had in this sector. It therefore gives me unusual pleasure to express to you the great satisfaction that my division felt and we are all hoping that the two divisions may serve close together in the future."

Gen. Summerall's Praise.

It was about this time, too, that Major-General C. P. Summerall, commanding the Fifth Army Corps, of which the Eighty-ninth was a part, wrote this exceptionally complimentary letter to the Eighty-ninth commander:

"I have this day visited a majority of the battalions of your division and have talked with the soldiers upon the subject of the operations that may devolve upon them. I have been most favorably impressed and highly gratified by the fine physical condition and soldierly bearing and deportment of officers and men and the superior morale that appears to exist. In particular I desire to commend the division for the cleanliness in which the men keep themselves under adverse conditions and the attention given to shaving and sanitation. The results of my visits to your troops inspire me with confidence that they will vigorously and successfully execute the missions entrusted to them and that they will add further prestige to the division and honor to themselves and to their country by defeating the enemy wherever found and by advancing rapidly and resolutely to their objectives, regardless of the progress of neighboring units."

Days were coming now that tested to the utmost the fortitude of the men of the Eighty-ninth Division. Almost continuous offensive fighting for three weeks was ahead of them. The best the Germans had was to be pitted against them. In addition, the enemy had the cruel advantage of occupying a position strongly fortified by nature and which he had spent four years in further strengthening for defense.

An extremely hazardous and very important task was awaiting the Eighth-ninth the very day it went into the Argonne-Meuse front line. Nearly everybody had sensed, by this time, that an attack on a large scale was forthcoming soon. In preparation, some minor operations were necessary. Certain positions held by the enemy were coveted by the Americans as necessary "jumping off" places when the big attack came. These positions had to be taken in preparatory attacks. One of them was opposite the Eighty-ninth Division's sector. It was the Bois de Bantheville and orders came from the corps for the Eighty-ninth to mop up this wood on Oct. 20.

The Bois de Bantheville.

Now the Eighty-ninth had been informed that the Bois de Bantheville would not prove much of a mopping-up job. Somebody lied. Any one of the doughboys of the 356th and the 343d Infantry Regiments who were on that mission will tell you that. The night of Oct. 20-21 the First Battalion, 356th, tried, but was not wholly successful. Two nights later, under the personal direction of Col. J. H. Reeves, the First Battalion of the 353d Infantry went through, cleaned out the woods and rescued some elements of the 356th that had been cut off. The 353d's losses were 11 killed and 24 wounded.

From that date until Nov. 1, when the big attack came off, the division held this line, maintaining contact with the enemy, adjusting the boundary lines with adjoining divisions and otherwise continuing preparations for the attack. It was anything but a pleasant stay for the troops. During the entire time the front lines were held by the 177th Brigade, 353d and 354th Regiments. Violent enemy bombardments with gas and high explosive shells were of daily occurrence. The brigade's losses during this period were over 700. Evacuation of wounded and the bringing up of food and supplies through this fire was especially difficult. But the men went on functioning and not a man deserted his post.

Enemy Tribute to Artillery.

The Germans were "getting theirs" all this time, too. The Fifty-seventh and Fifty-eighth Artillery Brigades were supporting the Eighty-ninth. Heavy guns of Corps Artillery were behind them, and still farther back was the ponderous Army Artillery. All of these guns were poring in a daily harrassing fire on the German lines, preparatory to the attack. A tribute to their efficiency and also to the Eighty-ninth Division Infantry is contained in the following translated extract from a captured order of the Eighty-eighth German Division, which was opposite the Eighty-ninth.

"In the last days considerable losses have been caused by enemy artillery fire. These are only to be prevented when the troops dig themselves in well. Moving about in prominent places is without object, as American artillery places all landmarks under fire. I expect the commanders personally to see to it that the troops dig in and build shelters. Wood may be obtained in the Pioneer Park at Montigny.

"In the preceding night an American patrol hailed the 170th J. D. in German. This use of our tongue with the intention of deceiving our outposts has often been observed lately. The command has therefore ordered the use of a password: Pass word for tonight 'Danzig.' Password from Nov. 2nd, noon, 'Feuerschein.' Password from Nov. 5th, noon, 'Fischotter.'

"The division is again opposite the 89th American Division as in the St. Mihiel region. This division is as at that time still known as a good American shock division which undertakes many strong patrol movements. In the present sector the 89th Division is probably in the line with three regiments in the front line, the fourth regiment in reserve. The Division is at full strength, its combat strength is high; namely, 5 officers and 250 non-coms and men per company. From the words of prisoners brought in in the last few days, the division has been placed in the present sector for an advance. From various maps and other notes, it attempts to take as its objective the line from Buzancy Heights to southwest of Stenay. The capture of further prisoners for the further clearing of the situation is urgently commanded."

Gen. Wright's Report.

Preliminary plans for a modern battle must be worked out to the minutest detail. It is up to the higher commanders to issue orders covering every possible emergency and to see to it that they are prepared for. A comprehensive idea of the careful planning in the 89th Division, preparatory to its attack in the Meuse-Argonne offensive Nov. 1, 1918, may be obtained from the following extracts from the report of the Meuse-Argonne operations which Major-General Wright made to Gen. Pershing:

"The plan of attack was based on a short and violent artillery preparation of two hours, following a continuous harassing fire for several days. At "H" hour (the hour for the jump-off) a very heavy barrage was planned, to give a high explosive rolling barrage of almost twice the usual density, together with a rolling barrage of shrapnel 75's, and a jumping barrage on successive targets by remaining 75's, 105's, 155's and 8-inch Howitzers. To this barrage was added a rolling barrage of machine gun fire, sweeping the enemy's terrain 500 meters in advance of the infantry as far as the first objective. The Infantry Stokes mortars of the reserve brigade and the detachments of gas and flame troops were placed under the orders of the Artillery Brigade commander in conjunction with the Trench Mortar batteries, during the preliminary bombardment. Two machine gun companies of the leading brigades assigned to join later the reserve infantry battalions thereof, also the machine gun companies of the Divisional Reserve and the one-pounder platoons of that brigade, were placed under the orders of the Division Machine Gun officer for use during the preliminary bombardment and for covering the advance of the infantry as far as the first objective.

"Instructions to the infantry were to follow the barrage as close as 50 meters, if practicable, and to drive straight through to their objectives.

"To each assault and support battalion was assigned one machine gun company which jumped off with it. To each assault battalion was also assigned two accompanying guns, 75's, which were to open fire upon order of the infantry commander and to follow him.

"The barrage table was adjusted and regulated by the corps artillery commander. The adjustment with the Third Corps on our right necessitated an intermediate objective. Furthermore the fact that our jump off line was well in advance of that of the Second Division on our left made it desirable to have an intermediate objective on which our left assault battalion could wait for the Second Division to come up.

"The division commander gave the matter of battle liaison with the Ninetieth Division (on the right of the Eighty-ninth) special care and attention. It was realized that although the taking of the Hill 300 was absolutely essential to the advance of the Ninetieth Division, it was also necessary for this division's unimpede advance. The taking of the hill was, by order of the army, a divided mission. Detailed arrangements were made for initial liaison with the Ninetieth Division and its maintainance throughout the action. Battle liaison with the Second Division was made in compliance with corps orders, becoming secure near the camp aviation north of the Bois des Hazois.

"No developed wire position was known to exist in our front, and the few aeroplane photographs available failed to show the development, by wiring of the so-called Stellung, reported and shown on captured maps to be in the vicinity of Remonville. Accordingly, the only provisions made for passing the wire were to equip the infantry to the fullest extent possible with heavy wire-cutters, believing that any enemy wire which be of hasty and light character. The engineers were accordingly assigned to the opening and maintenance of communication, with particular regard to the getting forward of artillery and ammunition.

Roads Rigidly Reserved.

"The lessons gained in the St. Mihiel drive were especially considered. Every available route was reconnoitered and the work pressed night and day. Due to the energy of the engineers and fortunate fair weather, the engineer road was completed and served for horsedrawn transportation and light motor vehicles by 10:00 hours of the morning of 'D' day.

"A rigid system of priority was laid down and approved by the corps, guaranteeing that only animal drawn transportation would be permitted over the roads concerning which there was any question of maintenance. Restrictions were placed even on staff cars and motor ambulances. Definite limits were given to all trucks beyond which they could not pass until the corps engineers was satisfied that the roads would stand the traffic.

"Based on this plan and co-ordinated with it was planned the advance of the artillery of the Fifty-eighth Brigade, which was to be displaced by battalions, and moved forward so as to cover the advance of the infantry beyond the third objective.

"The evacuation plan (for wounded) contemplated the use of the engineer road and the road through the northern part of the Bois de Bantheville as a one-way and animal drawn circuit, with an advanced dressing station and transfer point for motor vehicles just west of Bantheville.

"The Division was well equipped and supplied. In addition to his regular equipment, each infantry soldier was required to carry two bandoleers of small arms ammunition, one automatic rifle clip or the equivalent number of cartridges, two hand grenades and one white panel. Packs of the assaulting troops were left under guard and each man went forward with only a slicker for protection. Due to extra effort on the part of the supply service and especial attention and close supervision of organization commanders, all troops in the Division were, until 'D' day, getting at least one or two hot meals a day, even in the front line.

"Maps were issued down to and including platoon commanders showing the divisional boundaries, divisional objectives and the corrected magnetic lines of advance. At the last practicable moment the latest information in regard to enemy dispositions, machine guns and artillery was sent out on maps to platoon commanders. Each platoon commander was also supplied with a time table for each objective, with space for him to fill in the exact time as soon as "H" hour was known, and also the local description of his part of each objective. He was given also the principal liaison signals of panels and rockets in card form, and a brief admonition about reports —to report often the date, place, time, co-ordinates of his front line and the regimental numbers of prisoners he had taken.

To Avoid Mixing of Units.

"In accordance with the orders of the Commander in Chief, great stress was laid on control of the men. The Division Commander personally spoke to the officers and noncommissioned officers in each regiment and separate battalion. He emphasized the absolute need of holding the command together, and called on his officers and noncommissioned officers, particularly the corporals to control the men. The Corps Commander addressed the officers of the Division on this and similar subjects. Just prior to the operation, a straggler drive was made through the back area. For the operation a very efficient cordon of sentinels was established by the Military Police and every influence which would tend to encourage stragglers, such as Y. M. C. A. issue points and Red Cross chocolate places, were prohibited and kept well to the rear. These efforts were well repaid. The total straggling within the Division was only a fraction of 1 per cent.

"Signal communications were pushed as far to the front as the enemy situation would permit. The main telephone axis of five metallic circuits was pushed up along the engineer road to the edge of the Bois de Bantheville and preparations made to carry it forward behind the infantry. A special projector station (flashlight signaling device) was established on Hill 283. Wireless communications were developed through the Division and buzzer telephones provided down to include front line battalions. Special instructions had been given to the infantry, at each available opportunity for instruction, in aeroplane liaison. French pigeons were furnished by the corps, but owing to the location of the cotes well to the rear of the Division P. C., runner liaison was found to be faster.

"During the last week in October the weather was exceptionally fair, which fact was of particular advantage to the roads and did much to keep up the already excellent spirits of the men. One or two days of clear visibility were had and full advantage was taken by the Intelligence Department.

"The division commander kept his battle echelon well in advance. Careful organization in this regard permitted the division commander's echelon, including the general staff, signal officer, his mess and personal equipment, to move by automobile and light truck on half an hour's notice.

"Liaison officers reported from the corps, adjacent divisions, from the division in reserve, from the air service, from the army artillery, in addition to the regular brigade liaison officers.

"Special guard was placed over division headquarters and rigid orders enforced to keep the P. C. quiet and orderly. This condition held throughout the operation.

"Just previous to the operation several observer officers from the various schools and departments of the S. O. S. reported for temporary duty with the division. The division commander assigned these officers for duty with brigades and regiments where they served as second in command or actually in command of the specialties in which they were interested."

In the attack that followed, the 177th Brigade (353d and 354th Infantry regiments) comprised the assaulting troops, with the 178th Brigade (355th and 356th Infantry regiments) in reserve.

Objective Reached on Schedule.

Quoting further from Gen. Wright's report to Gen. Pershing, he says of the attack:

"'D' day was Nov. 1, 1918. 'H' hour was 5:30 (a. m.). The preliminary bombardment commenced at 3:30 (a. m.).

"The attack progressed in general as planned. During the first day's operation each objective was reached on schedule time. The losses were relatively light and a large number of prisoners and considerable quantity of material were captured.

"Liaison was satisfactory throughout the day. Telephonic communication was maintained with the advance brigade, the artillery and the divisions on the right and left.

"The infantry succeeded in its attack by faithfully following the barrage, without hesitation, to its objectives. The German machine gunners in their fox holes cowered under the effects of the heavy barrage. Some were killed by this fire, but for the main part they were killed or captured by the infantry before they could get the machine guns out of the holes and into action. Chaplains throughout the division, who rapidly followed up the infantry and buried the dead, report that the majority of the German dead had rifle bullets in their heads or upper bodies.

"The enemy resistance with artillery fire was strong at the start, but decreased later in the day as our infantry pressed steadily forward. This fire was confined largely to the back areas, which were likely shelters for reserves. In this way the enemy inflicted rather heavy casualties on a pen of German prisoners which were first assembled near La Gavaniere. By noon of Nov. 1, elements of some 10 German divisions had been reported in the front of the Eighty-ninth Division and those adjoining."

Second Day's Barrage Thin.

The program for the succeding days was largely a repetition of the first. Each brought with it an attack. Nov. 2, officers again were assigned and the 177th Brigade was scheduled to jump off at 5:30 a. m. The infantry was directed to move forward when the artillery barrage lifted and again follow the barrage. But the attack failed to get started because due to the withdrawal of one artillery brigade from support the barrage was less than a third as dense as on the preceding day and the infantry did not recognize it as a barrage. Throughout the day, the progress of the infantry was slow. Severe enemy resistance was encountered, both with machine guns and artillery. It was late in the afternoon before Tailly and Barricourt, the objectives for the day, were reached.

The 177th Brigade having been in the line as the attacking troops for two days, the 178th Brigade was ordered to attack the morning of Nov. 3. Jumping off at 5:30, they were to pass the lines of the 177th Brigade at 6 and proceed with the mission of capturing the heights beyond Barricourt and to push strong reconnaissances toward Stenay. The orders to the 177th were to camp in the vicinity of the existing positions, after the 178th had passed. The towns of Beauclair and Beaufort were captured by daylight the following morning.

The evening of Nov. 3 orders were received from 5th Corps Headquarters that the 1st Division would relieve the 89th in the front line, permitting the 89th to assemble in the rear for a rest. Gen. Wright promptly called Corps Headquarters by telephone and asked permission to remain in line and continue the advance. The 89th troops were in fine condition, he said, and were certain to make further progress the following day. The Corps Commander granted the request.

Nov. 4 the Division's mission was to seize the town of Laneuville, the northern edge of the Forest of Dieulet and to push reconnaissances forward to the Meuse and reconnoiter for river crossings. Of Nov. 4, Gen. Wright, in his report, says: "Operations on this day were slow and, on the whole, unsatisfactory, although the division gained its objective. * * * The attack was not driven with sufficient energy. Opportunity was undoubtedly lost to make large captures of men and material, and possibly hold an important river crossing."

Held Up By Flooded River.

Nov. 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 found the 89th Division strongly holding one side of the Meuse and trying its best to find a way to get troops across. The boche meanwhile had retreated to the far side, had blown up the bridges and flooded the river. Every night instructions were given to push patrols across the river. The night of the 8th several patrols tried to swim the swollen, November-chilled Meuse. Two crossings were effected, but gained no information other than that the enemy was holding the east bank all along the front. The night of the 9th, detachments, using bridge equipment, crossed west of Pouilly, encountered the enemy and obtained prisoners. They also gained important information as to the character of the banks on that side of the river.

The night of the 10th two battalions of the 356th Infantry crossed the Meuse on a cattamoran ferry which the engineers had made in a creek that afforded protection from enemy fire. These troops circled the town of Pouilly and waited for daylight. At dawn they attacked, mopped up the town and captured prisoners and material. German artillery promptly shelled the village, but the 356th pressed on and took Autreville and reached the heights to the east.

Gen. Wright's report of the last day's activities follows:

"At 8:30 hours, November, 1918, information was received at the Division P. C. from the corps that an armistice would go into effect at 11 hours and that fire should cease at that time. Word was immediately sent out by all available means of liaison, including officer couriers, to the front line battalions. Artillery was directed to cease firing at 10:45 in order to avoid mistakes and violations of the armistice.

"The terms of the armistice or the letter of instructions giving the warning as to the approaching armistice, was not received at the Division P. C. until about 10:30 hours. Since the division had been in the line a considerable period without proper bathing facilities, and since it was realized that if the enemy were permitted to remain in Stenay, our troops would be deprived of the billets and probable bathing facilities there, instructions were sent to the infantry commander at Laneuville to push forward directly and take Steney, not waiting for any assistance or support of the Ninetieth Division.

"There has been considerable discussion over the matter of taking this town. It is well established that troops of this division entered the town from Laneuville and occupied its northern portion about 10 o'clock. These troops stated they met practically no resistance and found no Americans in the town. The enemy, however, had patrols in the vicinity.

"Not being thoroughly familiar with the terms of the armistice, the division commander directed that our troops push forward until the enemy was actually encountered; that hostilities must cease, but that any terrain which might be of military value to us and which had been abandoned by the enemy, would be taken and would be occupied. It was intended to complete the operation by occupying the heights east of the river between Stenay and Mouline. The enemy, however, was found in Inor and in Cervisy. Moreover, orders were later received not to advance beyond the line held at 11 hours, and those orders were enforced.

"The German high command made an official complaint that the American troops on the Stenay-Beaumont front had not ceased attacking at 11 hours, but continued their advance. Orders once fully understood were, however, loyally obeyed, although there was no regret that the division had up to the last hour continued to carry out its offensive instructions to the fullest possible extent.

"This operation closed with seven battalions of infantry east of the Meuse, a pontoon bridge in process of construction, artillery in position to support the defense of the heights east of Inor and with the chances of success for the entire operation well in our favor."

In the Battle in the St. Mihiel Salient, Where Division Had Its Baptism of Fire and Blood, Fighting Qualities Displayed Won Praise From Commanders of American and French Armies.

CHAPTER III.

Reducing the St. Mihiel Salient.

THE St. Mihiel salient, always a kink in the Western battle front, was about 65 kilometers long. Its northern limits, where it broke sharply forward from the general front line, were about 17 kilometers southeast of Verdun. From there it bulged east and south, following the heights of the valley of the Meuse and the plain of the Woevre to a point on the Mosells River just above Pont-a-Mousson. The salient took its name from the city of St. Mihiel, 30 kilometers southeast of Verdun. This city was captured by the Bavarians in 1914, who crossed the Meuse at that point and established a small bridgehead around the suburb and hill of Chauvoncourt on the western bank of the river, from which they cut the double-track railway from Toul to Verdun.

For four years the Germans had held the salient. In the first year of the war and again in 1915, the French made desperate efforts to reduce it and drive the Germans back on Metz. Both efforts were extremely costly in lives and the French finally quit trying. After this, the sector became known as one of the quiet sectors.

With the idea of eventually making it the theater of war for the American armies, all the gigantic plans of the S. O. S.—miles of warehouses, quays, railroads, supply depots, etc., were fashioned with the view of feeding this sector. All of Gen. Pershing's plans pointed toward concentrating American divisions there as fast as they could be brought over and put through their European training.

This was the situation in the spring of 1918 when the Germans began their mighty offensives. The allies were desperately in need of man power and Gen. Pershing placed all American troops in Europe at the disposal of Marshal Foch, to do with as he would.

American divisions were rushed from training camps and from quiet sectors to the help of the British and Belgians in Flanders and presently to the aid of the French at Chateau-Thierry. When these dangers had passed in the early summer of 1918, Gen. Pershing desired to revert to his, St. Mihiel, all-American drive to menace Metz plan in September. Marshal Foch sanctioned it and the concentration began.

However, by late summer, Foch's counter-offensive had succeeded so well that he determined to keep the enemy on the defensive, driving "wherever the driving was good." Already he probably was planning to deliver that mighty, final blow for the Americans at the Argonne-Meuse, which was to be a part of an allied smash from the North Sea to Jerusalem. The St. Mihiel affair was cut down to limited objectives, far short of Metz. After the fight, American troops were to be swung out of the St. Mihiel salient and rushed with all possible speed to the Argonne-Meuse attack, scheduled to begin Sept. 25, and which did start one day later, Sept. 26.

Thus it came about that when the St. Mihiel offensive was staged in September at the time originally planned, it had been cut down from a four-act drama, with the fall of Metz as the grand climax—pruned down to a vaudeville sketch.

Nevertheless, to the troops of the Eighty-ninth and those of some other divisions for whom it was the first baptism of fire and blood, the St. Mihiel offensive did not appear to be a very tame or insignificant affair.

Went to Front by Truck.

Aug. 5 the Eighty-ninth Division had left its training area at Reynal. It made the journey to the Toul front by truck, thus gaining the distinction of being the first division to travel from the training area to the front line trenches on gasoline power. The division was sent immediately into the trenches north of Toul to wait until the offensive should start. From Aug. 7 to Sept. 12 the troops from the Middle West thus had their introduction to modern warfare with its gas shells, raids, patrols and other horrors that trenches and No Man's land produced.

The very first night, Aug. 7-8, between 10 p. m. and 4 a. m., during a relief by Eighty-ninth battalions of elements of the Eighty-second Division, the Eighty-ninth suffered about 700 casualties in a violent and continuous gas bombardment. The conduct of the men was commented on as follows in General Order No. 75, Headquarters Eighty-ninth Division:

"Reports of the battalion commander, First Battalion, 354th Infantry, and of the inspectors of the Eighth French army, recently submitted to the division commander, invite attention to the courage and fortitude of the personnel of the First Battalion, 354th Infantry, and the First Battalion, 355th Infantry, on the night of Aug. 7-8, during the gas attack by the Germans on the center regimental zones of the Lucey Sector.

"This attack was made during the period of relief of the Eighty-second Division by the Eighty-ninth Division. In most instances it was the first night the troops had been in the line; in practically every instance it was the first time the personnel had been under fire.

"The orders in force at the time required troops of the advanced positions to hold that position to the death unless withdrawal was ordered by the army commander. This order was faithfully carried out in spite of the intensity of the attack and the helplessness of the troops to retaliate. It was an example of courage and steadfastness deserving the highest praise and the spirit of the troops was further indicated by the fact that they requested to remain in the line and finish their tour of duty when relief was proposed.

"The division commander commends the officers and men of these battalions. This order will be read at the first assembly of each organization after its receipt. By order of

"MAJOR-GENERAL WRIGHT."

The Eighty-ninth Division's stay of over a month in this sector before it went over the top in its first offensive, was marked by unusual initiative and success in night patrolling and capturing of prisoners. This work was especially important at this time, as all possible identifications of the German troops opposing were desired in view of the coming offensive. The Germans, too, were active in patrol raids, and there were sharp clashes frequently out on no man's land when opposing patrol's met. The night of Aug. 14, a patrol of the Third Battalion, 356th Infantry, consisting of one officer, four noncommissioned officers and 24 men encountered two German patrols that were bent on penetrating Eighty-ninth lines. There was a clash, of course. The Americans suffered one slight casualty. And they returned to their lines with four German prisoners. The exploit brought the following citation from the commander of the Thirty-second French Army Corps:

"The General commanding the Thirty-second Army Corps highly congratulates the patrol of the 356th Infantry Regiment, United States, which on Aug. 14, having encountered an enemy detachment, succeeded in capturing four prisoners. For a long time, in that difficult sector, where both adversaries have been using best artifice, we had not taken any prisoners to identify the troops in front of us. This action shows the care taken by the Eighty-ninth D. I. U. S. in the preparation of night raids. It also shows the go and dash of the soldiers of this fine division. The General commanding the Thirty-second French Army Corps. Signed,

"PASSAGA."

The Germans likewise were eager to get identifications and sent strong storming parties, following barrages, against various points of the Eighty-ninth line. One of them made the mistake of attacking D Company, 353d Infantry, one night. They departed empty-handed, but left three of their number dead and six prisoners. L Company, 353d, and Company I, 354th Infantry, also repulsed attacks of this kind with losses to the enemy.

Sept. 6 Major-General William W. Wright assumed command of the Eighty-ninth, relieving Brigadier-General Frank L. Winn, who had been in command of the division since June 1.

The St. Mihiel Attack.

Sept. 12 had been set for "D" day and "H" hour was 5 in the morning. With customary precision all the details had been worked out for each participating unit of the division and the Eighty-ninth was ready for its first "over the top" experience.

Gen. Pershing, who was in command of the operation, had four Army Corps on the front for the attack as follows:

First Corps, Major-General Hunter Liggett; from right to left the 82d, 90th, 5th and 2d Divisions, with 78th in reserve.

Fourth Corps, Major-General Joseph T. Dickman; from right to left the 89th, 42nd and 1st Divisions, with 3rd in reserve.

French 2nd Colonial Corps, Major-General Blondelat, later Major-General Claudel; from right to left, 39th and 26th Infantry Divisions and 2d Cavalry.

Fifth Corps, Major-General George H. Camerone; from right to left, 26th (U. S.), 15th Colonial Infantry (French), and 4th (U. S.) Division in reserve.

In addition various units of French artillery, French Independent Air Force and British and American squadrons.

Gen. Wright, in his official report to Gen. Pershing of the 89th Division's operations at St. Mihiel, says:

"At the beginning of the operation, the enemy occupied a position which he had held since shortly after the beginning of the war, about four years. It consisted of the usual wired intrenchments. Here and there were concrete dugouts. Elaborate observation posts had been constructed and a thorough system of artillery telephone communications had been extended to the rear. The wire, which was four or five bands deep in places, and the intrenchments, had been maintained, improved and elaborated during the enemy's occupancy. They were in good condition. So that, at the beginning of the operation, the enemy occupied a strongly fortified position.

"In the rear area artillery emplacements had been constructed. At one place in our advance a series of jank traps had been prepared. Concrete dugouts and other facilities for shelter existed. Furthermore, the enemy, owing to his long occupancy of the territory, was thoroughly familiar with the terrain.

"The zone of advance of this division was characterized by the occupancy of the Bois de Mort Mare, almost entirely across the immediate front. These woods stood on high ground and offered a naturally strong defensive barrier to our progress.

"The enemy held the line opposite our zone of action from east to west as follows: The 332d Regiment, 419th Regiment and the 257th Regiment of the 77th Reserve Division in the order named. The 6th Reserve Regiment, 57th Regiment and 398th Regiment of the 10th Division, in the order named, held the remainder of the line. The 77th Reserve Division was a low-rated division. The 10th Division was a high-rated division. The troops of our division had forces of each of these two divisions of the enemy opposed to them.

Opposition Not Strong.

"Upon our advance the enemy withdrew. There was no organized opposition to our troops during the morning of the attack and during the early afternoon. During the latter part of the afternoon our troops suffered some casualties from machine gun fire and artillery fire of small calibers. They were also sniped at by 47 mm. guns. The same sort of opposition was interposed to their progress the following day. At no time was there any serious opposition from the enemy infantry except as above.

"The missions of the division were definite, namely: The support of the advance of the 42d Division on our left, to include the capture of Essey by occupying the heights of Euvezin; the support of the advance of the 2d Division by capturing the eastern edge of the Bois de Mort Mare and by turning the woods of Euvezin and Beau Vallon and aid in the capture of Thiacourt.

"With these missions and with the obstacle of the Mort Mare Forest in the immediate front of the division, it was necessary to divide the command and run the risk of an interruption of liaison between the brigades of the division. A frontal attack on the Bois de Mort Mare was believed impracticable, as this would delay the advance and by not giving the necessary support to the divisions on the right and left. It was necessary, however, to assault the forest of the enemy in order to eliminate the danger of ambush troops, trains and artillery roads. These considerations enced the initial arrangements the attack.

The 89th Division in St. Mihiel Operation

Time engaged in sector—Aug. 7 to Oct. 9, 1918.

Period of offensive—Sept. 12 and 13.

Average advance—12 kilometers; extreme depth, 21 kilometers.

Towns taken—Beney, Essey, Bouillonville, Pannes, Xammes, Thiacourt.

Captured.

Prisoners—Officers, 80; men, 2287.

Cannon—72.

Minnewerfers—10.

Machine guns—95.

Rifles—1000.

Large quantities of artillery and small arms ammunition, grenades, clothing, blankets, engineer stores and other equipment. Several locomotives and railroad cars. Prisoners taken and casualties imposed on Tenth and Seventy-seventh German divisions rendered these divisions incapable of further immediate service.

Casualties, Eighty-Ninth.

Killed—Officers, 16; men, 281.

Wounded—Officers, 69; men, 2040.

Missing—39.

American divisions engaged—First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Twenty-sixth, Forty-second, Seventy-eighth, Eighty-second, Eighty-ninth, Ninetieth.

"The mission on the right was given to the 177th Infantry Brigade (less the 354th Regiment—plus one battalion infantry as brigade reserve); that on the left to the 178th Infantry Brigade. Each brigade had the task of mopping up the woods and other enemy locations within its zone of operation.

"A four-hour artillery preparation, followed by a rolling barrage, was directed in the corps order. Especial targets to be fired on during this four-hour preparation were selected by the division artillery officer, based on information of the enemy dispositions and routes of re-enforcement or withdrawal. The plan of the barrage was based on the prescribed rate of the infantry advance, allowing for a halt after the capture of each objective. The corps allowed six hours to reach the final kilometer north of Euvezin—northern ridge of Bois Beau Vallon, which marked the limit for independent action of the division for the first phase.

"The artillery preparations began at 1 o'clock Sept. 12. H hour was 5 o'clock, and a few minutes later word was received that the infantry was advancing. On the right the 177th Brigade advanced in good order and on schedule time. First Battalion, 353rd Infantry, detailed to mop up Mort Mare wood, turned to the flank as directed, mopped up the woods, capturing many prisoners, then reformed and by 11 a. m. had rejoined the regiment in position of regimental reserve. The brigade was halted on a line designated as the objective of the first phase, the limit of the independent action of the division, at 11 a. m., rectifying the position by a slight advance where it remained until 4 p. m. The advance of the 178th Brigade was not so favorable. The right of that brigade maintained the schedule of advance for five hours, the left being slightly retired. The left regiment overtook the right regiment and forged ahead to the line limiting the independent action of the division at noon. The right regiment arrived on this line at 3 p. m. The mopping up of Mort Mare wood was successfully accomplished during the advance.

"The 354th Infantry in reserve advanced to Bouillonville on the night of the 12th and took its place in the line on the morning of the 13th. From the 13th to the 15th the troops dug in on the lines occupied.

"During the advance, information was received by airplane that the patrol was barely able to reach the enemy wire, when they were withdrawn in order to avoid being caught under artillery fire in the open by daylight. On the night of the 14th a large patrol was misled due to a mistake of a guide and became lost in the darkness, returning in the early dawn without having accomplished its mission. On both occasions, machine gun fire indicated the enemy was holding a line of outposts in front of the Hindenburg line. A request was made to continue the attempt on the night of Sept. 15, but as the division on our right had succeeded in developing the Hindenburg line on the night of the 14th, the reconnaissance was not ordered.

"On the night of Sept. 30-Oct. 1, we relieved the 42d Division on our left and on Oct. 4-5 relieved the 78th Division on the east.

"From this time forward, the division consolidated its positions, constructed shelters from harassing fire and organized positions of resistance. On the 21st of September the 177th Brigade took over the sub-sector assigned to the 178th Brigade, which went into reserve to clean up and rest. The night of Sept. 22-23 the 356th Infantry made a regimental raid on the Bois de Donmartin. This raid was a success. The woods were cleared of the enemy and prisoners were captured. A second regimental raid by the 354th Infantry was made on Charey the night of Sept. 25-26. This was part of a general demonstration made all along the line to support the Argonne attack by the First Army. The raid was heavily supported by artillery and penetrated to Charey, although a strong machine gun fire was met.

"The casualties of this division were comparatively light, especially if considered in connection with the territory recovered and other results obtained from the action.

	Killed.	Wounded.	Missing.
Officers	14	41	0
Enlisted men	177	892	69

"This division alone captured 2287 prisoners, practically all of whom belonged to the Tenth Division and the Seventy-seventh Reserve Division. The large number of prisoners captured from these divisions and their casualties rendered them incapable of further immediate service. Enemy killed is estimated at 300. Booty captured was large, including 72 cannon, 95 machine guns, 1000 rifles and enormous quantities of artillery and small arms ammunition, grenades, clothing and blankets, engineer's stores and other equipment. Several locomotives and a number of railroad cars were taken.

"It is learned from a document captured subsequent to the action that the enemy had planned a withdrawal. Pursuant to that plan, a large part of the artillery had been withdrawn. But the enemy had timed our advance for Sept. 15 instead of Sept. 12, so that considerable artillery still remained.

"The villages of Euvezin, Bouillonville, Xammes and Beney were captured by this division in conjunction with neighboring divisions."

Citations of the Division.

The success of the Eighty-ninth in its first fight overseas brought these official citations:

"General Order No. 142, Headquarters Thirty-second French Army Corps, 1918.—The command of the sector of Lucey will be taken over today (Aug. 20) at 3 p. m., by Gen. Dickman, commanding the Fourth Army Corps, United States Army, the headquarters of which will be in Toul.

"Upon relinquishing command of this sector, the General commanding the Thirty-second Corps of the French Army, wishes to congratulate the Eighty-ninth Division, U. S. A., and its discipline, its spirit and its determination, all of which surely guarantee laurels soon to be gained by this fine division, under the distinguished command of its chief, Gen. Winn.

"PASSAGA."

"General Order No. 238, G. H. Q., A. E. F., 1918.—It is with soldierly pride that I record in General Orders a tribute to the taking of the St. Mihiel salient by the First Army.

"On Sept. 12, 1918, you delivered the first concerted offensive operation of the American Expeditionary Forces upon difficult terrain against this redoubtable position immovably held for four years, which crumpled before our ably executed advance. Within 24 hours of the commencement of the attack, the salient had ceased to exist and you were threatening Metz.

"Four divisions, which had never been tried in the exacting conditions of major offensive operations, worthily emulated those of more arduous experience and earned their right to participate in the more difficult task to come. Your staff and auxiliary services, which labored so untiringly and so enthusiastically, deserve equal commendation and we are indebted to the willing co-operation of the veteran French divisions and of auxiliary units which the allied commands put at our disposal.

"Not only did you strengthen a dangerous salient, capture 16,000 prisoners and 443 guns and liberate 240 square miles of French territory, but you have demonstrated the fitness for battle of a unified American army.

"We appreciate the loyal training and effort of the First Army. In the name of our country, I offer our hearty and unmeasured thanks to these splendid Americans of the .... division, which were engaged.

"By command of Gen. Pershing. JAMES W. McANDREW, Chief of Staff."

Interesting Facts About the 89th Division

CALLED the Middle West Division.

Organized and originally commanded by Major-General Leonard Wood.

Drafted from the States of Missouri, Kansas, South Dakota, Nebraska, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona.

Officers chiefly from those same States and most of them graduates of the Fourteenth Provisional Training Regiment, Fort Riley, Kan.

Fought at St. Mihiel in first All-American drive on western front.

Fought at Argonne-Meuse, last battle of the war.

Was part of the Army of Occupation in Germany.

The first division to move from training area to the front by truck.

The first division to enter the line without previously having been brigaded with French or British troops.

The first division to be continuously in the front line for more than eight weeks.

The first National Army division to participate in a major operation.

The first National Army division to enter Germany.

The 89th Division was organized Aug. 25, 1917, at Camp Funston, Kan.

The division, less 164th Artillery Brigade, left Camp Funston May 22, 1918, arriving at Camp Mills, Long Island, May 25. June 2 organizations of the division started leaving for New York and Montreal, points of embarkation. The convoys which carried the 89th overseas, assembled at New York and Halifax and sailed for England. On arrival there, the route taken was from Liverpool and London to Winchester, to Southampton, across the channel to Le Harve, France. The division then went to the Rinacourt-St. Blin-Prez sous la Fouche-Trampot training area, arriving there June 30, 1918. Aug. 5 it went by motor truck to the St. Mihiel front. As a member of First Army, 4th Corps, it went over the top at St. Mihiel Sept. 12. October 9, 1918, the division started from St. Mihiel salient for Argonne-Meuse sector. Oct. 19 it went into the front line, where it remained until hostilities ceased Nov. 11. During this period belonged to 5th Corps, 1st Army. Nov. 24, 1918, the division as a member of the Third American Army, 7th Corps, advanced into Germany as a part of the Army of Occupation, proceeding through Belgium and Luxembourg. 164th F. A. Brigade rejoined in Germany.

CHAPTER 4.
THE 164TH FIELD ARTILLERY BRIGADE.

"The orders for determining the strength of the enemy on the Hindenburg line after the objective was reached, were acted on by sending out patrols. On the night of the 13th orders were received so late that the divisions on our right and left were progressing with much greater speed than ours, but nothing could be done in view of our difficult ground, broad front, enforced breaking of liaison and rolling barrage time table.

FATE put down a barrage of conspiracies against the 164th Field Artillery Brigade to keep it from having a part in any of the major offensive drives of the war. Three times the brigade was close enough to be in liaison with one of the smashes against the boche. The same number of times the chance turned out to be a "dud" and the Eighty-ninth's artillery "just missed" the big show.

However, the stay of the 164th F. A. Brigade on the St. Mihiel front from Sept. 15 to Nov. 11 was not wholly devoid of excitement. The boche did not entirely neglect this sector after the American drive of Sept. 12-13 had ousted him. He was still smarting under that licking and partly for spite perhaps; partly, no doubt, because he hoped to discourage an American attack on Metz, which he still expected and feared; and partly in retaliation for continuing American raids and barrages, the German gunners did not cease, until the armistice, to pepper with gas and high explosive shell, the St. Mihiel terrain which the Hun troops had so recently quitted.

The Germans knew the sector thoroughly, having just ended a four years' tenancy of it, and they had good observation, both aerial and terrestrial. So the batteries and kitchens and "P. C.'s" of the various units of the 164th Brigade got their share of shelled Hun hate. Moreover, from a technical point of view, there was not a great deal about the boche shooting to criticise. The casualties which the 164th suffered at the front, begrudgingly testify to the accuracy and skill of German gunnery.

However, the gunners of the 340th, 341st and 342d regiments, making up the 164th Brigade, overlooked no bets in retaliation. They soaked it to the Hun at every opportunity. They searched long and faithfully for sensitive boche points as targets. And when troops of the artillery brigade visited this terrain after the German withdrawal beyond the Rhine, they proudly observed numerous very excellent, shell-inflicted reasons for the previous pronounced peevishness of the enemy. American gunnery had been a success.

The first time that Gen. Pershing took a chance and went into action without the support of the 164th Artillery Brigade, was at St. Mihiel, Sept. 12-13. The Camp Funston gunners were extremely disappointed in the Commander in Chief that he did not hold off this show until they got up. They had made an excellent record, Aug. 2 to Sept. 10, at Camp de Souge, the artillery training area near Bordeaux. The instructors there had been emphatic in their praise of the way the men from Arizona, Colorado and Missouri had learned to handle the French 75mm. and 155mm. guns. The school grades of the 164th were the best that had been made at this artillery university in France. And these newly made artillerymen longed to show what they could do in a smashing drive.

The closing days at the training camp gave fresh hope that the 164th would get to the front in time for the big show which most of the troops sensed was coming off. Everything pointed to the belief that this artillery brigade from the Middle West, with its 340th and 341st regiments of 75's (light artillery), its 342d regiment of 155's (heavy artillery), its 314th Ammunition Train and its 314th Battery of trench mortars, was needed for some immediate purpose at the front.

The training course had been cut down from six weeks to five. Guns caissons, pistols, rifles, horses and mules, harness, mounted equipment, wagons, carts, motor trucks, motor cycles and motor cars, telephones, wire, radio outfits, technical instruments and devices more numerous and complicated than a combined submarine, terrestrial and aerial navigating engineer would need, rolling kitchens, and a thousand and one different items of personal equipment—all had been issued in a confused, take-this-quick-and-sign-here rush. Men, animals and stores were piled into long trains of box cars—whisked through Bordeaux and rushed to Toul. There it was "Unload, quick, the train of the next outfit is whistling for the quay!"

Reception committees in enemy observation planes flew an overhead welcome. Inhospitable allied anti-aircraft guns dotted the skyscape with little white clouds that strung out in the wake of the retreating winged men—the kind of a tail that no human kite wants hanging to him.

"Prepare to mount!"

It is march now, for the rest of the way. Ambulances, trucks and motor cycles streak by. The road cuts through shattered relics of villages and presently it begins to bridge trenches and the shell craters of what yesterday was "No Man's Land."

Too late! The envied gunners of other and luckier artillery brigades pulled a lanyard greeting to the disappointed 164th. The first army had not waited for the Funston artillery. Doughboys of the 89th had gone over the top without the "home" guns—supported no doubt, by some poor sort of a barrage handout that the neighbors had "left-over." The St. Mihiel drive went off Sept. 12. And the first gun of the 164th was not fired until about 10 o'clock the night of Sept. 16, when Battery F of the 340th, Capt. D. S. Lamm, commanding, went into position near Thiaucourt and sent its first shell Berlinward.

Field Marshal Foch was Fate's ally in Plot No. 2 to cheat the Funston shell tossers out of a major operation. The allied Supreme Commander started the Argonne-Meuse smash Sept. 26, only 13 days after the second and final day's advance in the St. Mihiel drive. Divisions were being shifted around so rapidly within the area behind the two salients that the allied head driver abandoned all idea of trying to maintain family ties. In most cases infantry troops were moved by truck over big distances. Horsedrawn artillery could not keep up. Accordingly at this time, numerous artillery brigades were divorced from their own divisions. Infantry divisions moved about separately, picking up the artillery support which they found in place. During its stay at St. Mihiel, the 164th Brigade supported three divisions successively, the 89th, the 37th (Ohio National Guard) and the 28th (Pennsylvania National Guard). The 89th Division pulled out of the St. Mihiel sector Oct. 9, leaving its artillery behind.

Major-General William W. Wright, commanding the Eighty-ninth Division, tried to bring about a reunion between the infantry and the artillery of the division in the Argonne-Meuse sector, but failed. In his official report to General Headquarters of the Argonne-Meuse operations, Gen. Wright said:

"The 164th Field Artillery Brigade was left in the Pannes-Flirey-Limey sector, attached to the Thirty-seventh American Division. The Eighty-ninth Division commander made repeated requests for the return of the artillery brigade, with the view of establishing liaison between the infantry and artillery. Unfortunately, the army was unable to comply with this request."

The third "miss" of the 164th was at the windup. This time the Germans would not wait. The armistice stepped on the last chance of the 164th Field Artillery Brigade to get in on a big smash. At that time, the brigade was supporting the Twenty-eighth Division still in the St. Mihiel sector, with brigade headquarters at Heidicourt, France. Marshal Foch, knowing he had the Germans on the run with his hammer blows all along the line from the North Sea to Jerusalem, decided on a final smash at Metz from St. Mihiel. Gen. Mangin's Tenth French Army and the newly organized Second American Army, which included the Twenty-eighth Division, were to make the drive. Preliminary arrangements had been concluded. Assaulting and reserve troops had been designated and concentrated for the attack. Orders, maps, etc., had been issued down to battalion commanders. Artillery battalions moved their guns up close behind the infantry and all was ready for the jump-off Nov. 12. But the day before hostilities ceased.

Officers and men of the 164th will always believe Providence was kind to the Germans by thus denying the brigade. Under the fine leadership of Brigadier-General Edward T. Donnelly, its commander from May 14, 1918 to the present date, the brigade reached a high degree of efficiency, both in accuracy of fire and in maneuvering. It received the following official tribute from Major-General William Hay, commanding the Twenty-eighth Division:

"Headquarters, Twenty-eighth Division, November, 1918. Memorandum for Commanding-General 164th Field Artillery Brigade. The division commander desires me to express to the officers and enlisted men of your command, his appreciation of the excellent work which they have done during the time that the Twenty-eighth Division has been in this sector.

"Our infantry states that the barrage work of your brigade is uniformly good and the proof that your artillery work is good is that it has the confidence of the infantry of the Twenty-eighth.

"The work of Capt. Wentworth, your operations officer, and the uniform desire to assist the infantry manifested by yourself and by all of your staff, is specially appreciated. By command of Major-General Hay W. C. Sweeney, Chief of Staff."

During its stay in the St. Mihiel sector, the 18 batteries of the 164th Brigade—12 batteries of 75's and six of 155's—had excellent practice in firing. Frequent infantry raids called for protecting barrages and harassing, interdiction and retaliatory fire provided fine opportunities for target practice. Officers and gunners found the French guns marvels. Particularly the French 75mm. gun, which corresponds in size to the American 3-inch field piece. In a contest as to which one influence contributed most to the Allied victory, the French "75" probably would receive the solid artillery suport, including the German votes.

The most spectacular show that the 164th staged was its participation in the stupendous artillery prologue before the curtain went up on the Argonne-Meuse offensive. The night of Sept. 25-26, every allied gun in the sector kicked in with a continuous six-hour roar against the Hun. An hour before midnight the 72 guns of the 164th joined the barrage overture. Sixty minutes of this, then an incessant shelling of all known boche targets until an hour before the Meuse-Argonne jump-off, which was scheduled for dawn. This last hour was marked by a terrific barrage. It was great not to be anywhere on the German front that night. But being behind that mighty chorus provided a thrill that nobody who experienced it ever will forget.

The finals in brigade firing came armistice day. Eleven o'clock was the hour set for "the last shot." All batteries were instructed to begin the final bombardment at 9 a. m. Each was permitted to fire at maximum speed for the first 50 seconds of the last minute of the war—from 10:59 to 10:50:50. The final 10 seconds were allowed for the flight and burst of the last projectiles into boche territory.

The firing between 9 o'clock and 11:59 was intense, but it was tame compared to the noise that burst forth on the dot of 1 minute to 11 and continued for 50 seconds. It was a rare opportunity for the gun crews and they relished it. Field pieces were shooting with almost machine-gun staccato. Battery E, 240th, Capt. M. A. Esmiol, commanding, claimed the honors with 24 shots fired by each of the battery's four guns in the 50 seconds.

A few days later the batteries were withdrawn from their positions and there began a period of intensive conditioning of animals and bringing the equipment of the brigade up to marching standard. Soon the 164th heard that it was to march overland into Germany, there to rejoin the Eighty-ninth Division as a part of the army of occupation. Late the night of Thanksgiving day, orders were received to start the march and the movement toward conquered Rhineland began the following morning.

The march was a rare experience. It led over the German trenches and fortifications, through a corner of Belgium and picturesque Luxemburg and into Germany. Along the route the natives quaintly expressed their "welcome to our deliverers" sentiment with music and shouting and arches of triumph and allied flags fluttering from every window. Early in December the brigade reached the German line and crossed into invaded territory.

Gen. Donnelly established his headquarters at Malberg and maintained them there until Dec. 30. From then on his "P. C." was at Bitburg. The regiments and units of the ammunition train were scattered over a large area in the Rhenish territory occupied by the Eighty-ninth Division. The winter and spring in Germany was devoted to the administration of civil affairs, intensive military training, range firing and recreation.

Corp. (then Private) Jesse N. Funk, Company L, 354th Infantry, and Private First Class Charles D. Barger, Company L, 354th Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity, above and beyond the call of duty, in action with the enemy, near the Bois de Bantheville, France, Oct 31, 1918.

Learning that two daylight patrols had been caught out in No Man's Land and were unable to return, Private Barger and Private Funk, upon their own initiative, made two trips 500 yards beyond our lines, under constant machine-gun fire, and rescued two officers.

Barger's home address: Henry S. McFeron (uncle), Stotts City, Mo.

Funk's home address: Martin Funk (father), Calhan, Colo.

Private David B. Barkeley, Company A, 356th Infantry (deceased).

For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity, above and beyond the call of duty, in action with the enemy, near Pouilly, France, Nov. 9, 1918.

When information was desired as to the enemy's position on the opposite side of the River Meuse, Private Barkeley, with another soldier, volunteered without hesitation and swam the river to reconnoiter the exact location. He succeeded in reaching the opposite bank, despite the evident determination of the enemy to prevent a crossing. Having obtained his information, he again entered the water for his return, but before his goal was reached, he was seized with cramps and drowned.

Next of kin: Mrs. Antonio Barkeley (mother), 1121 East Quincy street, San Antonio, Tex.

Capt. Marcellus H. Chiles, 356th Infantry (deceased).

For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity, above and beyond the call of duty, in action with the enemy, near Le Champy Bas, France, Nov. 3, 1918.

When his battalion, of which he had just taken command, was halted by machine-gun fire from the front and left flank, Capt. Chiles picked up the rifle of a dead soldier, and, calling on his men to follow, led the advance across a stream waist deep, in the face of the machine-gun fire. Upon reaching the opposite bank, this gallant officer was seriously wounded in the abdomen by a sniper, but before permitting himself to be evacuated he made complete arrangements for turning over his command to the next senior officer, and under the inspiration of his fearless leadership, his battalion reached its objective. Capt. Chiles died shortly after reaching the hospital.

Home address: John Horne Chiles, 2815 West Thirty-seventh street, Denver, Colo.

Sergt. Arthur J. Forrest, Company "D," 354th Infantry: For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty in action with the enemy near Remonville, France, Nov. 1, 1918.

When the advance of his company was stopped by bursts of fire from a nest of six enemy machine guns, without being discovered, he worked his way, single-handed, to a point within 50 yards of the machine gun nest. Charging, single-handed, he drove out the enemy in disorder, thereby protecting the advance platoon from annihilating fire, and permitting the resumption of the advance of his company.

Home address: William Forrest (father), 112 South Maple street, Hannibal, Mo.

First. Lieut. Harold A. Furlong, Company "M," 353rd Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity, above and beyond the call of duty, in action with the ememy, near Bantheville, France, Nov. 1, 1918.

Immediately after the opening of the attack in the Bois de Bantheville, when his company was held up by severe machine gun fire from the front, which killed his company commander and several soldiers, Lieut. Furlong moved out in advance of the line with great courage and coolness, crossing an open space several hundred yards wide. Taking up a position behind the line of machine guns, he closed in on them, one at a time, killing a number of the enemy with his rifle, putting four machine gun nests out of action and driving twenty German prisoners into our lines.

Home address: Arthur D. Furlong (father), 2950 West Grand boulevard, Detroit, Mich.

Sergt. (then private first class) Harold I. Johnston, 2202872, Company "A," 356th Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity, above and beyond the call of duty, in action with the enemy, near Pouilly, France, Nov. 9, 1918.

When information was desired as to the enemy's position on the opposite side of the River Meuse, Private Johnston, with another soldier, volunteered without hesitation, and swam the river to reconnoiter the exact location of the enemy. He succeeded in reaching the opposite bank, despite the evident determination of the enemy to prevent a crossing. Having obtained his information, he again entered the water for his return. This was accomplished after a severe struggle, which so exhausted him that he had to be assisted from the water, after which he rendered his report of the exploit.

Home address: Mrs. Belle Renshaw (mother), 1148 Speer boulevard, Denver, Colo.

Second Lieut. J. Hunter Wickersham, Company "H," 353d Infantry, deceased: For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity, above and beyond the call of duty, in action with the enemy, near Limey, France, Sept. 12, 1918.

Advancing with his platoon during the St. Mihiel offensive, Lieut. Wickersham was severely wounded in four places by the bursting of a high explosive shell. Before receiving any aid for himself, he dressed the wounds of his orderly, who was wounded at the same time. He then ordered and accompanied the further advance of his platoon, although weakened by the loss of blood. His right hand and arm being disabled by wounds, he continued to fire his revolver with his left hand until, exhausted by loss of blood, he fell and died from his wounds before aid could be administered.

HOW THEIR DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSSES WERE WON BY MEN OF THE 89TH

First Sergeant Harry J. Adams, Company K, 353d Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action at Bouillonville, France, Sept. 12-13, 1918.

Sergt. Adams followed a retreating German into a house in the town of Bouillonville and, ascertaining that the enemy had entered a dugout, fired the remaining two shots in his pistol through the door and ordered the surrender of the occupants. By his bravery, coolness and confidence, he captured, single-handed, approximately 300 prisoners, including seven officers.

Home address: Miss Mayme Hunter (friend), 1331 Crytania street, New Orleans, La.

First Lieutenant John H. Ale, Company M, 355th Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action north of Flirey, France, Sept. 12, 1918.

After having been badly wounded early in the action, losing his right hand and wounded in both legs and chest, Lieut. Ale returned to his platoon and addressed the men, telling them he was unable to go with them, but that he had confidence in their ability to go ahead without him and urged them to sustain the high reputation of the platoon, company and battalion, thereby inspiring his men with his own personal courage to advance.

Home address: Mrs. Mary V. Ale, R. F. D., Noblesville, Ind.

Private Alexander J. Barbier, Headquarters Company, 356th Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action near Bantheville, France, Oct. 22, 1918.

While engaged in a raid on enemy positions, Private Barbier was painfully wounded in the head, but refused to go to the rear, remaining on duty with his platoon and taking an active part in the action for 24 hours after being wounded.

Home address: Mrs. L. C. Barbier (mother), Whitecastle, La.

Sergt. John Brinda, B Company, 355th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action, north of Flirey, France, on Sept. 12, 1918. Sergt. John Brinda, without awaiting orders, alone charged a concealed machine gun which was holding up his platoon, killed the gunner, captured four men, thereby enabling the platoon to advance. Home address, Mrs. John Brinda (wife), Alsada, Mont.

Corp. Billie W. Belt, Company B, 314th Motor Supply Train.

When an enemy shell struck a truck loaded with gasoline, killing two men and wounding several others, Corp. Belt rushed to the burning truck in spite of the danger from the exploding bedons of gasoline, pulled one of the men from beneath the burning truck and extinguished the flames on his clothing. He then returned and attempted to rescue another man, but was unable to do so.

Home address: Mrs. Martha Belt (wife), Windsor, Mo.

Private Roy A. Bess, L Company, 355th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Beaufort, France, Nov. 4, 1918. Although wounded by machine-gun fire, Private Bess refused first aid, and continued in the engagement for two days without treatment. Home address, Mrs. Catherine Tallen, mother, Glen Allen, Mo.

Private Ora Lee Butcher, M Company, 356th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action in the Bois de Mort Mare, near Flirey, France, Sept. 12, 1918. Private Butcher, on duty as an observer at battalion headquarters, twice volunteered to carry important messages from his battalion commander to company commanders. In so doing he passed through heavy barrages. Home address, Mrs. Bettie Butcher (mother), R. F. D. No. 2, Pattonsburg, Mo.

First Lieutenant Thorndike Deland, 340th Field Artillery. For extraordinary heroism in action near Marimbois Farm, France, Nov. 4, 1918. Assisted by a soldier, Lieut. Deland went forward in advance of the infantry to lay telephone wires. Nearing Marimbois Farm they found the place occupied by the enemy. Armed with hand grenades, Lieut. Deland advanced on a dugout, where he routed out 17 of the enemy, bringing them back to our lines in the midst of a severe shell and machine gun fire. Home address, Mrs. Thorndike Deland (wife), 220 West Forty-sixth street, New York City, N. Y.

First Sergeant Clyde H. Dewalt, Company K, 356th Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action near Pouilly, France, Nov. 10-11, 1918.

Sergt. Dewalt volunteerd and led a patrol against enemy machine guns which were flanking his company. He captured two of the guns and returned with five prisoners, making possible the continuance of his company's advance.

Home address: Solomon Dewalt (father), Danville, Pa.

Private Edward W. A. Dietz, Company F, 314th Engineers.

For extraordinary heroism in action near Bantheville, France, Nov. 6-7, 1918.

Private Dietz accompanied an officer on a reconnaissance of the bridge at Pouilly, and the road from Pouilly to Inor. Successfully reaching the river, he crossed, an act which had not been done by any troops previously. Recrossing under heavy enemy fire, he made his way to Pouilly, collecting on the way most valuable information and data for engineer work. Just as they approached their destination he was wounded, the officer with him being killed. When darkness set in, he returned and supplied most valuable information regarding the reconaissance.

Home address: Wm. H. Dietz (father), 34 Jay street, Newark, N. J.

Private Andrew W. Dilbeck, Company I, 356th Infantry (deceased).

For extraordinary heroism in action near Pouilly, France, Nov. 10-11, 1918.

Private Dilbeck accompanied Lieut. Murphy and three other soldiers in a flank attack on three heavy machine guns. Fired on directly at 30 yards, they charged the guns, and in the hand-to-hand fight which followed this soldier and two of his comrades were killed.

Next of kin: William J. Dilbeck (father), Grossville, Ala.

Private John J. Dorgan, Company C, 356th Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action near Beney, France, Sept. 23, 1918.

Although wounded four times at the start of the engagement, Private Dorgan continued with the advance of his platoon. Under heavy fire, his comrades began to waver, and Private Dorgan immediately went to the assistance of the Sergeant and aided greatly in keeping the men under control.

Home address: Miss Mary Dorgan (sister), Ada, Ok.

Sergt. Otis V. Dozer, Company F, 353d Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action in the Bois de Barricourt, France, Nov. 2, 1918.

Sergt. Dozer fearlessly exposed himself in the face of machine gun fire for the purpose of setting an example to the men of his company. He was wounded while advancing, but continued until exhausted. His coolness and courage resulted in the capture of three machine guns and their crews.

Home address: Emma Dozer (mother), General Delivery, Cedarvale, Kan.

Private John I. Dugan, B Company, 353rd Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action near Bois de Bantheville, France, October 23, 1918.

Although badly wounded in the face, Private Dugan refused medical attention and assisted in an attack on a machine gun nest, capturing one gun by himself.

Home address: Ross Dugan (brother), Fort Scott, Kansas.

Corp. Lloyd Farber, Headquarters Company, 353rd Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action near Bantheville, France, November 2, 1918.

Corp. Farber displayed exceptional bravery in three times carrying messages through severe artillery barrages.

Home address: Mrs. E. E. Farber, (mother), Hoxey, Kansas.

Sergt. Harry E. Flannery, D Company, 341st Machine Gun Battalion.

For extraordinary heroism in action in the Bois de Bantheville, France, Nov. 1, 1918.

During heavy enemy shell fire he kept excellent control over his gun section, and when severely wounded, refused to be cared for until other men received first aid.

Home address: Mrs. Margie Slewrdsen, Brown Valley, Minn.

Private Herman J. Forth, Medical Detachment, 341st Machine Gun Battalion, (deceased).

For extraordinary heroism in action in the Bois de Barricourt, France, Nov. 2, 1918.

Private Forth, in the face of enemy machine gun fire, went to the aid of two severely wounded soldiers, carried them into a shell hole, dressed their wounds, and while endeavoring to get the blankets from the packs of the wounded men, was struck in the head by a machine gun bullet and instantly killed.

Next of kin: Mrs. Dora A. Forth, (mother), Wayne City, Ill.

Sergt. George W. Gardner, Company F, 353d Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action in Bois de Barricourt, France, November 2, 1918. Sergt. Gardner led his platoon through shell and machine gun fire, in an attack on strong enemy positions, capturing two machine guns and assisting in the destruction of several others that were holding up our advance. Home address: Mrs. Mary Etta Gardner (mother), general delivery, Traer, Kan.

Private William A. Hall, Company A, 353d Infantry (deceased). For extraordinary heroism in action near Se Mihiel, France, September 12, 1918. Private Hall, acting as runner between his company and battalion headquarters, made several trips through severe artillery bombardment before he was severely wounded. Home address: William A. Hall (father), 501 East Sixteenth street, Winfield, Kan.

Second Lieutenant Charles R. Hanger, Company I, 356th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Pouilly, France, November 10-11, 1918. When three of the companies of his battalion had become lost in the dense fog, during the crossing of the Meuse, Lieut. Hanger made five trips through extremely heavy shell fire and guided them to the river crossings, thus enabling the battalion to fulfill its mission in the operation. Home address: J. W. Hanger (father), Laddonia, Mo.

Major Mark Hanna, 356th Infantry (deceased). For extraordinary heroism in action near Stenay, France, November 6-11, 1918. Major Hanna displayed extreme courage on November 6 by making a daring reconnaissance of the town of Pouilly, near Stenay. This town was held in strength by the enemy, with every indication of determination to prevent a crossing of the River Meuse at this point. He remained in this town over two hours, returning with information of great value. On the night of November 10-11 he was in command of the second battalion of the 356th Infantry, and while waiting to cross the River Meuse Major Hanna's battalion was subject to terrific shell fire. During this period he walked up and down the line encouraging and steadying his men. Major Hanna was killed at the head of his command. Next of kin: Mrs. Corinne Esther Hanna (wife), 2954 East Twenty-eighth street, Kansas City, Mo.

First Lieutenant Elert Heiken, 356th Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action in the Argonne and St. Mihiel, France, drives, Sept. 23, Nov. 9-10, 1918.

On the night of Sept. 23, though wounded in the shoulder at the beginning of the attack on Dommartin Wood, Lieut. Heiken continued until his mission was successfuly accomplished. On the night of Nov. 9, with eight men, he was the first to cross the Meuse and patrol enemy lines. On the night of Nov. 10, with 20 men, he covered the crossing of his battalion until severely wounded.

Home address: Mrs. Caroline Heiken (mother), 1010 Cedar street, Ottawa, Kan.

Maj. Henry W. Hobson, 356th Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action near St. Mihiel, France, Sept. 12, 1918.

Within 10 minutes after the beginning of the advance at 5 a. m., Maj. Hobson was twice wounded, once in the shoulder by a machine-gun bullet and once by shrapnel in the leg. Being in command of the assault battalion and realizing the importance of its operations, he continued to accompany and direct his command throughout the day, notwithstanding his wounds, which caused him great pain and difficulty of movement. At halts he had to be assisted to lie down and get up by his Adjutant; nevertheless, he remained on duty until the fighting of the day was over.

Home address: Mrs. George McKenzie, care of A. D. Parker, 1736 Commercial Trust Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

Second Lieutenant Frank J. Hoeynck, 314th Engineers (deceased).

For extraordinary heroism in action near Bantheville, France, Nov. 6-7, 1918.

Lieut. Hoeynck received orders to make a reconnaissance of the bridge at Pouilly, and the road from Pouilly to Inor. He was accompanied on the expedition by a soldier of his platoon, the two being the first to cross the river at Inor. At this point they gained most valuable information. Recrossing the river, he made his way to Pouilly, under machine-gun fire, collecting engineer data of the greatest importance. Just as they approached their destination,

Germans Deceived on Time Set for St. Mihiel Attack

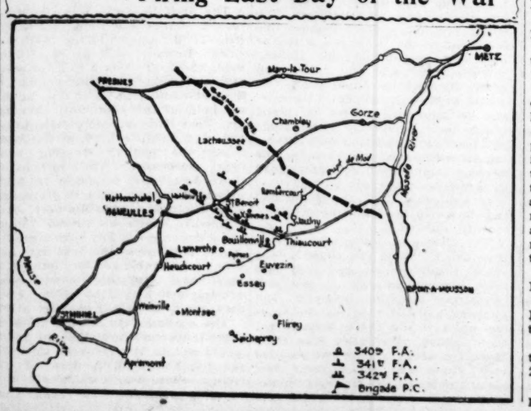
THE total number of men under Gen. Pershing in the St. Mihiel operation was a little over 450,000. There were about 216,000 American and possibly 48,000 French troops in line, and about 190,000 American troops in reserve.

The opposing German commander was Lieutenant-General Fuchs, commanding the German Army Detachment C, which was a part of the German army group of which Gen. von Gallwitz was the commander. In German official reports, captured, Gen. Fuchs estimated that he had in line, opposing Gen. Pershing at St. Mihiel, one division to every 12 kilometers of front. This, it has been estimated, gave him about 75,000 men in line and possibly an equivalent number of available reserves.

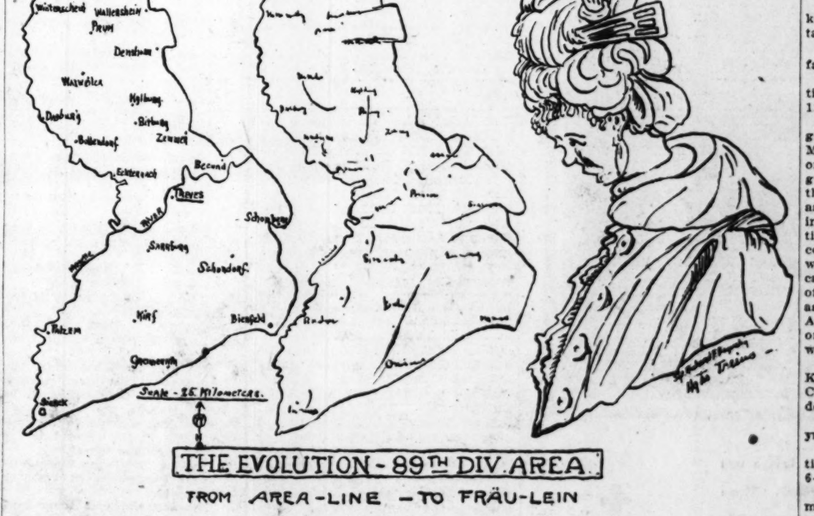
Von Gallwitz planned and had started a general withdrawal from the St. Mihiel salient. He knew something of Gen. Pershing's stupendous preparations and did not care to face the American attack. Pershing succeeded in getting "secret" information across to the enemy that the Americans would attack Sept. 15. Three days earlier, Sept. 12, it started and caught Fuchs before he had withdrawn much except his heaviest artillery.

Fuchs was greatly outnumbered, it is true, but he had enormous quantities of artillery and machine guns and was defending a terrain which the Germans had spent four years in fortifying.

Where the 89th Artillery Was Firing Last Day of the War



'From Area Line to Fraulein,' a St. Louisan's Quaint Map Conceit of the 89th Division's Fighting Record



THE signing of the armistice, ending the Argonne drive, found the 89th Division holding a line extending from east of Stenay and Inor to east of Autreville, on the eastern side of the Meuse river. From there the division marched through Belgium and Luxemburg into Germany and, as part of the army of occupation, was assigned to the Prum-Bitburg-Treves-Saarburg area. This area is in the southwest portion of Prussia on the boundry line between Prussia and Luxemburg and Prussia and Belgium. The area is northwest of the city of Metz and southwest of Coblenz.

Sergt. Richard F. Beguelin of Jennings, St. Louis County, formerly a designer and engraver for a St. Louis jewelry firm, but now serving as Col. W. W. Whiteside's personal interpreter, in studying the maps of the divisional area, found that by drawing lines between the towns a rough sketch of a woman's head resulted. He labeled the drawing "From Area-line to Frau-lein," and gave it to Maj. Frank Wilbur Smith, division intelligence officer, who had it issued as one of the records of the division.

Private Earl A. Hoffman, Company C, 341st Machine Gun Battalion: For extraordinary heroism in action in the Bois de Bantheville, France, Oct. 24, 1918.

Severely wounded while dressing the wounds of 23 of his platoon, Private Hoffman continued his work until he fainted from pain, and was evacuated.

Home address: J. Hoffman (father), 707 East Chestnut street, Denison, Io.

Sergt. George G. Hollis, Company E, 356th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Lucy, France, Nov. 4, 1918. While acting as scout of a patrol group, Corp. Hollis encountered an enemy machine gun nest and opened fire on it. He killed the gunner and captured the nest, thereby protecting the balance of his patrol from casualties. He turned the captured guns on the enemy. Home address, Mrs. Belle Hollis, mother, Reedley, Cal.

Private Wendell W. Jacobs, Company C, 341st Machine Gun Battalion. For extraordinary heroism in action in the Bois de Bantheville, France, Oct. 30, 1918. When six men of his section were wounded and his own hand was partly severed by a shell fragment Private Jacobs had another soldier sever his hand with a pocket knife and then bandaged it. While in this condition he assisted other wounded soldiers in every possible way before proceeding to the first aid station, whence he was evacuated to the hospital. Home address, Mrs. Kate W. Jacobs, mother, Box 44, Carbondale, Colo.

Sergt. Martin J. Janssen, Company A, 356th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Flirey, France, Sept. 12, 1918. Coming up in rear of two platoons of a battalion of the first line, Sergt. Janssen, belonging to another battalion, noticed the two platoons were held up by machine-gun fire from the front and flank and appeared to be without a leader. Fearlessly exposing himself, he ran from one end of the line to the other, urging the men forward, until both platoons had moved across a small gully out of danger from the machine-gun fire. His bravery and leadership thus prevented the interruption of the advance of the entire first line. Home address, George Janssen, Rushville, Neb.

First Lieutenant Harold W. Kenaston, 356th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Pouilly, France, Nov. 4-10, 1918. On Nov. 4 Lieut. Kenaston was severely gassed during a heavy shelling, but remained on duty. On Nov. 5, still suffering from the effects of the gas, he volunteered and went to a nearby town to assist in the work of supplying reserve rations for the command, working continuously for two days and two nights under terrific fire. During the night of Nov. 10-11 he guided an element to the pontoon crossing the Meuse and while returning, he was rendered unconscious by a shell explosion. Gaining consciousness, he voluntarily started on a search for a part of his command which had been lost in the dense fog. Home address, Doris C. Kenaston, wife, 130 Lafayette avenue, Passaic, N. J.

Brigadier-General (then Colonel) C. E. Kilbourne, Chief of Staff Eighty-ninth Division. For fearlessly exposing himself to danger of machine-gun and shell fire, in advance of the American troops and there exercising cool judgment and strong determination in reorganizing the lines and getting troops forward to the army's objective—this along the German position west of Thiaucourt, France, on the afternoon of Sept. 12, 1918. Home address, Mrs. C. E. Kilbourne (wife), Fort Riley, Kan.

Private Richard E. King, Headquarters Company, 340th Field Artillery. For extraordinary heroism in action near Marimbois Farm, France, Nov. 4, 1918. Assisting an officer in establishing communication with the advancing infantry, Private King reached Marimbois Farm, where he found the place occupied by the enemy. Armed with hand grenades, he advanced on a dugout, where he routed out 17 of the enemy, bringing them back to our lines in the midst of severe shell and machine-gun fire. Home address, Mrs. Genevieve King (mother), Rivola Apartments, Seattle, Wash.

Private David Kline, Medical Detachment, 341st Machine Gun Battalion. For extraordinary heroism in action near Remonville and Barricourt, France, Nov. 1-2, 1918. Attached to a company immediately behind the assault battalion of infantry, Private Kline worked unceasingly giving first aid treatment to the wounded in his vicinity in an area constantly swept by intense fire from all arms. Displaying the highest devotion to duty and disregard for his own safety, he frequently worked in plain view of the enemy. Home address, Mr. Daniel Kline (father), 2108½ Chicago street, Omaha, Neb.

Private Clarence Loken, Company H, 356th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Beaufort, France, Nov. 4, 1918. Private Loken was engaged as a runner, and made several trips through heavy bombardment, from the front line to the support battalion. Even after his equipment had been riddled by shell fragments he continued, maintaining liaison between these two points. Home address, Thomas A. Loken (father), General Delivery, Tigerton, Wis.

Private Clarence E. Lauber, Company I, 356th Infantry (deceased). For extraordinary heroism in action near Pouilly, France, Nov. 10-11, 1918. Private Lauber accompanied Lieut. Murphy and three other soldiers in a flank attack on three heavy machine guns. Fired on directly at 30 yards, they charged the guns and in the hand-to-hand fight which followed this soldier and two of his comrades were killed. Next of kin Mrs. Elsie Porter (sister), Archbold, O.

Sergt. Charles A. LeMasters, Company C, 314th Field Signal Battalion. For extraordinary heroism in action near Beauclair, France, Nov. 4-11, 1918.

From Nov. 4 to 11, while continually under heavy shell fire, Sergt. LeMasters laid and maintained lines of communication within his area with utter disregard for his personal safety.

Home address: John S. LeMasters (father), St. Paul, Neb.

Private Louis H. Loyd, Company F, 356th Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action near Beaufort, France, Nov. 4, 1918.

Despite the fact that severe wounds made it impossible for him to take along his automatic rifle, Private Loyd continued in the advance of the company. Again wounded, he refused evacuation, continuing with his comrades until the objective was reached.

Home address: Howell N. Loyd (father), Annapolis, Mo.

Corp. John W. McAfee, Company D, 356th Infantry (deceased).

For extraordinary heroism in action near Pouilly, France, Nov. 8, 1918.

While a member of a patrol sent to reconnoiter the banks of the Meuse River, and when all means of crossing the river had been destroyed, Corp. McAfee, with another soldier, volunteered to swim across, though the other side was held in force by the enemy. Before reaching the opposite bank, Corp. McAfee was seized with a cramp, caused by the extremely low temperature of the water, and was drowned.

Next of kin: Mrs. Oliver P. McAfee (mother), Gallatin, Mo.

Sergt. Lee B. McDaniel, Company A, 353d Infantry (deceased).

For extraordinary heroism in action in Bois de Bantheville, France, Oct. 23, 1918.

Sergt. McDaniel led his platoon with great bravery and coolness against cleverly concealed machine guns until he fell severely wounded.

Home address: Mr. C. J. Boyd (uncle), Columbus, Kan.

Buglar Edward McGee, Company M, 353d Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action in the Bois de Barricourt, France, Nov. 1-2, 1918.

When volunteers were called for to maintain liaison with the assault battalion during heavy shell and machine gun fire, Bugler McGee volunteered and successfully carried out five such missions.

Home address: Thomas McGee, (brother), General Delivery, Tipton, Kan.

Corp. John W. McKay, Company M, 353d Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action northwest of Bantheville, France, Nov. 1, 1918.

Immediately after the beginning of the attack in the Bois de Bantheville, when his company was held up by a strong machine gun nest and his company commander and several others were killed by its fire, Corp. McKay accompanied an officer and with great gallantry and coolness attacked and captured the machine gun nest of four guns, killing or wounding a number of the crew.

Home address: Mrs. Aledda McKay (mother), Thayer, Kan.

Sergt. Tharold B. Mansfield, Company C, 314th Field Signal Battalion.

For extraordinary heroism in action near Beauclair, France, Nov. 4-11, 1918.

From Nov. 4 to 11, while continually under heavy shell fire, Corp. Mansfield laid and maintained lines of communication within his area with utter disregard for his personal safety.

Home address: Mrs. Charles Mansfield, 907 Fourth street, Bay City, Mich.

Corp. Augustine Martinez, Company I, 356th Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action near Pouilly, France, Nov. 10-11, 1918.

Corp. Martinez accompanied Lieut. Murphy and three other soldiers in a flank attack on three heavy machine guns. Fired on directly at 30 yards they charged the guns, met hand-to-hand resistance but repulsed the enemy, capturing the guns. Corp. Martinez followed the fleeing Germans until they were lost in the fog.

Home address: Tlofilo Martinez (father), Turley, New Mexico.

Second Lieutenant Oscar P. May, 356th Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action near Bois de Mort Mare, France, Sept. 12, 1918.

Without assistance, Lieut. May very courageously attacked and captured a machine gun which threatened to wipe out his platoon.

Home address: Mrs. Adelia May (wife), Williamstown, Kan.

First Lieutenant Francis Morgan, 353d Infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action during the Argonne-Meuse offensive, Nov. 1-11, 1918.

Although severly wounded, Lieut. Morgan maintained command of two platoons throughout the offensive, personally leading patrols through occupied enemy territory and breaking up enemy resistance on the flanks which was holding up the advance of his neighboring units.

Home address: F. A. Morgan (father), Ravenswood, W. Va.

First Lieutenant Verne A. Morgan, 355th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Beaufort, France, Nov. 4, 1918.

Although he was wounded early in the engagement by shrapnel, Lieut. Morgan after receiving first aid treatment immediately returned to his company and led it throughout the day. After taking the town of Beaufort, he pushed on with his command to its objective through heavy artillery and machine gun fire, forty per cent of his company becoming casualties.

Home address: C. A. Morgan (father), 424 Harrison street, Council Bluffs, Io.

Sergeant, First Class, Elgin J. Moore, Company C, 314th Field Signal Battalion. For extraordinary heroism in action near Beauclair, France, Nov. 11, 1918.

From Nov. 4 to 11, while continually under heavy shell fire, Sergt. Moore laid and maintained lines of communication within his area with utter disregard for his personal safety.

Home address: Mrs. Carrie E. Moore (mother), Oskosh, Neb.

Capt. Fred F. Moore, 355th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action. Wounded in the left shoulder early on the morning of Sept. 12, 1918, north of Flirey, France, while in command of his company, Capt. Moore continued to lead and handle it during the entire day, in an efficient and gallant manner under fire. He refused to take time to have his wound attended until late that night after his command had intrenched under fire and were safe. Two pieces of shrapnel were removed from his shoulder.

Home address: Mrs. Carrie M. Moore, R. F. D. No. 2, Stewart, Minn.

First Lieutenant John H. Murphy, 356th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Pouilly, France, Nov. 10-11, 1918.

Lieut. Murphy and four soldiers flanked a machine gun nest of three guns, only to be fired on directly at 30 yards. Charging the guns, they met hand to hand resistance, but repulsed the enemy, capturing the guns. Lieut. Murphy was wounded twice, and three of his men were killed.

Home address: M. J. Murphy (father), Gordon Court Apartments, Detroit, Mich.

Maj. James L. Peatross, 353rd Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Bantheville, France, Nov. 2, 1918.

Though he had been wounded the day before, and was so weak from exposure that he could hardly talk, Maj. Peatross remained with his battalion and led it in assault on enemy machine gun nests north of the Bois de Barricourt. Under his personal direction, without artillery support, the machine gun nests were flanked and the day's objective reached in spite of the most determined resistance.

Home address: Mrs. J. W. Williams (mother), Rolla, Mo.

Second Lieutenant Harry D. Pine, 353d Infantry—For extraordinary heroism in action near St. Benoit, France, Oct. 4, 1918. Lieut. Pine's regiment was in the line west of Tiaucourt opposite the Hindenburg German line, whose outposts included the town of Haumont. This town had been bitterly held by the enemy and had only been entered by well organized raids. In an attempt to gain identifications of the enemy, Lieut. Pine took a patrol of eight men on the mission of entering the town of Haumont, if necessary, to take prisoners. He skillfully worked his way through the enemy's outposts and approached the town from the rear. He encountered an enemy patrol, attacked it and defeated it, killing one of the enemy and wounding another. He then pressed into the town itself and proceeded throughout its length from north to south, capturing two German prisoners. These he succeeded in bringing in, as valuable identifications, to our lines. Home address, Mrs. George E. Thompson, mother, 302 North Bordy Drive, Bogalusa, La.

Bugler Chauncey W. Porter, Company B, 355th Infantry—For extraordinary heroism in action, north of Flirey, France, Sept. 12, 1918. Bugler Porter charged a machine gun alone, with an automatic pistol, killed one man, captured another and drove the remainder of the enemy platoon back along the trench, thereby enabling his platoon to advance. Home address, Edwin F. Porter, father, Chambers, Neb.

First Lieutenant George E. Rand, 353d Infantry—For extraordinary heroism in action in Bois de Barricourt, France, Nov. 2, 1918. He led his platoon in the face of terrific machine gun fire, capturing four machine guns and their crews, thereby facilitating the advance of the command. Over half of his men were either killed or wounded before reaching the objective. Home address, George L. Rand, father, Detroit, Me.

Private Elmer P. Richards, Company D, 354th Infantry.—For extraordinary heroism in action near Xammes, France, Sept. 18, 1918. Knowing that, on account of the intense shelling, it would be impossible to supply the men in the front line with rations, Private Richards, in a wounded condition, procured a quantity of rations, and carrying them to the line through heavy shell fire, personally distributed to each man a portion. Home address, Mrs. Samuel C. Richards, mother, Padrona, Colo.

Sergt. Roy M. Sauers, Company B, 314th Field Signal Battalion.—For extraordinary heroism in action near Tailly, France, Nov. 4, 1918. Sergt. Sauers was in charge of a wire-laying detail between Tailly and Beauclair. Over a road swept by heavy shell fire, he carried the line forward, and in constant repair, to the support battalion of the 355th Infantry. Home address, Mrs. Ray M. Sauers, wife, 1146 North Main street Fremont, Neb.

Private Marcelino Serna, Company D, 355th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Flirey, France, Sept. 12, 1918. Private Serna displayed exceptional coolness and courage in single-handed charging and capturing 24 Germans. Home address, Perferro Serna, father, Ascienda Robinso, Chararatas, Mex.

First Lieutenant Charles A. Shaw, 353d Infantry (deceased). For extraordinary heroism in action during the offensive against the St. Mihiel salient, France, Sept. 12-13, 1918. Lieut. Shaw personally led his platoon under heavy machine-gun fire into the undamaged enemy wire, so inspiring his platoon that, regardless of heavy losses, the machine-gun nest was neutralized. Lieut. Shaw was killed one minute after his platoon had accomplished its mission. Next of kin, W. A. Shaw, brother, Weatherby, Mo.

Sergt. Ralph M. Shimeall, Company M, 353d Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Dantheville, France, Nov. 1-2, 1918. Sergt. Shimeall, then a Corporal, although wounded twice, continued in action for two days without reporting for medical aid. He established and maintained liaison during those two days in a very efficient manner. Home address, Floyd Shimeall (father), general delivery, Norton, Kan.

First Lieutenant Leon P. Shinn, 356th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Flirey, France, Sept. 12, 1918. Lieut. Shinn continued to lead his platoon until the third objective had been reached, after being wounded in the leg during the first 20 minutes of the advance. Home address, Mrs. L. P. Shinn, wife, 293 Hudson avenue, Newark, O.

Private Edward Sitler, Company C, 341st Machine-gun Battalion. For extraordinary heroism in action in the Bois de Lantheville, France, Oct. 24, 1918. Although himself severely wounded in the leg by shell fire, Private Sitler did not report for medical attention until he had given first aid and assisted in carrying other wounded soldiers to the first aid station, a distance of six kilometers. After all of his comrades had received attention he had his own wounds dressed and was evacuated to the hospital. Home address, Mrs. Francis Sittler, mother, Bodo, Io.

Maj. Burton A. Smead, Adjutant, Eighty-ninth Division. For extraordinary heroism in action during the Argonne-Meuse offensive, Nov. 1-6, 1918. Upon his own request, Maj. Smead was assigned to the hazardous duty of conducting the divisional advance message center. He was constantly exposed to fire, going to the front line for information when it could not be otherwise obtained. Home address, Mrs. Burton A. Smead (wife), 1281 South Downing, Denver, Colo.

Lieutenant-Colonel Brehon B. Somervell, Assistant Chief of Staff. For extraordinary heroism in action near Pouilly, France, Nov. 5-6, 1918. Voluntarily serving on the staff of the Eighty-ninth Division, Lieutenant-Colonel Somervell conducted the first engineering reconnaissance of the damaged bridges at Pouilly, where, with two scouts, he advanced more than 500 meters beyond the American outposts, crossing three branches of the Meuse River, and successfully encountered the enemy. Home address, Dr. W. T. Somervell (father), The Cairo, Washington, D. C.

First Lieutenant C. W. Steinhilber, 354th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Barricourt, France, Nov. 1-2, 1918. When his company commander was seriously wounded Lieut. Steinhilber took an automatic rifle from a dead soldier and held off the enemy for two hours, defending the wounded officer until assistance could be obtained. Next day while in command of this company, Lieut. Steinhilber was himself wounded, but continued to urge his men forward, inspiring them by his example under heavy machine-gun fire. Home address, Mrs. L. E. Steinhilber (mother), 640 State street, Watertown, N. Y.

Corp. Milton C. Sundin, 2,202,754, Company L, 353d Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action in the St. Mihiel salient, France, Sept. 12-13, 1918. Private Sundin, while advancing through wooded territory with four other men, was surprised by the fire of six machine guns. Though two of the party were wounded, Private Sundin with great daring worked around the flank of the position and succeeded in routing the enemy machine gunners in time to permit the advance without casualties, of two platoons operating near by. Home address, Charles Sundin (father), 461 Delaware street, Denver, Colo.

Bugler Frank F. Tomanek, Company I, 353d Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action in the Bois de Bantheville, France, November 1, 1918. When volunteers were called for, to maintain liaison with the assault battalion, during heavy counter barrage by the enemy, Bugler Tomanek volunteered and within two hours successfully carried out four such missions. Home address: Celestyn Tomanek (mother), Quinten, Kan.

Private Benjamin T. Tubbs, Company I, 356th Infantry (deceased). For extraordinary heroism in action near Pouilly, France, November 10-11, 1918. Private Tubbs accompanied Lieut. Murphy and three other soldiers in a flank attack on three heavy machine guns. Fired on directly at 30 yards, they charged the guns and in the hand-to-hand fight which followed this soldier and two of his comrades were killed. Next of kin: Homer H. Tubbs (father), Farmersville, La.

Private Richard Wahler, Company C, 353d Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Bois de Bantheville, France, October 31, 1918. After being severely wounded in the hand and face, Private Wahler continued with his duties as stretcher bearer, carrying wounded from the field during the entire afternoon and evening. For seven days thereafter he remained constantly on duty, and during the entire period he worked under an almost incessant rain of shells. Home address: Charles Wahler (father), R. F. D. No. 4, Leavenworth, Kan.

Private Edwin Wiese, Company C, 355th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action at Essey, France, September 12, 1918. Private Wiese displayed conspicuous gallantry by creeping forward alone under machine gun fire and capturing two enemy guns, which were holding up the advance of his organization. Home address: Mrs. Louise Wiese, 4514 Harris avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

Sergt. Walter S. Witt, Company D, 353d Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action in Bois de Bantheville, France, October 22, 1918. Although wounded in the face by machine gun fire, Sergt. Witt refused to go to the first aid station for treatment, remaining with his platoon throughout the engagement, until the objective was reached and the position consolidated. Home address: Mrs. Mamie Witt (wife), R. F. D. No. 6, Paola, Kan.

Besides the American decorations, the French awarded the Croix de Guerre to the following officers and men:

Major-General Frank L. Winn, commanding; Col. John C. H. Lee, chief of staff; Maj. Nathan C. Shiverick, 354th Infantry; Maj. Thomas F. Wirth, 355th Infantry; Maj. Harvey E. McCarthy, Medical Detachment; Capt. Paul Withington, Medical Detachment; Sergt. Charles P. Smith, H Company, 356th Infantry; Sergt. Banajah P. Wicker, H Company, 356th Infantry; Corp. John A. Johnson, A Company, 355th Infantry; Corp. Andrew H. Roach, A Company, 355th Infantry; Corp. Jasper V. Brown, H Company, 356th Infantry; Corp. Edward H. Alewell, H Company, 356 Infantry; Private James A. Dickerson, A Company, 356th Infantry; Private Louis Schumaker, D Company, 355th Infantry; First Lieut. Paul M. Coleman, 164th Field Artillery.

enemy at times when the division was with the French.

Summary — Headquarters 164th Field Artillery Brigade.

Organized Sept. 5, 1917 at Camp Funston.

Commanders—Col. George A. Nugent, Sept. 5, 1917, to May 14, 1918; Brig.-Gen. Edward T. Donnelly, May 14, 1918, to date.

Sailed June 28, 1918, from Hoboken, N. J., on transport Justicia.

Landed July 10, Liverpool. By march and train to Knotty Ash, Ramsey and Southhampton. Crossed English Channel to Cherbourg night of July 12. By train to Bordeaux.

Billeted with French people near Le Taillan July 16 to Aug. 2.

Aug. 2 to Sept. 8 at Camp de Souge, artillery training area near Bordeaux.

Arrived Toul Sept. 13. Reached Euvezin, St. Mihiel Sector, Sept. 15. Oct. 28 moved to Heudicourt.

Nov. 29 started march to Germany. Arrived Malburg Dec. 9. Dec. 30 moved to Bitberg, Germany. Headquarters until the start for home.

Casualties—Dead one officer. Wounded one officer, one man.

At the front, Brigade Headquarters—10 officers and 65 enlisted men—functioned as an organization of specialists, carrying out Gen. Donnelly's orders directing the operations of the brigade. The chief duties of the enlisted personnel consisted of the upkeep of animals and equipment and in maintaining communication by telephone, wireless and courier.

At Heudicourt the organization suffered its only casualties. At 6 o'clock one Sunday morning in November, an enemy shell landed near the kitchen, wounding two men, one of Artillery Brigade Headquarters, another of a neighboring organization. Capt. Francis Trives, French liaison officer and adviser, was wounded by shell fire in the front lines. He and Lieut. Paul M. Coleman had volunteered to accompany an infantry raid. Their mission was to destroy enemy artillery. When Capt. Trives fell, Lieut. Coleman picked him up, and with pistol and knife forced eight captured Germans to carry the wounded officer back five kilometers, saving his life. Lieut. Coleman was awarded the Croix de de Guerre.

Capt. Reg. W. Hughes, brigade intelligence officer, became ill with pneumonia at Bitberg, Germany and died in a hospital at Trier, Feb. 1, 1919.

At the front the personnel of the brigade staff was as follows:

Brigadier-General E. T. Donnelly—Commander.

Capt. Francis Trives—French liaison Officer and Adviser.

Capt. W. E. Wentworth—Operations Officer.

Capt. Reg. W. Hughes—Intelligence Officer.

Capt. (then Lieutenant) R. L. Crawford—Aid.

Lieut. R. G. Bulkley—Aid and Telephone Officer.

Lieut. A. D. Baldwin—Munitions Officer.

Lieut. H. H. Anderson—Brigade Adjutant.

Lieut. P. M. Coleman—Radio Officer.

Lieutenant H. R. Palmer—Commanding Headquarters Detachment.

Adjutant Victor Naudeau—Interpreter.

Summary—340th Regiment Field Artillery.

Organized Sept. 5, 1917, at Camp Funston.

Commanders—Col. E. H. Yule, Sept. 5, 1917, to June 2, 1918; Maj. L. A. Wind, June 2 to June 7, 1918; Lieutenant-Colonel Earl Biscoe, June 7 to Aug. 1, 1918; Col. E. S. Wheeler, Aug. 1, 1918, to date.

Originally received all its men from Arizona. At its organization, officered by commissioned graduates of the Third Battery, 14th Provisional Training Regiment, Fort Riley, Kan.

Sailed June 13, 1918, on transport Huntsend. Landed Liverpool June 28. Arrived Le Harve, France, July 2. Followed a week later by Battery A and Supply Company on transport Shropshire.

Billeted at Ste. Helene and St. Aubin, near Bordeaux, July 6 to Aug. 2. At Camp de Souge, Aug. 2 to Sept. 12.

Arrived St. Mihiel front Sept. 16.

Fired total of 85,097 rounds of ammunition in action.

Captured 17 German prisoners.

Lieut. Thorndike Deland and Private Richard B. King received Distinguished Service Cross.

Casualties — Killed: 2 officers, 8 men. Accidentally killed: 3 men. Wounded: 2 officers, 32 men. Gassed: 1 officer, 43 men.

The following comments are taken from the 340th Regimental History:

"July 6 to Aug. 2 mark perhaps the happiest days in the history of the organization. It was during that time that the men became acquainted with the French people and the French people could not do enough to show their liking for American troops, both because they had come to fight with their own poilu against the common enemy and because of themselves. No matter what happened, the American soldier laughed and was happy and was confident of himself and his fellows. The French didn't quite understand that attitude, but it gave them confidence and they liked it. And they showed their appreciation.

"Although the 340th Regiment never got into a major operation, with the exception of the closing days of the St. Mihiel action, it was engaged in lively action throughout its stay on the front. The sector was one of the liveliest from the artillery viewpoint on the entire front for some little time.

"Although the regiment never left the sector it first occupied, the batteries were forced to make frequent changes in position, for various reasons. The exceptional case was that of Battery D. The position constructed by this organization was so excellent that the boche never found it—or at least never indicated that he had done so—and tactical urgencies never forced a change until the last few days of the war. The position was pointed out by inspectors as a model, and officers visiting the front were sent up to study it.

"Batteries E and F were subjected to perhaps the worst bombardment of any of the organizations. Following a carefully made aeroplane adjustment one afternoon, during which the members of the two batteries sat by and speculated on how lively the night's reception would be, the Germans opened up on the position early in the evening with 150's, bombarding them every 15 minutes for several hours. Then he rested his 150's and used 210's, throwing over mustard gas. A direct hit was scored on No. 1 gun of E Battery and so much gas was put down that the entire area became thoroughly saturated and all but untenable. Some 40 casualties were caused in the two organizations, a number of them occurring two days after the bombardment.

"Casualties were comparatively few, considering the bombardments the regiment was subjected to. Carefully prepared positions and the proper precautions account for this. However, stray shells took their toll. It was a stray, the only shot fired in the area for hours, that demolished the P. C. of Battery A, instantly killing Lieut. Charles H. Duncker Jr., the battery commander, and Lieut. Dixon, a visiting officer from another brigade not in the line, and severely wounding Lieut. Charles C. Hagenbuch, executive officer of Battery A, and a number of men of the battery detail. * * *

"The first day of the march into Germany was the worst. Some 25 kilometers over a road that had run between opposing front line trenches and which never had been repaired. And after a day of plowing through mud and water, a camp on a muddy hillside, where the carriages sank almost to their hubs and where men, when they awoke in the morning, found themselves almost imbedded in mud. Camping in No Man's Land is no joke. But another two days and the war zone had been cleared and night stops were enjoyable. Usually the regiment billeted; occasionally it camped.

"Northern France was left behind, then Belgium and Luxembourg and finally the 340th entered Germany, the first night's stops being Korperich and Mettendorf, just over the border. The march would have been thoroughly enjoyable at any other season of the year, but it was not without its interest even in this period of rain and fog. And tired as were men and animals, the march was made in splendid shape and proved to be an experience which few would have voluntarily missed."

Summary—341st Regiment Field Artillery.

Organized Sept. 5, 1917 at Camp Funston, Kan.

Commanders—Maj. T. G. Gottschalk, Sept. 5 to Oct. 21, 1917; Lieutenant-Colonel H. B. Clark, Oct. 21 to Nov. 4, 1917; Lieutenant-Colonel Ralph McCoy, Nov. 4 to Jan. 1, 1918; Col. Robert Davis, Jan. 1, 1918 to date.

Regiment originally made up of men from Colorado. It was officered by commissioned personnel of 2nd Battery, 14th Provisional Training Regiment, Fort Riley, Kan.

Sailed June 22, 1918 for Boston. Regimental Headquarters, Headquarters Company and Batteries A, B and C on transport Bohemian; Batteries D, E, and F and Supply Company on transport Leomedon. Arrived London July 7. Reached Le Havre, France, July 9.

Billeted with the French people at Castelnau, near Bordeaux, July 12 to August 3. Camp de Souge Aug. 3 to Sept. 14.

Arrived at Toul Sept. 17 and went into position on St. Mihiel front Sept. 18.

Fired over 87,000 rounds of ammunition in action.

Casualties—Killed, 3 men; wounded and gassed, 3 officers, 29 men.

The following comments are from the 341st Regimental history:

"The first casualties occurred on the range at Camp de Souge, from the bursting of a piece, caused by a premature burst due to defective ammunition. The organization, Battery C, sustaining the casualties, was highly commended by the brigade commander for the excellent fire discipline displayed by the gun crews at the time of the accident.

"Delayed by the scarcity of horses, the regiment did not entrain for the front until Sept. 14. It arrived in Toul Sept. 17. The next day, in support of the Eighty-ninth Divisional Infantry, it went into position on and in front of the Beney-St. Benoit road which lay in the center of the recently reduced St. Mihiel salient. The regimental P. C. was established in Beney, later removing to Pannes after the enemy scored a direct hit on the building occupied by it, killing three and wounding five. Afterwards the regimental P. C. was moved to Essey.

"The regiment remained in this sector without relief until the armistice was signed on Nov. 11. During this time it covered the relief of three divisions, in addition to a number of regimental reliefs, all of which were made without mishap. The casualties in action were light—three killed and 32 wounded and gassed.

"The regiment's missions in the numerous infantry raids were performed efficiently and not once was the regiment criticised for failure to co-operate fully with the infantry. In addition the usual harassing and destructive fire was executed, as well as fire on fleeting targets.

"Three days before hostilities ceased it joined in the development of the general attack planned with Metz as the objective. On the morning of Nov. 11, one battalion had taken positions near Marimbois Farm in the front line of our infantry and the other battalion was prepared to move forward as the attack developed.

"On Sept. 22-23 the regiment supported its first raid, a raid on the Bois Dommartin, which was successful. Three days later it supported the infantry in a general raid of the sector, the infantry taking a number of prisoners and gaining the desired information. A gas bombardment of Bois Bonsell was carried out Oct. 14, and again the following day. A barrage was laid down in front of Haumont at the request of an airplane. A retaliatory gas bombardment along the entire sector was executed Oct. 16.

"From Oct. 16 until the armistice, frequent infantry raids and reconnaissance attacks were successfully supported by the batteries of the 341st with neutralizing fire and barrages of various kinds.

"The batteries withdrew from their positions a few days after the cessation of hostilities and were engaged in the conditioning of the men and horses and re-outfitting preparatory to an expected forward move. Nov. 28 orders were received to rejoin the 89th Division. The hike into Germany began the next morning.

"The route followed led through Woel, Arvillers, Warcq, Etain, Spincourt, Cutry, Longwy, Clemency, the city of Luxembourg, Junglister, Rosport, Bitberg, Badem to Oberkail. After a rest of one day, the regiment moved forward to Rosport and on the following day, Dec. 7, crossed into Germany, stopping for the night at Badem. Two days later, Regimental Headquarters and the Second Battalion moved to Oberkail and the First Battalion to Manderscheid. A week later the former moved to Dudeldorf and the latter to Pickliessem and Ordorf. The next move of the former was to Speicher, the latter occupying Dudeldorf and Ordorf."

Summary—342d Regiment Field Artillery.

Organized Sept. 5, 1917, at Camp Funston, Kan.

Commanders—Col. George A. Nugent, Sept. 5, 1917, to Sept. 10, 1918; Col. Earl Biscoe, Sept. 10, 1918, to date.

Regiment recruited from Green, Polk, Dallas, Stone, Bollinger and Laclede counties of Southeast Missouri. Officered by commissioned personnel of First Battery, Fourteenth Provisional Training Regiment, Fort Riley, Kan.

Sailed June 28 on transport Justicia. Arrived Liverpool July 10. Reached Le Harve, France, July 13.

Billeted July 16 to Aug. 3 with French people at Le Taillan, near Bordeaux.

At Camp de Souge Aug. 3 to Sept. 17.

Arrived Toul Sept. 18, 19, 20. Went into position St. Mihiel sector, First Battalion Sept. 19, Second Battalion Sept. 20, Third Battalion Sept. 21.

Casualties—Killed, 6 men; wounded and gassed, 44.

Comments from the Regimental History:

"Here (Le Taillan) we received a battery of the guns we were finally to use—1915 model Schneider 155mm. howitzer. About a week after we learned definitely, and for the first time, that we were to be a horse-drawn regiment, and details were sent to Camp de Souge to receive our first consignment of horses. Although we had always been skeptical of ever receiving any tractors and motors, this was something of a surprise as all our training had been for motor tractors. However, thanks to the farmers of the regiment, there were plenty of men who were at home with horses and mules. As one man from old Missouri expressed it, 'I ain't done nothing all my life, only drive mules.'

"Of all the regiment's experiences in France, the stay in Taillan was perhaps the most pleasant. Since we were the first American troops to be billeted in this town, the inhabitants gave us a hearty welcome. The afternoon of Sunday, July 21, the Mayor of the commune extended a formal invitation to Gen. Donnelly, his staff and to all officers of the regiment to attend a lunch at which the Mayor presided and at which mutual expressions of good will were exchanged. Refreshments consisted of cakes, light wine and champagne served to the guests and functionaries on the tables set under the trees. The soldiers and populace fraternized on the sidelines. This regiment later returned the courtesy by a similar farewell party.

"When we reached the front the echelons had constituted a problem from the start. Under orders from higher authority an echelon was first established in the open valley of the Madine near Pannes, a convenient but dangerous location, as events proved. Whether the boche had observed the exposed picket line from his planes or whether he was merely picking a likely location for a target is unknown, but on the evening of Sept. 21 a number of 150s fell among the lines. Besides four men of D Battery killed outright by Hun shells, eight men were wounded and two died in hospital. Fourteen horses were lost. The following day the entire echelon was moved to woods.

"The adjustment of supplies and rations was soon worked out satisfactorily. Although regulations prevented the use of kitchens near the battery positions, hot food was brought up, which, after the first week, improved rapidly in quality. Rations and supplies were drawn at Bouillonville and distributed at the echelons.

"Once established on the front in this 'quiet' sector, the regiment began to settle down to the routine of firing at night and working during the day, sleeping between times. Although our areas were shelled periodically, the first impression of an artilleryman's life at the front was less danger and more plain hard labor. Carrying 10-pound shells up to the guns, washing and greasing them and fusing and firing at night left little time to worry about anything but food and sleep. The German dugouts we adopted and improved and after a shell or two landed in our neighborhood, we also began to develop some very fair excavations.

"On Oct. 15 observers for Battery F adjusted on some camouflage just to the right of Mon Plaisir farm, a feature of the terrain that dominated the right of our sector. The initial shots of the adjustment fell very near the target and five men were seen to run out, only to be caught by machine-gun fire from our own lines. A total of 119 rounds were fired on this target and that evening a patrol from our lines found a wrecked concrete mixer and the bodies of 15 of the enemy in a partly constructed concrete dugout. Battery C had a similar experience in adjusting on a regimental P. C. to the left of Dampvitoux, when a number of the enemy were caught by our fire.

"Cases of heavy shelling under airplane adjustment caused some of the few casualties suffered by the regiment in its stay at the front. After the batteries of the first battalion had fired most of the night of Sept. 28, a boche plane was seen flying about the position and at 7 o'clock started adjusting a platoon of 150s on our guns. When this adjustment had been carefully completed at about 9 o'clock, the Germans opened up with fire for effect and fired a total of 160 rounds for demolition. Two hundred rounds of powder were burned and with them camouflage and considerable individual equipment. Four men of the headquarters detail were wounded, one man was gassed and one of the guns was put out of action for several days.

"Again on Oct. 4 a plane adjusted on the same position, wounding one man in A Battery and one in C Battery. By good fortune the guns were only scarred. The batteries were moved from the position on Oct. 7. Another case in point occurred later in the month when Battery D's position was adjusted on in the afternoon by a low-flying Boche plane. Two men were slightly wounded. With the exception of a smashed limber, no damage was done to the guns, owing to the fact that the two center pieces had been moved 200 meters to the north, leaving only the camouflage.

"With the exception of the above casualties and those at the echelon in September, there were few worthy of mention. Battery E suffered heavily from gas on Oct. 25. The hostile shell fire caused only one injury but it exploded a nearby dump of gas shells, gassing twenty-one men of the firing battery, then in action. Lieut. Ferguson and a sergeant of F Battery were slightly burned by mustard gas the night of Oct. 15 while camouflaging a forward observation post, but neither injury was severe. Considering that most of the batteries were well forward near the line of resistance, the casualties during the entire period at the front were very light.

"Dec. 7 took the regiment across the German border. Obsergegen, Geichlingen and Sinspelt were the first towns passed and we arrived at Oberweis at 3:30 o'clock in spite of the rain and stretch of bad road. The townspeople showed no hostility. As we found in all of the rural districts of the Rhineland, food was plentiful. It appeared that the absence of the men had not prevented the cultivation of the land, due to the fact that the women were well accustomed to manual labor in the fields."

Summary—314th Ammunition Train.

Organized Oct. 1, 1917, at Camp Funston, Kan.

Commanders—Col. D. R. Tilford from Oct. 1, 1917, to Feb. 15, 1919; Maj. A. G. Davis, Feb. 15, 1919, to date.

Originally composed of men from Nebraska.

Sailed June 28 on transport Cretic. Arrived Liverpool July 10. Reached Cherbourg, France, July 12.

Billeted July 15 to Aug. 2 at La Vigean and Eysines, near Bordeaux.

Companies B and C joined Eighty-ninth Division at St. Mihiel front Aug. 8. Companies A, D, E, F and G trained at Camp de Souge. Companies A and D went by truck overland to St. Mihiel front in September. Rest of train went by train.

Companies C and G, small arms section, accompanied Eighty-ninth Division Infantry to Argonne-Meuse.

Casualties—Killed, 6; wounded and gassed, 34.

The train history says:

"Aug. 11—Companies B and C made their first haul of ammunition to the front. This first haul consisted of the small arms ammunition, including the rifle 30-30s, hand grenades and detonators. From this time on we made nightly hauls to the front. The enemy was busy and on numerous occasions made a vain attempt to get us. But we were busy and paid little heed to him.

"Sept. 11 we moved to Andilly, a little village near Menil-La-Tour, and that night we transported ammunition to Flirey, just back of the trenches. This ammunition was converted the following morning into a barrage that liberated many square miles of ground in the St. Mihiel salient. The zero hour for the American artillery was at 1 o'clock in the morning of Sept. 12. There had been intermittent artillery fire up to that time, but at 1 o'clock it seemed as though the very heavens had collapsed. The assault opened along the entire front simultaneously, the bombardment being so terrific and well-timed as to stun and paralyze. The American artillery pounded and tore up the German lines for just four hours. It was a withering barrage, smashing through and crumbling to dust German trench systems and offensive positions.

"During these trying moments Companies B and C were hauling and unloading ammunition. It was a hazardous position, our trucks being parked along the road that led to the Hun's front lines and so close that the sputtering of the machine guns and the crack of the rifles were plainly audible. Airplanes buzzed overhead and bombed us, the heavy artillery dropped shells around us and all through the night rockets and flares illuminated the fields and disclosed the German trenches, barbed wire entanglements and war paraphernalia of all kinds, also revealing our unprotected position to the enemy. But we escaped this—one of the most severe battles fought by the Americans—without a casualty.

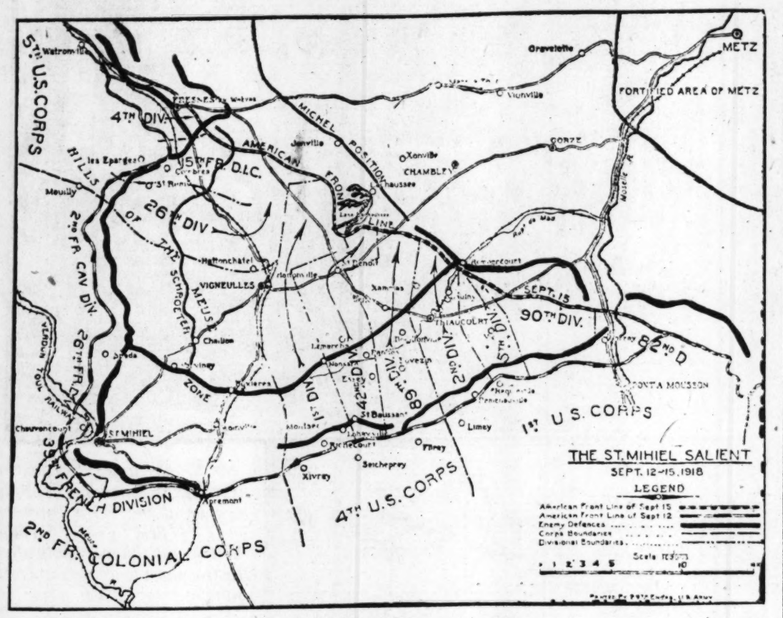
"Sept. 12 Companies A and B left Camp de Souge and traveled overland in 70 trucks a distance of 350 kilometers. They joined Companies B and C at Euvezin, St. Mihiel front. Sept. 17 the Horse Battalion of the Train left Souge by train and reached the front Sept. 22.

"Companies C and G, comprising the small arms section, accompanied the Eighty-ninth Division Infantry to the Argonne-Meuse front and went through that offensive with the division, furnishing small arms to the infantry. Just before the Meuse drive 40 men were detailed from this small section of the train to act as machine gunners. One of them was killed near Stenay Nov. 7."

The 314th Trench Mortar Battery.

The 314th Trench Mortar Battery was organized Sept. 5, 1917, at Camp Funston, Kan., as a part of the 164th Field Artillery Brigade. Capt. J. M. Milburn was its commanding officer from the first. It was made up, principally, of men from South Dakota. After training with improvised trench mortars at Camp Funston, the battery accompanied the brigade to France. At Camp de Souge it received some practical training with the weapons for which it was organized. The 314th Trench Mortar Battery was on the St. Mihiel front from September 20 to November 11, where it did effective work against German concrete "pill-boxes" and other targets near the front lines. It accompanied the brigade into Germany, but went home in February for immediate demobilization. Trench mortar batteries were among the first units demobilized.

Where the 89th Won Its Spurs in the St. Mihiel Salient



General Pershing's Praise of the First Army Division

GENERAL order No. 32, G. H. Q., A. E. F., 1918, says in part:

"It is with a sense of gratitude for its splendid accomplishment, which will live through all history, that I record in general orders a tribute to the victory of the First Army in the Meuse-Argonne battle.

"Tested and strengthened by the reduction of the St. Mihiel salient, for more than six weeks you battered against the pivot of the enemy line on the western front. It was a position of imposing natural strength, stretching on both sides of the Meuse River from the bitterly contested hills north of Verdun to the almost impenetrable forest of the Argonne; a position, moreover, fortified by four years of labor designed to render it impregnable; a position held with the fullest resources of the enemy. That position you broke utterly and thereby hastened the collapse of the enemy's military power.

"Soldiers of all the divisions engaged under the First, Third and Fifth Corps, you will be long remembered for the stubborn persistence of your progress, your storming of obstinately defended machine gun nests, your penetration, yard by yard, of woods and ravines, your heroic resistance in the face of counter attacks, supported by powerful artillery fire. For more than a month, from the initial attack, Sept. 26, you fought your way slowly through the Argonne, through the woods and over hills west of the Meuse; you slowly enlarged your hold on the Cotes de Meuse to the east, and then, on the first of November your attack forced the enemy into flight. Pressing his retreat, you cleared the entire left bank of the Meuse south of Sedan and then stormed the heights on the right bank and drove him into the plain beyond.

"Your achievement, which is scarcely to be equaled in American history, must remain a source of proud satisfaction to the troops who participated in the last campaign of the war. The American people will remember it as the realization of the hitherto potential strength of the American contribution toward the cause to which they had sworn allegiance. There can be no greater reward for a soldier or for a soldier's memory."

GERMAN CABINET REPORTED SEEKING WAY TO SIGN TREATY

Ludendorff Says Peace Terms Can't be Enforced, Charges Revenge

354TH TO PARADE HERE, WAR OFFICE ANNOUNCES

$76,000 MORE OF UNUSUAL U. R. EXPENDITURES ARE DISCLOSED

$25,000 to Attorney for Help in Preparation of "Compromise Ordinance" and $25,000 to Another for Assisting in Its Passage by Board of Aldermen.

$26,000 'FOR U. R. USE AND BENEFIT'

Payment to Head of North American Co. Was Made in 1913 About Time Public Service Commission Was Created.

The Post-Dispatch has learned that the United Railways receivership hearing, which will continue tomorrow before former Supreme Court Judge Lamm as Special Master will disclose, in addition to the $643,048 already testified to as having been paid to attorneys of the company, the following unusual expenditures:

$25,000 to Charles A. Houts, former United States District Attorney, employed by the United Railways in connection with the passage by the Board of Aldermen of the so-called compromise ordinance.

$25,000 to Thomas M. Pierce, former general counsel of the Terminal Railroad Association, employed specially by the United Railways in the preparation and presentation of the "compromise" ordinance.

$26,000 to J. D. Mortimer, president of the North American Co., the voucher containing the rather indefinite notation "for the use and benefit of the United Railways."

It is a matter of public knowledge that when the scheme for the presentation of the so-called compromise ordinance had in its evolution reached a definite shape for preparation of the ordinance and its presentation to the Board of Aldermen and to the public, Pierce, then counsel for the Terminal, and attorney for the old Suburban System before it became a part of the United Railways, was specially employed to draft the ordinance and to conduct negotiations with the city for its approval by the administration and its passage by the Board of Aldermen.

Houts Employed Also.

As the negotiations continued, progress was not entirely satisfactory to the controlling interests of the United Railways. In fact, it was discussed that they were going badly. With this situation existing, Houts was employed. When he was United States District Attorney, City Counselor Daues, legal adviser to the Mayor and to the Board of Aldermen, was his chief assistant. Houts was a Republican in politics, and the administration and members of the Board of Aldermen were Republican.

While Pierce continued to appear as the leading public representative of the street railway company at the public hearings before the committee of the Board of Aldermen, it was known about the City Hall that Houts had been employed in the matter and that he was engaged whenever occasion demanded in furthering the passage of the ordinance.

It will be disclosed at the hearing that although Houts did not receive his fee of $25,000 until May 10, 1918, six weeks after the ordinance was passed by the Board of Aldermen, and one month after it was signed by the Mayor, his employment had dated from considerably more than a year before that time, and authorization for the payment to him had been made by the Board of Directors of the company approximately a year before he was paid.

The Board of Directors, it is known, appointed a special committee of its membership, consisting of

OHIO GOES DRY WITH ROUSING FAREWELL PARTIES

All but 163 Saloons Close Rather Than Pay $305 License for One Day.

By the Associated Press.
COLUMBUS, O., May 24.—Ohio tonight threw her hat into the prohibition ring. Although constitutional prohibition does not become effective until Tuesday, all but 163 of the 5600 saloons in the State quit business tonight at midnight rather than pay the $305 license in order to keep open next Monday for the one day.

Every wet center in the State tonight gave "farewell" parties. Some few saloons closed their doors early rather than attempt to weather the closing festivities.

All bars did a rushing business, and as the closing hour of midnight drew near, some auctioned off their remaining stock of wet goods. The "end" found many bars completely sold out. Few saloons closed with full stocks. Prevailing high prices did not tumble, if at all, until near the midnight hour.

It was a case of "long live the king; the king is dead—almost." Tonight was considered the death of the saloon in Ohio and few postponed their last party until Monday night. Only a few of the larger hotel bars and saloons in the bigger cities will be open Monday.

A goodly number of the saloons closed tonight will reopen Monday or some time in the near future as soft drink bars and restaurants. Most of them will retain their saloon fixtures. Many of the breweries will manufacture ice and go into the cold storage business.

The biggest saloon in the world, at Bridgeport, O., will not close its doors until Monday midnight. It is owned by Samuel Ungerleider and employs 77 bartenders and clerks. For the last four years it has sold an average of 20,000 drinks a day.

Ohio is now the biggest State in the country to have prohibition, taking the record away from Michigan. The State was voted dry Nov. 4 by a majority of more than 25,000.

WORLD-WIDE PROHIBITION MEETING IN CAPITAL JUNE 8

Bryan to Sound Keynote and League Will Be Formed to Seek a "World Drouth."

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, May 24.—A conference on world-wide prohibition will be held in Washington June 8 under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League of America, which will hold its anual meeting here from June 4 to 7. In announcing the conference today, officials of the league said the purpose would be to form an international league having as its objects a "world drouth" and that W. J. Bryan would sound the "International Keynote."

Delegates from at least 50 foreign countries are expected to attend.

MORE GREETERS THAN WELCOMED THE 138TH

Heavy Demand for Seats in Court of Honor Occasioned by Larger Number of Soldiers Returning.

The 354th Infantry, 90 officers and 2358 men, and the Missouri members of the 355th, probably the lesser part of that regiment's 100 officers and 2766 men, will parade in St. Louis this week or next, on their way to Camp Funston for demobilization. Both regiments are in the 89th Division, which contains the Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska selective service troops, and arrived in New York Thursday.

The announcement as to the parades was made to the Post-Dispatch correspondent in Washington yesterday afternoon by Col. J. R. McAndrews of the General Staff, at War Department headquarters. He said he was unable to announce when the troops would reach St. Louis, but that due notice would be given. It is also not known whether the 354th and 355th will be here on the same day. The 354th, by itself, is larger than any body of troops that has paraded here. The 138th Infantry, which paraded here May 9, had 51 officers and 1713 men.

Men Decided Place.

Col. McAndrews based his decision on reports which he had received on the canvass of the men in the various units of the 89th Division, which was made, on the principle of self-determination, to indicate where the majority of the men lived, and hence, where it would be most fitting for them to parade.

It was found that the 354th was largely from St. Louis and the eastern part of Missouri, and that while the majority of the 355th was from Nebraska, there was a considerable Missouri section in that regiment. It was therefore decided that the Nebraska part of the 355th should go to Omaha, and the remainder to St. Louis.

The 354th and the Missourians of the 355th will go to Camp Funston for demobilization, instead of Camp Grant, which was previously announced as their destination.

Kansas City will get the 353rd Infantry, which is from Western Missouri and Kansas. The composition of the 356th will be checked up after its arrival in this country has been completed this week.

St. Louis has asked for parades of the 354th, 355th and 356th Infantry, the 341st and 342d Field Artillery, and the 314th Engineers' Train, all of the 89th Division. No announcement has been made as to the artillery and engineers' parades.

Headquarters for registration of relatives of men in the 89th Division, for grandstand seats in the Twelfth street Court of Honor, were opened at 908 Olive street yesterday.

Seating Is Limited.

The first day's applications were so numerous as to cause the Mayor's committee to believe that the pressure for seats will be greater in the case of the 89th Division parades than it was in the case of the 138th Infantry and the 128th Field Artillery, of the 35th Division.

For this reason, strict limitations have been placed on the issuance of tickets, and they will be given only to parents, wives, children, brothers and sisters of the men. Uncles and aunts, nephews and nieces, cousins and "in-laws," as well as fiancees, will not get tickets, if the demand from the near relatives continues as heavy as it now is.

Major-General Leonard Wood, who trained the 89th Division at Camp Funston, and who met the 354th and 355th upon their arrival Thursday, will be invited to review their parades here. A similar invitation wil be sent to Major-General William M. Wright, who took the division to France.

Are you going to the Theater or Movies tonight? If so, see Page 10, Part 2.

DEADLIEST OF POISONS SHOWN IN WASHINGTON

Professor's Product Would Have Wiped Out Every Vestige of Life in Berlin.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, May 24.—Guarded night and day and far out of human reach on a pedestal at the Interior Department exposition here is a tiny vial. It contains a specimen of the deadliest poison ever known. It is "Lewisite," product of an American scientist. It is what Germany escaped by signing the armistice before all the resources of the United States were turned upon her.

Ten airplanes carrying "Lewisite" would have wiped out every vestige of life—human, animal and vegetable—in Berlin. A single day's output would snuff out the 4,000,000 lives on Manhattan Island.

A single drop poured in the palm of the hand would penetrate to the blood, reach the heart and kill the victim in great agony.

What was coming to Germany may be imagined by the fact that when the armistice was signed it was being manufactured at the rate of 10 tons a day. Three thousand tons of this most terrible instrument ever conceived for killing would have been ready for business on the American front in France on March 1.

"Lewisite" is another of the big secrets of the war just leaking out. It was developed in the Bureau of Mines by Prof. W. L. Lewis, of Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., who took a commission as captain in the army. It was manufactured in a specially built plant near Cleveland, called the "Mouse Trap," because every workman who entered the stockade went under an agreement not to leave the 11-acre space until the war was won. This, of course, was to protect the secret. Work on the plant was started 18 days after the Bureau of Mines had completed its experiments.

ALTON SNAKE, ON EGG HUNT, GULPS DOWN WHITE DOOR KNOB

Unable to Crawl Away or Conceal Evidence of Its Guilt, It Is Dispatched Near Henhouse.

A snake which had been stealing setting eggs from the henhouse of Robert L. Smith at Alton came to a timely end yesterday, after it had fallen into the fatal error of mistaking a porcelain doorknob for an egg. What acute indigestion failed to accomplish was completed by Smith's tenant.

The spring chicken prospects on the Smith farm had been seriously impaired by the nocturnal activity of the snake, which was wont to suck whole settings of eggs. A trap was laid, however, and the wisdom of the serpent was not equal to interpreting the difference between eggs and doorknobs.

Unable either to crawl off or to conceal the evidence of its guilt, it was caught with the goods near the henhouse and promptly identified by the ungainly lump in its middle section, whereupon the tenant meted out swift and simple justice with a singletree.

4500 OF 89TH'S ARTILLERY AND TRAINS RETURN

341st and Part of 340th Return on Agamemnon With Ammunition and Sanitary Outfits.

SEVERAL ST. LOUIS OFFICERS ON BOARD

Capt. McPheeters Praises Soldiers—Boy, 13, Who Was With Division in Battles, a Stowaway.

By CLAIR KENAMORE,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, May 24.—Most of the artillery of the Eighty-ninth Division came back today on the Agamemnon, a whale of a ship, with four smokestacks. The 341st Regiment complete and most of the 340th were there, yelling like Comanche Indians at the slightest provocation. I had taken this enthusiastic yelling of members of the Eighty-ninth Division to indicate their extreme joy on regaining their native land, but Col. F. S. Wheeler, who commanded the 340th Regiment in the war, and who was commander of the troops on the Agamemnon, said that they had carried on that way all through France and into Germany.

"A person not acquainted with this outfit might have thought bad things about them in billets, if he had heard the way they yelled," the Colonel said, "but it was just their way of letting off steam, and I encouraged them in it. Some people used to call them 'the yellers.' But nobody ever called them the yellows."

Two of the men of the regiment wore the Distinguished Service Cross. They were Lieut. Deland and Corp. King. King also has the Croix de Guerre and Deland is to get the Legion of Honor. It happened thus: Acting as liaison for the artillery, they got out ahead of the infantry at a moment when the infantry was stopped, and, seeing a bunch of Germans ahead, the two Americans charged. They captured the layout, 17 men in all, besides those killed.

The artillery had hard luck in that it never had an opportunity to serve its own infantry except for one brief space. The most of the time they were firing behind the Thirty-seventh or the Twenty-eight Divisions.

St. Louis Officers Return.

Maj. Leland A. Winn, a St. Louisan, was not with the regiment. At the last moment he was detailed to stay in France to teach English in a French university until June.

But among those present on the after deck of the Agamemnon were Capt. Sam McPheeters, Lieut. Lloyd Wells, Lieut. Clancy of the medical corps, Lieut. John K. Walsh, Lieut. Hugh Scott and Chaplain E. L. O'Toole, formerly of St. Leo's and now regimental chaplain. Most of them were with the 314th Ammunition Train.

Forward, mixed in with the 60 nurses aboard, was Miss Catherine Semple, also of St. Louis, who had worked about hospitals for several months.

The ship had a stowaway in the person of Leon Robert, about 13 years old, although he claims 16, who says that he belongs to the Eighty-ninth Division. Leon was the son of a coal miner in Lens, and early in the war, while his baby brother was sick, he was sent at dark one evening on an errand down the street. There was an air raid on. When he was about a block from home, a bomb hit his home and killed his father, mother, sister and baby brother. His family having been wiped out and his home itself having been obliterated, Leon struck out for himself, and joined up with the British. He stayed with them for three years, learning the language and how to be an officer's orderly. Then the Americans came, and he took a liking to them. He selected the Eighty-ninth Division, as it was marching past one day, and stepped out into the road and joined. He has been with them ever since. In the St. Mihiel show he stayed with a kitchen which was ahead of the artillery, and in the Argonne he helped around dressing stations and made himself generally useful. He learned a lot of things about soldiering and

MARSHAL DECLARES ENTENTE SCORNED WILSON INFLUENCE; HOPES FOR AMERICAN AID

Military Leader Sees Hopeful Sign in League of Nations—Quotes Gen. Sheridan in Defense of Ruthlessness

By CYRIL BROWN.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

BERLIN, May 24.—"I have never doubted that the Entente, in its policy of annihliation, would impoe its stern will upon us in the event of victory. Therefore, in the stadium of war, in which the leadership of operations was co-intrusted to me, I never gave myself up to dreams of a peace of mutual understanding and equal rights. Now I am less surprised than are the majority of my countrymen, who had lulled themselves with illusions."

So spoke Field Marshal Von Ludendorff, in an exclusive interview with the Post-Dispatch correspondent today. He wore an undecorated double-breasted black sack suit, with somber civilian trimmings, and he gave to me freely his personal judgment of the terms of the pending treaty.

"For reasons which I will not here discuss," he went on, "the decision of the war fell against us. I can understand why President Wilson was unable to put through his 14 points and the other measures which he favored as the basis of the peace treaty. As I assume, he could not withstand the pressure and insistence of his much more seriously wounded comrades in the battles that had been fought. Why was this so? It was because, in the present situation, the United States no longer had the necessary power over its allies."

Wilson Tried to Keep Faith, but Was Outvoted.

"America's power has not been increased by our collapse," the German commander said laconically. "On the contrary, conditions have turned against it, and they will so remain for a long time to come. The President maintained his good faith, but he could not make effective his idealism in great business transactions of the nations. Now his power is scorned. The help of the United States has not been regarded as essential in the arrangement of terms, showing that brute force is not to be displaced by even the noblest idealistic aspirations.

"However, the difference between the 14 points and the peace terms is so far beyond anticipation that I must suppose that your President will not be satisfied with the result of the conference.

"Conditions imposed in the treaty are extraordinarily hard and they display shortsightedness on the part of the framers of that instrument. In the main the terms appear to me to be more in accord with the French thirst for revenge and the needs of English commercial operations than with the great interests of humanity.

"In my opinion, the peace terms as drawn cannot be carried out. As a soldier, the provision for the army lies closest to my interest. Of course, I am now a private citizen, but I may hope that competent authorities will take care to correct what may be necessary in respect to the terms. Without appealing to experts, I cannot think that I need to prove, even to half-way educated laymen, that under present conditions Germany cannot and does not think of setting up a new war army. But with the number of troops prescribed by the Versailles treaty, internal order and quiet cannot be restored and maintained in Germany. For this work, in my opinion, 300,000 men will barely suffice. Reduction of that number may be possible later and, for financial reasons alone, there would be a reduction made as soon as we can have well-ordered conditions again, after the shocks and disorders of the war.

Allies Should Be Interested in Maintaining Order.

"The Western powers must have quite as much interest as we in the return of orderly conditions. They have now gradually come to know how Germany looks and on what wavering basis our state and social order stands. Their own interest demands a Germany capable of living, capable of working and taking joy in its work. That would be impossible with the paring down of West Prussia and the cutting off of East Prussia.

"Without the agricultural produce of those provinces we cannot feed even the two-thirds of our population which Germany's own agricultural production has scantily fed in the past. Without the upper Silesian and the Saar coal fields, and with the loss of 80 per cent of our ores in Lorraine, which made possible our large-scale steel production, we cannot hope for sufficient export quantities of steel to permit us to buy necessary foodstuffs.

"Similarly I may explain the untenability of the conditions of the peace terms in every field. The worst thing about them, in a word, is the extent of the unemployment that will continually menace Germany. Whoever has need of a healthy Germany which will be safe against revolution or industrial and social overturn, must not throttle Germany, but must see to it that the German can work as a free man in his home land and regain love for his work; must protect Germany from hunger and unemployment; must furnish it with considerable quantities of raw materials; must raise its rate of exchange and help it over the initial financial difficulties of peace time.

"Comparing the requirements I have indicated with the conditions imposed at Versailles, I know of no one condition in the terms which, from my standpoint, speaking in good conscience as a soldier, I could characterize as possible of fulfillment.

Hopeful Sign in League, Which, He Says, Is German Idea.

"A league of nations is, perhaps, a hopeful sign. It was urged long ago by the German philosopher, Kant, who was a Prussian, but whose views were singularly applicable to present conditions. The achievement of the league at the time may be credited to the distinguished service of your President. It can assuredly perform very useful work if organized and conducted in the right spirit. I cannot believe the league will wish to exclude Germany or to lock out Germany permanently. Surely its founders would not inoculate it with the death germ the first hour of its birth.

"If the league of nations can and will help us, it will be well. Otherwise, it seems to me, only America can be financially strong enough to help us. I am not so soft as to beg for anything that cannot be paid back with interest, nor am I so naive as to suppose any country would give us help without sound security. Such security may be had from us.

"The creditor could fix the price of exports, control the finances and the international labor laws, and these conditions would give the creditor insight and control of industrial Germany. We must furnish work for those

SLIGHT CHANGES IN TERMS DESIRED TO SHOW PEOPLE AS CONCESSIONS

Predicted That in the End the "Inacceptable" Will Be Accepted — Leaders Have Offered No Alternative Course to Signing Terms.

DEMONSTRATIONS FOR ACCEPTANCE WELCOME

Correspondent Points Out Speeches Have Emphasized That Conditions Could Not Be Fulfilled.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, May 24.—The German Government at present is sincerely anxious to conclude peace and to sign the allied terms, according to the view of the Rotterdam correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, formed from the recent events in Germany. The only thing the German Government is looking for, he says, is some alteration in the terms which it can interpret to the German people as a concession in order to say that the treaty no longer retains the form which made it "inacceptable."

"The Germans will, in short, unless a quite unexpected internal upheaval occurs, end by accepting the inacceptable," the correspondent continues. "The stronger they have become in language, the more vague in substance become the speeches of Ebert, Scheidemann and other members of the Government. They all stop short at saying what is the alternative policy to a refusal to sign and another noticeable symptom is that they have lately taken to emphasizing that the allied terms are not so much inacceptable as 'unfillable.'

"At the bottom the whole campaign is really designed, first, to strengthen the hands of the delegates in their efforts to obtain concessions, and, secondly, to prepare the public for the acceptance of the 'hard conditions.' It is clear, too, that the protest movement which the Government itself started has become a cause of embarrassment rather than of assistance to its authors. Nothing is more welcome to them at the moment than the counter-demonstrations in favor of accepting the treaty which the Independent Socialists are organizing."

'BREAD AND PEACE,' CRY IN BERLIN DEMONSTRATION

Thousands of Radicals Shout, "Down With Scheidemann;" "Raus Mit Ebert."

BY CYRIL BROWN.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

BERLIN, May 24.—"Bread and peace" was the thunderous cry at a great mass meeting of Radical Socialists held Thursday night in the plaza before the palace where William Hohenzollern dweit. The meeting was, as intended, an impressive demonstration that the proletariat is ready to seize new power and take any risk. The shouting of the tens of thousands could be heard for blocks from the heart of Berlin where they met. The air resounded with cries:

"Bread and peace!"

"To the devil with Scheidemann and the ministry!"

"Let the masses of the world carry on the world revolution!"

A sea of red flags waved above the throng, which ceased singing Labor's Marseillaise only to listen to dozens of orators who made inflammatory speeches. This demonstration of Independent Socialists had a truly American punch and political enthusiasm.

Simultaneously the Government Socialists were making a counter-demonstration on Wilhelmsplatz in

$1,200,000,000 APPROPRIATION FOR RAILROADS SOUGHT

Hines Requests Money to Pay Operating Loss and for Further Financing During This Year.

GOVERNMENT LOSS TO MAY IS $486,000,000

Approximately $1,214,000,000 Will Be Repaid to Government—No Rate Increases Now.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—To finance the railroads for the rest of this year and to pay the Government's operating loss for 16 months up to this month, an appropriation of $1,200,000,000 was asked of Congress today by Director-General Hines. More may be sought later, if the Government continues to lose heavily in operation. The $1,200,000,000 is in addition to the $500,000,000 appropriated by the last Congress and includes the $750,000,000 which failed of appropriation when the session ended in a filibuster.

Out of this appropriation railroads will be paid the sums due them months ago as standard compensation and for which they have accepted the railroad administration's certificates of indebtedness. On the security of these certificates they have borrowed from banks and the War Finance Corporation to meet their current corporate obligations in recent months.

Government Loss $486,000,000.

Approximately $486,000,000 represents the Government's loss in operating the railroads from Jan. 1, 1918, when private control ended, to May 1. This is the difference between the sums for which the Government is obligated to pay the roads on contracts and the net actual operating income from operations. The balance, or about $1,214,000,000 of the $1,700,000,000 now appropriated or sought, represents working capital to be repaid to the Government eventually.

The deficit last year was $236,184,000 and in the first four months this year the Government's loss was about $250,000,000. "These, said Hines, "are clearly losses due to the war and ought to be treated as such. By reason of the after-the-war factors tending to important changes in the situation, the estimate herewith submitted does not attempt to forecast results beyond the first four months of this calendar year."

This comment of the Director-General prompted belief that the administration might have to call on Congress for additional funds to make up a future deficit. Such a situation might be met by raising rates, but the Director-General has stated recently that he does not wish to consider this until opportunity has been given for general business conditions, which are reflected in traffic, to be restored to a more normal basis. This is interpreted as meaning that there probably will be no rate advances before next fall, and the Director-General's attitude is that it may then be unnecessary to raise them.

Chairman Good of the House Appropriations Committee said hearings on the railroad administration's request would begin Tuesday. Some recommendation by the committee is expected within a week.

Hines' Recommendations.

Hines' letter, which was written to Secretary Glass and transmitted by the latter to Congress, said:

"The operating deficit of $236,184,940 for the year 1918 was due largely to two facts: First, the winter of 1918 was unprecedented in its severity and in its costly effect on railroad operations, and, second, the increases in passenger and freight rates averaging about 25 per cent were in effect for only a few days in excess of six months, while heavily increased expenses due to war conditions were effective on an ascending scale throughout the 12 months.

"The operating deficit of approximately $250,000,000 for the first four months in 1919 is due in part to the cumulative high levels of cost brought about by the war for labor and materials and in part to the sudden and abnormal falling off of business as a result of the cessation of war activities, the sudden drop in the demand for fuel for other basic commodities and the general state of hesitancy due to the transition from war conditions to peace conditions. The fact that the present period is transitional and apparently on the eve of important changes has made it expedient to defer until the matter can be more accurately measured the consideration of the question now frequently raised of an increase in rates.

"In my judgment, the deficits for 1918 and for the readjustment period of 1919 are clearly losses due to the war and ought to be treated as such. By reason of the abnormal after-the-war factors tending to important changes in the situation the estimate herewith submitted does not attempt to forecast results beyond the first four months of this calendar year.

Total Outlay $1,700,000,000.

"If the amount here requested shall be appropriated, the total appropriation for the railroad administration will have been $1,700,000,000.

"Of this amount, $1,214,000,000 will represent amounts which should be returned to the Government, $125,000,000 thereof being temporarily tied up in working capital and $775,000,000 thereof representing amounts which have been and will be advanced for the account of the railroad corporations and which it will be their duty to repay as rapidly as practicable. About $14,000,000 will represent expenditures for equipment on inland waterways.

"Of the entire $1,700,000,000, $486,000,000 represents the aggregate loss to the Government up to April 30, 1919, on account of the two deficits above explained.

"The sum of approximately $223,000,000 for increased working capital is requested because experience has demonstrated that the amount of working capital actually available for current use on Dec. 31, 1918, was insufficient to admit of the free and unrestricted payment of payrolls and vouchers for materials and supplies throughout the country. There is manifestly great advantage both in the economical purchase of materials and supplies and the handling of such transactions to the satisfaction of the business public in having an ample supply of working cash so as to avoid delays in making payments."

Details of Estimates.

The detailed items listed by Mr. Hines in his letter requesting the appropriation, were as follows:

Requirements for 1918: Amount necessary to defray operating deficit —The difference between the standard rental payable to the railroad companies, and the net operating income, for the year 1918, $236,184,940. For net excess of current assets over current liabilities, partly available for the immediate working capital requirements, $201,938,198. Improvements on inland waterways, $2,641,886. Amounts advanced for railroad companies, to enable them to pay in part their current liabilities, $100,000,000. Amount of additions and betterments expenditures, including equipment, made to the railroad companies' properties during 1918, which must be carried by the railroad administration for the time being, $352,553,455. Loans during 1918 to railroad companies, not immediately repayable, $48,483,959. Total requirements for 1918, $941,802,438. Less amount heretofore appropriated, $500,000,000. Balance required for 1918, $441,802,438.

Estimated requirements for 1919: For amount in additions and betterments expenditures, including equipment, made and to be made to the railroad companies' properties during 1919, which it is believed will have to be carried by the railroad administration for the time being, $253,435,760. For improvements to develop inland waterways, $11,700,000. For financing Boston & Maine Railroad Co. reorganization, $20,000,000. For operating deficit for first four months of 1919, $250,000,000. For additional working capital, $223,061,802. Total estimated requirements for 1919, $758,197,562. Grand total requirements for 1918 and 1919, $1,200,000,000.

FRENCHMAN STARTS FOR AFRICA TO ATTEMPT OCEANIC FLIGHT

Lieut. Roget Leaves Paris in Airplane With Morocco as First Destination.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 24.—Lieut. Roget, the French aviator, who, in April, made a nonstop flight of more than 680 miles from Lyons to Rome, started this morning from Paris to Morocco, whence he plans to attempt a flight across the Atlantic to Brazil, with Dakar as a starting point.

Roget made his start from here at 3 a. m. He was accompanied by Mechanician Offrey.

The total distance in land miles from Paris to Pernambuco, the most eastern port of Brazil, by way of Dakar, is more than 4700 miles. French aviators previously have flown from Paris to Casablanca, Morocco, a distance of 1134 miles. From Casablanca to Dakar is about 1600 miles. The distance across the Atlantic from Dakar to Pernambuco is 1715 nautical miles, or about 1977 land miles.

MORE BIG FEES FOR LAWYERS GIVEN BY UNITED RAILWAYS

Murray Carleton, A. L. Shapleigh, A. J. Siegel and Richard McCulloch, to have direct charge of the proposed "Compromise," and to this committee was delegated all necessary authority to act.

It is known that testimony is available to show that the Houts voucher was approved by this special committee, and that the committee in approving it set out the fact that it was acting under authority granted a year previous.

The purposes of Houts' employment are said to be described in the United Railways records in considerably more detail than were shown in the testimony of the vouchers of payments to Morton Jourdan and other attorneys employed by the company, the Houts vouchers mentioning specifically the preparation of the "compromise" ordinance, attendance at committee hearings and public meetings.

It is learned that the hearing will develop that Pierce received his $25,000 about 10 days before Houts was paid, and that the documentary evidence is virtually a duplicate of that in the Houts payment, the voucher showing his employment in preparing the ordinance and attendance at public hearings and meetings. It is understood, however, that Pierce's employment went further, and that he also was retained in connection with labor disputes and in connection with the fare increase case.

$26,000 Payment in 1913.

Details of the $26,000 payment to Mortimer are reported to be lacking, the vouchers only showing that the payment was for services rendered and money expended. This payment was in May, 1913, five years before the passage of the ordinance.

In time, however, it is almost identical with one of the larger amounts shown to have been paid to Jourdan, who received $12,000 in April, 1913, immediately after the adjournment of the Missouri Legislature, when the Missouri Public Service Commission was created.

When Houts was informed yesterday by a Post-Dispatch reporter that knowledge had been obtained of his fee of $25,000, he told of his employment.

"I assisted in the preparation of the ordinance," Houts said, and during a period of much more than a year I devoted a great part of my time to my employment by the United Railways. I was in frequent conferences with the Mayor, with City Counselor Daues and with Chairman Barney L. Schwartz of the committee. I appeared for the company at several public hearings conducted by the committee.

Considers Fee Modest One.

"The payment of $25,000 I considered a very moderate one, but I did not consider it a payment in full for my services. However, it is all I have received so far. When one considers that the interest involved was around $100,000,000, the fee is a very small one."

Richard McCulloch president and a director of the company at the time of the payment to Houts and Pierce, and manager of the company since the receivership, refused to make a statement regarding the payments.

"There isn't anything I care to say about them," he said last night to a reporter.

Efforts to reach Pierce at his home for a statement were unsuccessful.

Efforts of the Post-Dispatch correspondent in New York to reach Mortimer for a statement also were unsuccessful.

SERGT. YORK IS LIONIZED IN GREAT DAY AT CAPITAL

War's "Greatest Hero" Receives Ovation in House of Representatives and Is Greeted by Baker.

POSES FOR PHOTOS WITH CONGRESSMEN

Receives Innumerable Invitations to Luncheons—Impromptu Reception in the Capitol.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Not since the day Marshal Joffre, hero of the Marne, came to Washington in 1917, has the nation's capital given such a spontaneous greeting to any one as it gave to Sergt. Alvin C. York, the "greatest hero of the war," today. Congressmen, high Government officials, society women, boys, girls, and all the common run of folks scrambled alike to get close to him. They fondled his medals, shook his hands, rubbed his coat sleeves, invited him to luncheons, dinners and meetings of every kind and description. Photographers and sculptors begged him for sittings, and it was over his protest that he consented to posing for them at all.

Sergt. York admitted that Washington was very interesting, but declared he wanted to get back again to the mountains of Tennessee. He was tired out after the continuous reception he had received since he landed in New York. He was brought here as a guest of Representative and Mrs. Cordell Hull, from whose district he came. Judge Hull went to New York to get him. He will return tomorrow to his company at Camp Merritt, N. J., and from there go to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., to be mustered out of the service.

Warmly Greeted by Baker.

When the famous soldier saw the White House and was greeted by Secretary Tumulty and Secretary of War Baker, who greeted him warmly, he declared he had seen it all. He had met President Wilson in Paris, and he thinks that man is the biggest in the world.

"I think and the soldiers think," he declared, "that there never was a man in the world greater than President Wilson. No one could have handled everything and made all the arrangements so well as he has done. And I know the Germans think so. They said: 'President Wilson will give us food.' They said he was the greatest man in the world. They told me so on the Rhine."

And Sergt. York believes the league of nations is a good thing, "provided everybody will sign it. If they drop out and don't sign it, it won't do the good it should."

When his presence in the speaker's gallery was announced to the House of Representatives by Hull, that body arose, cheering with its whole strength. York rose also, stood half a moment and sat down. As the cheering subsided an army Captain, seated in the Speaker's gallery in front of York, arose and shook the hero's hand. From that moment for an hour he was the center of an informal reception.

Members left the floor and in a nearby committee room, where they filed by and shook his hand. Floor Leader Mondell said he wished he was from Wyoming.

He went from the House to the Senate wing of the Capitol, where he saw the President's room and was greeted by Vice President Marshall. As the Senate was not in session, he was taken to the floor, where the seats of distinguished Senators were pointed out. He was photographed during the day with Secretary Tumulty, with Senators Chamberlain and McKellar, and Representative Hull of Tennessee. As the photographers were putting up their machines an army officer, Capt. T. S. Butler of South Carolina, ran up and grabbed York's hand and asked that a picture be made.

The man who captured 132 Germans declared he never expected to have a bullet touch him.

"It was nothing but a miracle that I did not get hit," he declared. "If I had moved one way or another I would have been in the way of a bullet."

WILSON WARNS COUNCIL U. S. MIGHT NOT TAKE MANDATE

Prepares Colleagues for Refusal of Congress to Accept Plan for Administering Turkey.

GREECE MAY TAKE IT IF POWERS APPROVE

Austrian Treaty to Be Presented Next Week—Slight Changes Likely as to Saar Valley.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 24.—President Wilson has informed the Council of Four, it was reported in peace conference circles today, that the other members of the council should be prepared for the United States not to take a mandate for Constatinople or any other part of Turkey.

This is interpreted not as the personal inclination of the President against a mandate but as a precaution in case Congress does not approve of a Turkish mandate.

The reported stand of the President has had the effect of starting two distinct movements with relation to the Turkish problem. The first is to place Constantinople under an international commission in which all the great Powers would have a voice. Should this not prove acceptable, the second plan will be put forward. This plan is based on the assumption that, if the rivalries among the great Powers of Europe make it inexpedient for Great Britain, France or Italy to take the mandate, to entrust it to Greece with the support of the great Powers.

Premier Venizelos of Greece has let it be known that he is not urging this plan, but that Greece is ready to assume the mandate if neither the United States nor an international commission is prepared to assume responsibility.

Treaty to Austria Next Week.

It is announced that the treaty to be presented to Austria will be considered at a plenary session next Tuesday and will be laid before the Austrian delegation probably Wednesday.

The Council of Four today continued its consideration of the economic clauses of the Austrian peace treaty, calling in experts for consultation.

The Council of Four yesterday considered the military terms as framed by Marsh Foch, Commander in Chief of the allied armies; Gen. Diaz, supreme commander of the Italian army, and other military leaders. Austria's formidable army of upwards of 1,000,000 men, which was second only to that of Germany's, is reduced by the treaty to 15,000 men; virtually all military supplies would be surrendered or destroyed and further military production abolished.

The naval terms are similarly sweeping, all warships being surrendered and Austria's position as a naval power terminated.

Status of Treaty Affairs.

The American delegation has prepared a memorandum showing the status of affairs before the peace conference on the conclusion of the Austrian treaty. This discloses that a formidable amount of business is still to be transacted, besides the Turkish and Bulgarian treaties, covering the whole range of interallied subjects. The memorandum runs through many pages, with scores of headings. It leaves no doubt that the conference will continue for a considerable time after the treaties have been signed and President Wilson has left, it being expected that the other American members will remain to consider matters still requiring attention.

Not Yielding Material Points.

The indications thus far are that the allied and associated Powers are not yielding any material points in the peace treaty handed the Germans in order to secure the signing of the document, although considerable changes in phraseology and details are being made.

This policy of the conferees is noticeable as regards the clauses of the peace treaty dealing with the Saar Valley, which has been one of the main subjects of contention in notes between the German representatives and the allies which have not yet been made public.

The Germans have contended that French use of the coal fields might be justified, but that French political control of the Saar population was "odious." The allied reply points out that the control which is characterized as odious is not that of the French, but of the league of nations, which is to administer the Saar region for 15 years until a plebiscite is taken.

The only yielding by the allies on the Sarre Valley terms is with the purpose of making the administration of the district more workable. There has been no change in the general principle by the league of nations.

Ludendorff Says Peace Is One of French Revenge

who may become unemployed through no fault of their own; and thse who do not wish to work must be made to bestir themselves.

"The idea of economic independence upon a foreign country must be painful to every strong man who has been accustomed to act upon his own initiative and judgment. Under all the circumstances, however, one must have the courage to look the facts in the face, to accept them as they are, to bear the consequences of one's actions and to make the best of hard reality.

"The German nation would perhaps endure American economic control more easily than that of any other country, provided it left to us our methods of work and our freedom of action; in short, our individuality. It would not forget who had given it aid in its direst need and had made possible its return to scant prosperity and to peaceful development. The gratitude and productive strength of the most industrious people on earth should be worth something to the new world.

Germany Would Be Buyer.

"Germany will not only be a tremendous buying market tomorrow, if credit be extended to it, but it will also be on the road to Russia and the Near East. Some of my compatriots dreamed, somewhat too fondly, it seemed to me, of the economic field from Hamburg to Bagdad. Above all, they fantastically exaggerated Germany's financial strength which, even after victory, would have been greatly weakened San Francisco, New York, Hamburg, Bagdad, Koenigsburg and Moscow, however, need not remain Utopias. Constructive capital, supplied from the wealth of your rich bankers and captains of industry, will certainly do something in the way of economic development in connection with the mandatory over Constantinople and Armenia promised to the United States.

"I believe that in such potential economic plans America might well take Germany and its 66,000,000 of people into its calculations."

"In regard to the surrender and proposed trial of the former Kaiser and of the German military leaders, including myself," Gen. Ludendorff said, "the questions involved fall within the province of international law, and, though they have been frequently pressed by some of the Entente representatives, I must leave their settlement to the learned, as I must leave to history the verdict concerning the course of the Entente as it bears on the decency of nations. Personally, I am prepared to appear before an unprejudiced tribunal of nations.

"In this connection I must remark that the indictment of the Kaiser would be monstrous. The Kaiser was always covered politically by his Chancellor and in military matters by the highest leadership. Therefore he cannot be brought personally to account.

"War Rough Occupation."

"The war was conducted by us as honor and patriotism dictated. War is a rough occupation. In the same Versailles, where peace is to be dictated to us which no German can call other than a hard peace and which even Premier Lloyd George has termed severe, Gen. Sheridan, as the guest of Bismarck, said the most humane warfare was one knowing no mercy and which left the civilian population in conquered territory nothing but its eyes to see its misfortunes and with its tears to plead with its Government for a quick termination by peace. He said this was the most humane warfare because thereby the horrors of war were shortened.

"We did not make war in this manner, however. If we had, in view of this opinion of a famous American soldier, the Americans, above all, ought not to criticise us severely. A country in which trench warfare lasted for more than four years and which was for that period the theater of war waged with the most modern agencies of destruction, must unavoidably suffer beyond the power of words to describe. It is more than conceivable that such a country appears to the layman, who never saw a battlefield, to have been laid waste by barbarians.

"On me and on thousands of Germans, the destruction in France made much the same impression as the ravages of the Russians in East Prussia. The trips to the front positions, in which the war had room to stand still, invariably moved me deeply. One saw too much that was hard, when a blooming countryside was laid waste by the visitation of war.

"Acted From Necessity."

"The tried leaders of the brave armies against which I had to fight, as the General of a nation called into a defensive war for its life, knew perfectly well that we acted only from necessity, painful to us, but dictated by the situation. They know they would have acted no differently on our territory, in similar straits, and under similar occupation. I have no reason to doubt that they respected the leaders of the German army, just as they are respected by us.

"I do not demand today, while the anger of battle is still hot, that one should do justice to the kultur work we performed in many an occupied territory. One should bear in mind that, as in every mass of people, so in every army, there are conscienceless fellows—as among the Germans—who overstepped the military order and did unnecessary harm, and the longer the war lasted the greater the number and the wilder the outrages of such characters. Persons who misbehaved were brought to account by competent commanders whenever hands could be laid upon them.

"The average German soldier, however, is a good, sympathetic, well-brought-up human being. Inquire in France and hear how many of our brave soldiers fed starving children from their own bit of provisions, and how many made themselves useful about the houses and farms.

"If I am abused here and there, that does not affect me. With the great Bismarck I may say: 'My honor before God and mankind is my possession. I give myself as much of it as I believe I have earned. I waive all claims to more.'"

It will be noted that in this notable interview with Field Marshal Ludendorff he spoke the following: "For reasons which I will not here discuss the decision of the war fell against us."

In an interview which the Post-Dispatch printed May 14 Ludendorff expressed some positive opinions on this point, giving as the real cause of Germany's defeat the revolutionary activity that had been going on among the German troops since 1916. Answering the question of the cause o fthe German defeat, he said:

"As I have already officially stated, the revolutionary activity which had been going on among out troops since 1916 was the only real cause. But for that," he added, with a thump on the arm of his cair, "we would have floored them yet."

Gen. Robertson Confers With Gen. Liggett on Military Plans.

By the Associated Press.

COBLENZ, May 24.—Gen. Sir William Robertson, commanding the British army of occupation, came here yesterday for a conference with Lieutenant-General Hunter Liggett, commander of the American Third Army, regarding allied military action should the Germans fail to accept the peace terms. British aviation officers also have arrived at Coblenz and have discussed with the heads of the Third Army plans for aviation activities in case these should be necessary in connection with a military movement.

Events Taking More Precipitate Course Than Germany Expected.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 24.—The Frankfort Gazette, in speculating on the reason for the calling of the conference at Spa between members of the German peace delegation and representatives of the Berlin Government, suggests that Germany has found its hand forced to some extent by the speed with which the negotiations at Versailles are proceeding. The newspaper says in part:

"The Cabinet appears to have realized only at the last moment the necessity of such a conference. What caused such a sudden determination to be reached, nobody knows. The Government may have considered that events were taking a more precipitate course than had been expected. Germany will perhaps be allowed only a very brief delay after the week given her to make her final observations on the peace treaty terms and may have to hasten her reply of yes or no."

HINDENBERG ASKS PERMISSION TO RESIDE IN SWITZERLAND

Buys Villa on Lake Constance and Says He Has Had Only 14 Days' Holiday Since War Began.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, May 24.—Field Marshal von Hindenburg appealed to the Swiss Government yesterday, asking permission to reside in Switzerland as a simple citizen. The Field Marshal, who recently bought a villa on the shores of Lake Constance, added that he had had only 14 days' holiday since the war began.

The Swiss authorities are somewhat embarrassed, as it is known that Von Hindenburg is a monarchist and also an intriguer and may use this neutral country as a base for further intrigues. It is learned, however, that when sufficient guarantees are given, permission for his residence will be granted. Meanwhile the Germans continue their anti-allied propaganda in Switzerland.

BOLSHEVIK CHIEFS LOSE HEART UNDER DEFEATS IN EAST

Siberian Newspapers Report Desertions Are Frequent and Soviet Leaders Are Ready to Flee.

By the Associated Press.

OMSK, Saturday, May 17.—Reports received by the General Staff of the Siberian army indicate disintegration of the morale of the Bolsheviki. Mobilized workingmen and peasants are deserting at the first opportunity and even the Bolshevik commissaries are reported to be disheartened, many of them declaring openly that they are ready to flee from Russia.

Siberian newspapers print resolutions adopted at recent meetings of peasants in the district of Samara. The peasants decided to expel all those with Bolshevik sympathies, to organize special peasant detachments to fight the Bolsheviki and to arm all men between 18 and 50 for this purpose. The Bolsheviki organ Nash Put acknowledges that it is impossible to stop the Siberian offensive.

Reports of dissensions in the Bolsheviki ranks are contained in the Bolsheviki newspaper Ufimetz. At the village of Kalouguine a fight arose between two regiments of Russians and a regiment of Hungarians. The Bolshevik commissaries finally disarmed the Russian regiments. At Petrovsk there was a battle between the Bolsheviki and newly recruited soldiers. The recruits won and thereupon returned to their homes. The Siberian troops as they move toward the front are greeted enthusiastically by the population. The railroad cars bear this inscription: "We are going to Moscow."

Fires and Explosions Reported in and Near Petrograd.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 24.—Great fires and loud explosions have occurred in and around Petrograd, according to reports forwarded by the Daily Mail's correspondent at Helsingfors under date of Thursday. It is believed that the Bolsheviki, pressed by the Esthunian advance, are destroying the munitions in Petrograd.

Much firing also has been heard in Petrograd and it is reported that the population has risen against the Bolsheviki.

A great change has come over the situation in Russia through the successes of the various anti-Bolshevik forces there. Official and unofficial news of the last few days show that Petrograd is closely threatened by the advances of the Finns and the Esthonians on either side of the Gulf of Finland and by that of Gen. Maynard in the region of Lake Onega, while Bolshevik attacks on the Archangel front has ceased. In addition the Bolsheviki apparently have been unable to check the advance of Admiral Kolchak's forces west of the Urals.

Americans Play Important Part in Allied Advance.

By the Associated Press.

ARCHANGEL, Friday, May 23.—American railroad troops are playing an important part in the rapid advance of the Allied troops southward along the Murmansk railway. The Bolsheviki, as they move southward are destroying bridges in an effort to hold up the Allies in the terrain. The Americans, however, are working hard putting the track into shape again.

American motor launches have been brought on flat cars from Murmansk and, it is expected, will soon be operating with other craft on Lake Onega, which is connected by rivers and canals with Lake Ladoga, the largest in Europe, the Neva River and Petrograd.

The artillery continues active on the Archangel front and there are occasional raids, but no serious fighting. Several hundred American infantry men are still in the fighting line on the Dvina and Vaga sectors. They will soon be relieved. American engineers, however, continue to work on nearly all sectors.

Recognition of Kolchak Regime Considered.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 24.—The Russian situation is attracting great attention in conference circles. The Council of Four discussed the proposition of recognizing the Kolchak Government at Omsk yesterday, but did not reach a decision and will continue its discussion today.

The big four have not recognized Gen. Kolchak's government in Russia, but have entered into an understanding whereby his authority over the country he holds is admitted. Ambassador Morris is leaving Tokio for Siberia to confer with Gen. Kalchak.

M. Bakhmeteff, former Russian Ambassador to France, conferred yesterday with E. M. House of the American delegation of Russian affairs, and Sergius Sazonoff, Foreign Minister for the Omsk Government, is carrying on conversations with British officials in London.

The French and British press are favorable to the proposal that the allied Governments extend recognition to the Kolchak regime and the Russian commission in Paris is confident that this recognition will be announced shortly.

The Entente delegates apparently are united in the view that there must be some Russian Government recognized so that negotiations can be opened before the peace conference closes.

ALLEN CHARGES LIKELY TO BE INVESTIGATED

Chairman of Senate Committee Shows Interest in Report on 35th Division's Operations in Argonne.

BAKER PREPARING REPLY TO ALLEN

Senator Johnson Says Statements of Chief of Staff of First Army Prove Governor's Charges.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Senator Chamberlain (Dem.) of Oregon, retiring chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, has given out for publication here the text of a report by the Chief of Staff of the First Army on the operations of the 35th Division in the Argonne. The report had been sent to the committee by Gov. Allen of Kansas to back up his charges of inefficiency in the management of the battle. Senator Chamberlain, in giving the report to press associations, made no comment on its contents.

The report has not yet come officially to the attention of Senator Wadsworth (Rep.) of New York, the new chairman of the committee, which is yet to be organized for the current session. Wadsworth evinced keen interest when shown a newspaper copy of it today. He could not forecast what action the committee would take, but said that the matter undoubtedly would receive consideration. Senator Johnson (Rep.) of California, another member of the committee, said: "The report completely establishes the truth of the statements that Gov. Allen made before the committee when he was here during the last session of Congress. It also brings out what Gov. Allen was careful to state—that the bravery of the men and officers was excellent.

Secretary of War Baker is preparing formal reply to the criticisms of Gov. Allen.

Gen. March, chief of staff, today declined to comment on Allen's charges or on his action in sending to the Military Affairs Committee the Senate a copy of the report of the chief of staff of the first army.

"Gov. Allen," he said, "has not communicated his criticisms to me personally. He has communicated them to the Secretary of War, who will make formal reply. This is now being prepared."

JUNE 12 TO SEE ALL TROOPS EXCEPT REGULARS START HOME

In Week of May 20, 133,873 Men Left France—Headquarters to Close Early in June.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Revised plans for the return of the overseas forces provide for the sailing from France of all troops except those in the regular divisions, by June 12, Gen. March, Chief of Staff, announced today.

Units now in the service of supply are scheduled to sail 100,000 in May; 200,000 in June, and the small remainder in June. General headquarters at Chaumont will be closed early in June, after which time the Coblenz sector will be supplied direct from Antwerp.

The return movement in the week of May 20 established a new high record for transporting troops either on the eastward or westward movement. During that week 133,093 officers and men were embarked for home.

The official schedule for the abandonment of the various army sectors and areas in France is as follows: "Base section No. 1 (St. Nazaire) to close July 20; No. 2 (Bordeaux) July 10; No. 3 (England) June 25; No. 4, closed April 30; No. 5 (Brest), July 30; No. 6 (Marseilles), June 25. Intermediate section No. 1 (St. Aignan-Grievres section) and advance section No. 1 (north of Paris district) to be cleared by June 1 except necessary centers; district of Paris to close July 10; Tours headquarters scheduled for abandonment July 30.

JEWISH HOME RECEPTION TODAY

Officers and Directors of Institution for Chronic Invalids to Assist.

A reception will be held this afternoon from 2 until 6 o'clock at the Jewish Home for Chronic Invalids and the Shoenberg Memorial Hospital, on Fee Fee road. Louis Renard, president, and Mrs. Moses Shoenberg, chairman of the Invitation Committee, will be assisted in receiving by the officers and directors of the institution. In case of inclement weather the reception will be held next Sunday. The Creve Coeur cars will be met at Fee Fee road by automobiles which will convey guests to the home.

The institution cares for men, women and children who are chronically ill. It gives precedence to tuberculosis.

Inspectors Report on 35th Division Given Out by Senator Chamberlain

Following is the text of an inspecting officer's report on the 35th Division, filed with the Senate committee on Military Affairs by Gov. Allen of Kansas in support of his general charges that the division artillery support was inadequate and there was a shortage of ambulances:

HEADQUARTERS FIRST ARMY, AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, FRANCE. OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF STAFF.

October 26, 1918.

From: Chief of Staff, 1st Army.
To: Commanding General, 35th Division.
Subject: Conclusions of an inspection of the conduct of 35th Division during attack in recent operations.

1. The Army Commander directs me to transmit to you the following conclusions of an inspection of the conduct of the 35th Division during its attack in our recent operations. He desires that these conclusions be given the greatest weight in the organization and training of your division.

2. These conclusions have been deduced from the testimony of several eye-witnesses and are transmitted to you with the desire not only to point out the causes for undesirable conditions but also to give you a basis for the future training of the 35th Division.

Conclusions:

1st. That the 35th Division at the commencement of operations, Sept. 26th, was not well trained and fit for battle, was not a well disciplined unit, and that many officers with the Division were not well trained leaders.

2d. That the Division Staff was not efficient or well organized.

3rd. That the changes in the Staff and brigade and regimental commanders greatly handicapped the Division Commander in the proper functioning of his Division.

4th. That after the attack started there was no system of liaison. Even the runners failed to follow the axis of liaison prescribed.

5th. That brigade and regimental commanders failed to make use of the means of liaison at their disposal and failed to keep in touch with their higher commander.

6th. That the failure of all commanders to keep a headquarters established where communications could be received was inexcusable.

7th. That the action of brigade and regimental commanders in going far to the front and out of all communications resulted in their having no more effect on the action than so many company or platoon commanders, and prevented the headquarters in rear from sending orders to units in front.

8th. That if commanders had remained in their headquarters or made provisions for messages reaching them immediately, they would have been able to have had a fair knowledge of conditions, and perhaps have straightened out the many difficulties that arose.

9. That the intermingling, confusion and straggling which commenced shortly after H hour showed poor discipline, lack of leadership, and probably poor preparation.

10. That it was a serious error for both the Division Commander and the Chief of Staff to leave their headquarters at the same time.

11. That the five attacks which the division made followed each other so closely that there was no opportunity after the evening of Sept. 26 to reorganize, and get the various uits in hand.

12. That after Sept. 27 the division was really one in name only, as maneuvering power with intact units except the Engineers, had ceased to exist.

13. That the casualties among the officers was undoubtedly responsible for a great deal of the disorganization.

14. That most of the straggling and confusion was caused by men getting lost and not having leaders, and not from any deliberate design to go to the rear in order to avoid further fighting.

15. That the fighting spirit and bravery of officers and men was excellent.

16. That the failure to have telephone and wireless communication forward to include regiments, and the failure to use the proper code call to Corps Headquarters, was due to the inefficiency of Lieutenant-Colonel George A. Wieczorek, Signal Corps, then Division Signal Officer.

17. That the Artillery Commander, Brigadier-General L. G. Berry, failed to co-operate with and make full use of the Air Service until ordered to do so.

H. A. DRUM,
Chief of Staff.

REPORT ON THE 35TH WAS CLOSELY GUARDED IN FRANCE

High Officers Had to Go to Front Lines Because of the Failure of Mechanical Communication.

By CLAIR KENAMORE
The Post-Dispatch's Staff Correspondent With the 35th Division in France.

NEW YORK, May 24.—The report on the 35th Division by the Chief of Staff of the First American army, made public in Washington, was one of the most closely guarded of the official documents in France. When it was transmitted to the Division, Gen. Gerhart took it to the regimental commanders in the brigade he was temporarily commanding, and read it to them, not permitting the paper to leave his hands. It was locked up at division headquarters and when a correspondent asked about it there, he not only received no information, but the very existence of the report was doubted.

Officers of the division, especially those who had been national guardsmen, agreed heartily with some of the conclusions, in particular the paragraph which testified to the unfailing bravery of the enlisted men.

That the staff was not well organized was generally acknowledged and this was usually laid at the door of Gen. Peter E. Traub, who was not believed by the officers to have administrative or organizing ability in any conspicuous degree.

Mechanical Communication Failed.

That brigade and regimental commanders went too far to the front, and stayed too far in front was generally conceded, but this was made necessary, they assert, by the failure of all mechanical devices for communication. In the case of Col. Ristine, he was in the skirmish line because he thought he could best inspire and influence his troops there. He is a great believer in psychology in influencing and leading troops. The brigade commanders had to stay well forward, because they could get no reports of what was going on otherwise, and after the second day the brigade commanders functioned mostly as channels through which orders were transmitted down from division or corps headquarters.

The changes in commanders just before the battle has never been explained by Gen. Traub. Gen. Martin, commander of the Kansas National Guard, Col. Rumbold and all other national guardsmen, from regimental commanders up, were removed and replaced by regular army officers. There was a man appointed for Ristine's place, but he failed to arrive in time. Under the idea of the regular army officers, the movement doubtless was right, in putting regular army officers, presumed to be superior in training, in the difficult jobs. From the viewpoint of the guardsmen it was wrong, in that it put men in command who had no knowledge of the troops, and it deprived the men of the privilege of being led by officers in whom they had confidence.

That the intermingling showed poor leadership and poor preparation is probably true, though most officers were of the opinion that the early fog and the repeated attacks so close together caused it. The preparation was as poor as could reasonably have been, in the opinion of most officers. Persons who are interested in good preparation for a battle, can get the same from Gen. William Wright's preparation for the 89th Division, printed elsewhere in today's Post-Dispatch in the section devoted to "the 89th Division in the great war."

Engineers Ready at All Times.

The engineers' think this report should be printed everywhere, and that the very best section of it is the one which says that after the 27th the engineers were intact and able to maneuver and function as a unit, and that they were the only outfit of the entire division which could do so. This is true, and because of that, they were able to prepare and hold the line before Chaudron Farm. Col. T. Clarke and Lieutenant-Colonel Stayton showed leadership of high quality all through the fight, not only in keeping their regiment clean and ready at all times, but in fighting bravely when the time came.

Officers of the division usually speak bitterly of Lieutenant-Colonel Wieczorek because of whise inefficiency, according to the report, all signaling and communications broke down. He was a regular army man and from the start the condition was hopeless as to telephones, telegraph, wireless and every other means. Confusion of the worst kind resulted, and officers say that scores of lives were lost through this breakdown. He was relieved of his command in th eArgonne, and, according to report, was sent back to the states and there advanced to the rank of Colonel.

Gen. Berry of Old School.

Gen. Berry, who also is censured in the report, never has been a popular officer, since he started in at Camp Doniphan. He is an army officer of the old school, intolerant of persons not as well advanced in military lore as himself and not calculated to make friends. Officers of the division say there were no airplanes when he went to school and that, therefore, he would not co-operate with them in the Argonne. He never had done it before, why should he now?

That many of the minor officers were not well trained is denied by most of the outfit. The division was very short of officers to start with.

GARDNER MEN BACK M'ALLISTER FOR U. S. BENCH

Governor Could Then Name Successor on Equalization Board Who Favors Full Value Tax Assessment.

JUDGE FARIS MORE LIKELY CANDIDATE

Supreme Court Jurist Considered Acceptable to Senator Reed, Who Is Against a Folk Nominee.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., May 24.—It is generally known at the State Capital that friends of Gov. Gardner are "pulling" for the appointment to the Federal bench of Attorney-General Frank W. McAllister, because they see a possible quick and satisfactory solution of the tax tangle and the yawning deficit in Missouri finances.

If McAllister is appointed to succeed Judge Dyer of St. Louis, Gardner will appoint as his successor in the Attorney-General's office a man who will be sworn to vote with the Governor and Auditor Hackmann for a full-value assessment as a member of the State Board of Equalization.

What Appointment Means.

As the situation stands now, the efforts of Gardner and Hackmann to bring about a lawful assessment have failed because they have been outvoted, 3 to 2, by McAllister, Secretary of State Sullivan and Treasurer Middelkamp, the other three members of the board, who have persistently voted for an arbitrary fractional assessment on all the property in the State.

The appointment of Judge Charles B. Faris of the Supreme Court to succeed Dyer would also be acceptable to Gardner, who would then appoint McAllister to the vacancy on the Supreme bench, and thus pave the way for appointment of an Attorney-General who would vote for a full-value assessment.

The feeling here is that McAllister is not the leading candidate for the Federal judgeship, because his only active supporter of prominence in Washington is Senator Reed, who is not friendly to the administration and who will offer bitter opposition to the league of nations covenant, regardless of any political favors shown him.

As the appointment of McAllister appears less likely, that of Judge Faris becomes more so.

Reed to Reckon With.

It is believed that Reed would object to the confirmation of anybody whose appointment is obtained by Breckinridge Long and former Gov. Folk, because both are expected to contest with him for the senatorial nomination in 1922.

The appointment of Judge Faris, it is believed here, would be entirely acceptable to Reed, and his confirmation would not be delayed in the Senate.

Judge Faris' appointment also is being urged on administration advisers in Washington on the ground that it will soothe the wounded feelings of Southeast Missouri Democrats who were "ruffled" because Arthur L. Oliver, a former fellow townsman of Faris at Caruthersville, was not reappointed District Attorney in St. Louis when his term expired.

CARUSO TOUCHED BY HONORARY ST. LOUIS POLICE CAPTAINCY

His Secretary Conveys Thanks for Use of Official Car During Stay in "Great and Noble City."

Being honored by the Honorable Board of Police Commissioners with an honorary captaincy of the St. Louise police force is an honor that has touched Caruso, the great tenor. His secretary says so in the following letter to the Police Board:

"Honorable Board of Police Commissioners of the City of St. Louis.

"Honorable Sirs: On behalf of Mr. Caruso permit me to express to you all his grateful thanks for the great honor bestowed upon him in giving him the honorary captaincy of the St. Louis police force. The beautiful tribute thus paid has touched him to heart.

"And again many devoted thanks I wish to convey to you for the generous use of the official car during Mr. Caruso's stay in your great and noble city.

"With deep appreciation,
"Very sincerely yours,
"BRUNO ZIRETO,
"Secretary to Mr. Caruso."

The communication has been duly entered in the Police Board's honorable records.

Gen. Traub's requisitions for officers to fill the gaps apparently received no attention at G. H. Q. Those who remained were not illy trained. Their trouble was that they were scarce. There were heavy officer casualties, and soon many troops were leaderless.

The making public of the report doubtless will have a good effect, in that it will eventually reveal the causes of the last-minute changes in officer personnel.

GEN. WRIGHT AND DR. HADLEY SPEAK AT YALE BANQUET

Former Gives Enthusiastic Praise to American Soldiers for Their Heroic Conduct in Battle.

WAS WITH 89TH IN ITS HARDEST FIGHTING

President of Yale Tells of Part University Took in War and Gives Views on Peace Problems.

The Associated Western Yale Clubs last night closed their two days' convention at the Hotel Statler with a banquet at which President Arthur T. Hadley of Yale University, Major-General William M. Wright and Walter Camp were the principal speakers.

Perhaps the most impressive moment of the evening occurred when all stood reverently silent while the army's saddest bugle call, taps, was sounded following a toast to the Yale men "who gave their lives that men might live."

Goodfellowship was general during the evening. At times old grads, gray-haired and venerable, stood on chairs cheering themselves hoarse and at others exchanged reminiscences about the days when they were undergrads. Classmates who had not seen each other for years recalled experiences of college days.

Ovation for Gen. Wright.

Major-General Wright, who took the Thirty-fifth Division over and brought it back, who in the meantime organized the Third, Fifth and Seventh Army Corps, who was with the Eighty-ninth Division throughout the St. Mihiel and Argonne offensives, was given an ovation at the conclusion of his speech in which he detailed the heroic action of our troops overseas.

"The Americans," he said, "had been training in 'quiet' sectors—although why in God's name they called them quiet sectors I don't know—when on March 21 the Boche put across his offensive at the Somme. That offensive brought about the important unity of command.

"Shortly after that the First Division took part in its first great offensive at Cantigny. The Second Division, almost entirely regulars, went into the line June 4 and June 15 they gave the Boche a smack in the face and drove them back 900 yards. The British and French morale came back with a rush and the Boche morale went down correspondingly.

"Then Gen. Pershing made up his mind to organize the first American army which he did, taking command of it personally. Although the French had aided us in many ways, they still were a little doubtful about the ability of the American staff to handle great bodies of troops in action. But Gen. Pershing didn't have any doubt about their ability in that regard and so he put over the St. Mihiel offensive in September, 1918, in which the Americans were not under French, but under his command. He did it. He put it over. It was the one thing on the Western Front that went exactly on schedule. The troops reached their objective on the exact minute, the salient was 'pinched off' at the proper moment and our troops advanced from 8 to 10 kilometers in 24 hours despite steady opposition. The French didn't believe we could do it.

Turned to Argonne

"Before the guns at St. Mihiel were cold Pershing had commenced to withdraw his troops. He pulled our divisions right and left and threw them into the Argonne, where the fighting began Sept. 26 and lasted until Nov. 11.

"Battles in France are not affairs of days but of days and nights. Men who are in them have no rest. They are under shellfire 24 hours out of the 24.

"I have been asked often regarding shortages of equipment, of cannon, of planes. We did have shortages. The commander in chief knew it, I knew it, everybody knew it. But the commander-in-chief had the opportunity to pull off in the fall of 1918 the decisive action scheduled for the spring of 1919. He knew the Boche was groggy and he knew our men had it in them to deliver the final awful wallop. If he hadn't seized his opportunity we would have been fighting yet. There would have been many more Liberty Loans. He took the responsibility, and if he hadn't taken it the troops would not be coming home today. That's the answer to that.

"I have been asked also why we did not stop fighting when we knew the armistice was an assured fact. Well, the Boche was busy every day dropping peace propaganda from planes. We took care not to let the men get hold of it. We know that if they did get hold of it they wouldn't hit as hard. It would take the punch out of them. So we carried on up to the last moment when we forced the crossing of the Meuse River on the night of Nov. 10-11, with a loss of seven or eight men. We then had to fight to the last in order to hold our bridgeheads and protect our crossing, else our army could have been pushed into the river on a stiff counter attack. We couldn't say 'Let's stop fighting, gentlemen.' The Boche is no gentleman, anyway. So we had to fight to the last, which we did, and we did right.

"Why, I saw in France the Murphys and the Troginskis and the others dying 'head on,' as we say in the army. When a man is hit standing still he throws up both hands and falls backward; but when he is advancing rifle in hand and is hit he falls forward on his face. He falls dead on the objective. And I saw whole rows of them fallen dead on the objective, not one face up. The old flea bitten hard-boiled regulars used to get lumps in their throats at the bravery of some of these young boys. It was the splendid morale, of the American people, I tell you, gentlemen, that brought that bravery about."

Dr. Hadley Speaks.

President Hadley told of the service which Yale had rendered in war, and of the plans for increasing the usefulness of the institution. He said:

"The thing which enabled Yale as a university to render the war service that she did was the fact that she was prepared. As early as the sinking of the Lusitania we saw the probability of war, and got ready for it. We organized an artillery battalion in 1915, and this fact gave us a nucleus of 500 boys about which to build up an artillery regiment of three times that number in 1917. This in turn furnished to every training camp in the country a group of officer candidates who knew the theory of fire and the elements of its practical application.

"Long before we were ourselves drawn into the war, our physiologists were experimenting on respiration in a way that helped them to understand the problems of gas poisoning. This timely study resulted in making New Haven the headquarters of that substation of the Chemical Warfare Service which dealt with the cure of injuries from gas—a station whose work was revolutionizing the practice of the British army as well as the American. It was because we were first in the field with plans for teaching the modern theory of electricity to those who wished to utilize it in war that Yale was made the center of officers' training for radio communication."

He grouped the problems of peace, from the university's viewpoint, under four heads. First, the university must be national and comprehensive. Second, it must emphasize intellectual thoroughness. Third, it must broaden the tastes, interests and intellectual outlook of students. Fourth, it must help students in the right choice of professions.

He told also of a new arrangement by which military service courses will count toward degrees, whether these courses are in field artillery, or military engineering, or chemical warfare.

Favors Officers' Reserve.

"For the moment," he said, "this will affect only part of our students, because of the reaction against military service and all that goes with it, which is apt to follow the conclusion of a great war. But I believe that the country will soon recover itself from that reaction, and see that if we are to take the part that we should in the world's affairs, the boys who plan to be leaders in the arts of peace must also quality themselves for similar leadership in the event of war; and that a trained reserve of officers, such as our colleges can furnish, is a guarantee of international peace more vital and more effective than any league of nations could possibly be without it. Whether these boys be called upon to serve or not—and I fervently hope they will not—the preparation for such service is a lesson in our duty to the nation, and a means of securing intelligent interest in the problems of the nation, even more potent than the best course in economics or in civics."

Arbitration Wins in Theatre Row and a Horse Deal

Police Called When Airdome Ownership Is Disputed by Pair With Different Documents.

When Harry Koplar, 5511 Pershing avenue, head of an amusement company, last night went to the Compton Airdome, 3131 Easton avenue, to take charge of what he presumed to be the latest addition to his string of theaters, he found Herman A. Fisher, 2936 Thomas street, conducting a show and claiming ownership. At least, he was collecting the admissions.

Koplar went to the Dayton Street Station and said to Lieut. Gerk: "There's going to be trouble over at the Compton Airdome," and he recited that another man was running what he claimed as his theater.

"Why, that's no worry for me," Gerk replied; "that's a question for the civil courts."

"Well, there's going to be trouble there," Koplar reiterated.

"I'll take care of any trouble, all right," Gerk replied. The telephone bell rang and the clerk announced: "Riot call from the Compton Airdome."

Soon Fisher and two employes of Koplar arrived in the patrol wagon. They had begun to fight for possession of the show.

Koplar shook a bill of sale for the paraphernalia of the airdome in Fisher's face. Fisher shook a lease for the lot on which the airdome is operated in Koplar's face. Gerk stepped between them.

Koplar said he had purchased his bill of sale from a man named Culp. Fisher said he got his lease from a man named McDonald. McDonald and Culp were former partners in the show, and each sold his holding.

Gerk proposed as a compromise that one appoint a ticket seller, the other a ticket taker, and the two select a third party to hold the receipts while the courts are settling the dispute.

Koplar and Fisher agreed on condition that Gerk be the trustee. He consented and after the show the night's receipts were taken to him.

Humane Officer Enforces Offer to Sell Made to Negroes Who Rescued Animal From Cellar.

As horse trades go—

The horse of Eli Koller, a junk dealer residing at 2613 Thomas street, fell into the passage way leading to the cellar of the residence yesterday. The police were called. They didn't have a block and tackle and called the fire department. The fire department didn't have a block and tackle and passed the job of hoisting the horse to a crew of eight negro riggers.

Koller was not present and the negroes demurred at the undertaking in his absence, saying they might break one of the horse's legs and thereby become liable for damage.

The police called George Dieckman, 4537 West Pine boulevard, a stock and bond broker, who also is secretary of the Humane Society, to be judge, in case of accident, whether any injury to the horse was unavoidable or the result of carelessness.

The negroes went to work. At the end of an hour and a half they landed the horse safely on terra firma. About that time Koller appeared.

The negroes demanded $10 for their services. Koller scoffed at them.

"Give me $5 and take the horse," he said.

The negroes didn't have $5. Dieckman did.

"I'll take you," he said, and Koller began to hedge. "I was only fooling," he protested.

"I'm not," Dieckman said, and taking out $10, he handed it to Clarence Green, 1353 Elliot avenue, foreman of the negro gang.

"Here's your pay," he said. "Now give me a receipt for $15, take the horse, sell it, return me my $15 and keep the rest.

Green led the horse away, Koller protesting till horse and negroes passed from sight.

THRILLING RESCUES FROM BURNING STEAMER

St. Louisan Among 156 Passengers Picked Up in Chesapeake Bay—Two Lifeboats Capsize.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 24.—Many thrilling rescues were made by members of the crew of the burning passenger steamer Virginia, bound from Baltimore for Old Point and Norfolk, in Chesapeake Bay early today. The vessel, which was off the mouth of the Potomac River, had a passenger list of 156 persons and a crew of 82. Although several of the passengers suffered burns, no lives were lost.

The crew of the Virginia, in charge of Capt. W. G. Lane, who was badly burned, did heroic work in fighting the flames and rescuing the passengers. They were aided by the crew of the Chesapeake liner City of Norfolk, which was close by when the fire started shortly before 1 a. m. All but three of the crew of the Virginia have been accounted for. The three missing were negro deck hands.

Three Leap Into Water.

Capt. Lane, Maj. C. D. Davidson of Camp Meade, who was going to Newport News to meet a brother officer coming in with one of the units from France, and a laborer, were the last persons to leave the stricken ship. They were forced to leap into the water to save themselves.

Within 15 minutes after the blaze burst forth on the Virginia, the men on the City of Norfolk, guided by the cries of those who, with life belts around them, were battling with the water, picked up all they could find.

Those who witnessed the burning of the steamer were impressed at the quickness with which it was consumed. By 1:30 o'clock the Virginia was a blackened and smoking hulk, burned down to the water line.

Two life boats filled with passengers capsized. One of the boats turned over immediately after leaving the Virginia. The passengers left their clothes, jewelry, money and other valuables behind and all were lost.

The company's officials have as yet been unable to learn the cause of the fire.

St. Louisan Rescued.

Hugo H. Schumacher of 3822 Michigan avenue, St. Louis, assistant secretary of Buck's Stove and Range Co., was one of those rescued. He was brought back to Baltimore on the steamer Florida. He was on his way to Norfolk on a business trip. The passengers were asleep when flames were discovered in the hold of the boat, and spread so fast that few of the passengers had time to do more than save their lives.

Schumacher escaped unhurt, though he was suffering somewhat from exposure. Most of the passengers were en route to meet returned soldiers.

Schumacher had a stateroom on the saloon deck. He was awakened by members of the crew and told to get what he could and prepare to leave. The fire at that time had just started to break through the flooring of the saloon deck. He was placed in a lifeboat, which also contained a number of women. In lowering the lifeboat, one of the ropes ran out too quickly, throwing all into the water and sending the lifeboat a considerable distance away. Schumacher and others caught the side of an upturned lifeboat and assisted in bringing several women up, whom they held until the arrival of aid.

445 SERVICE MEN GET JOBS THROUGH BUREAU

603 Employers File Applications for Men During Week—Surplus of Idle in Several Lines.

The Demobilization Bureau for Soldiers, Sailors and Marines, at 906 Locust street, last week obtained jobs for 445 men, from 603 applications for men filled by employers during the week.

The Salvation Army, which has a representative at the bureau, supplied outfits of new civilian clothes to 48 men who did not have money to make the change from olive drab to mufti; gave room and board to 15 others and assisted eight financially to obtain tools and to release their baggage from storage charges.

At the Red Cross desk 400 men were aided with transportation, information, loans, lodging and other relief.

It was one of the most prosperous weeks of the bureau from the standpoint of extending real helpful service to worthy men discharged from the military and naval service, according to M. J. Walsh, chief examiner in charge. Walsh said there still remains a surplus of unemployed clerks, chauffeurs, machinists, helpers, auto repairmen, steamfitters, bricklayers, machine hands, lathe hands, punch press men, drill press men, stationary firemen, and about 20 good salesmen. Jobs for these men will clean up for the time being the surplus men at the bureau.

Cards from the various demobilization camps, bearing the man's name, age, address and place of employment when he joined the army or navy, are being received daily at the bureau, so that jobs can be had ready for the men after they have been discharged. Some of these cards were filled out on the transports, coming from France, and mailed to this bureau in the ship's postoffice.

Last week 79 of these cards were received from Camp Zachary Taylor, Louisville, Ky., for men who are soon to be discharged, and 39 were from Camp Dodge, Io.; Camp Pike, Ark., and the steamships Mercury, Mongolia, Mount Vernon and Huron.

All the employers designated by the men on the cards were called on the telephone, and all asserted that the men's old jobs were awaiting them.

One young man tried to impose on the bureau, but was caught up and reproved. He told the Salvation Army representative that Armour & Co. had given him a position as salesman and that he needed a good civilian outfit. An order for the clothes was given him on a local department store, and while on his way to the store an investigation revealed that he had no promise of a job. Reference to the records showed that he had been helped financially by the Salvation Army only a few days before.

This check is kept on all men to prevent imposition by unworthy ones.

MESSAGE FROM HAWKER, IN BOTTLE, IS REPORTED FOUND

Secretary Daniels, in Making Purported Note Public, Says He Believes It Is Fake.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The navy department made public today a report from New London, Conn., saying a bottle had been picked up three miles south of Narranganselt Pier containing a message purporting to have been written by Harry G. Hawker, who was lost in an attempted flight across the Atlantic. The message said:

"May 19, 1919: 1:34 a. m. Accident to plane and I am drifting in a collapsed boat, latitude 51 degrees 30 minutes north, longitude 15 degrees 30 minutes west.

(Signed) "HAWKER."

Secretary Daniels said he believed the message was a fake. Naval officials said the bottle probably was dropped overboard from a coastwise steamer.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., May 24.—The steamer Glendevon, arriving from London tonight, reported having picked up a wireless message from the steamship Suraga early Monday in which the Suraga gave her position, apparently in reply to a signal from an airplane. The Suraga was then at 50 degrees 28 minutes north, latitude, and 30 degrees west longitude, the same position from which the cable ship Faraday reported to London she had sighted the red light of an airplane early Monday. The Glendevon encountered a strong northeast gale Monday. The Glendevon also reported picking up a message from an unidentified vessel, which may have been the Samnanger, to the effect that a Sopwith biplane had been seen to disappear in the fog at a position for which only the longitude of 19 degrees was given.

The Glendevon brought here the Vimy bomber in which Capt. Alcock will attempt his transatlantic flight.

BOY, 6, MYSTERIOUSLY BURNED

Harvey Buck, 6 years old, 3524 Missouri avenue, was found at his home by police yesterday suffering from burns on the chest, arms and face and with neither the boy nor his parents or a doctor in attendance able to tell how he was injured.

The doctor told police the burns might have been caused by acids or by steam. The boy said he had been near neither. Playmates said they had been playing on the roof of a shed, but there was no fire or anything else that might have caused the burns there. The boy's clothing was not burned.

The parents said there were no acids or steam in the house by which the child might have been burned.

124TH ARTILLERY FROM EAST ST. LOUIS RETURNS DAY AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

Guardsmen Who Saw Hard Fighting Arrive on the America—Many Won Decorations.

BY CLAIR KENAMORE.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 24.—The 124th (East St. Louis) Field Artillery, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel J. A. Rogers, came roaring and cheering up the bay on the America, once a crack German liner, at 2 o'clock this afternoon, a day ahead of schedule. They were as happy a bunch as ever came down a gang plank and there were no tears shed when the officers in command, with remarkable speed, rushed them aboard ferries with a few thousand other members of the 33d Division for the pull to Long Island City, and by train thence to Camp Mills.

"What do I think of my men?" countered Lieutenant-Colonel Rogers in answer to a question. "Well, I'll tell you. An army officer isn't supposed to talk too much about his personal feelings in connection with the service, but I surely felt badly when, after the armistice, I was detached on sick leave. After I came out of the hospital I was assigned to the 123d Field Artillery for a time and was then detached and sent to field artillery school at Treves. Then I forgot all of these disappointments when I found just before we started back that I was to bring back the boys who had fought through the war so well. They are a lot to be proud of, and I am proud of them."

Commander Private 16 Years Ago.

Col. Rogers is a Texan and regular army man. He started his military career 16 years ago as a "buck private," but by diligent study qualified for a chance to stand for a commission. He won it and at the beginning of the war had reached the rank of captain. He was given his majority just before leaving for France with his regiment and got his next step in France, after Col. Hackett had to leave the regiment on account of illness.

"Our boys, of course, had to go to a training camp when we first got to France, the same as all the rest," he continued. "When our French instructors were convinced we knew how to handle our guns, including their 75's, we got our certificate in the shape of an order to proceed to the St. Mihiel sector. Our first position was at Beauconville, from which we advanced in support of the first American army to Nonsard. From here we were sent to Verdun and plunged into the terrific Argonne-Meuse drive and stuck it out to the armistice.

"Anyhow, my boys stood up to their work. The fact that we had more casualties in men and horses than any unit in the Artillery Brigade shows just the sort of a time we had. It was at Epinonville that we had our hardest time. It was there I lost four of my best officers. Shell fire got Capt. Sercomb and Lieut. Lawton. Lieut. Palmer was wounded and died later, and Lieut. Ellis was wounded and invalided. Lieut. Lewis was killed by rifle fire in the Bois de Bantheville, near Romagne."

When asked if it were not unusual for artillerymen to be wounded by rifle fire, Col. Rogers said:

"Yes, because as a general proposition we are hid from the view of the enemy and are subject to machine gun or small arm fire only from air raiders who might spot us. But there are occasions when the artillery is very close up on the heels of the infantry. While we never were close enough to have point blank fire, an artillery unit at Chateau-Thierry did, and we had several men decorated for carrying the guns along with the infantry. As a rule, though, it is the high explosive shell that works the havoc.

Artillery Constantly Pounded.

"The whole war was mainly an artillery war. The doughboys didn't seem to bother much about rifle fire, but they did have a deep respect for the high explosive. A lot of people seem to think that because the artillery is not in the front line it is a nice, comfortable spot in which to spend a quiet hour during battle. They overlook the fact that the artillery is the constant objective of the other fellow and is being pounded all the time. One infantryman we had temporarily assigned to us for a few days was delighted when he was sent back to his own unit. 'I'm going up to the front to get a little rest,' was the way he put it."

If Col. Rogers was proud of his command as a whole, he was just as proud of his adjutant, Capt. Russell F. Lord, who, before the war, was a lumber merchant in Chicago. He was a National Guardsman and came in with his regiment. He was transferred to the 124th on the eve of sailing for France and made a record for his administrative ability and his influence over the men. Here is what his brigade comander wrote him, when he was sailing for home:

"Before your regiment is mustered out, some commendation is due you for your services with it. Your work was particularly conspicuous throughout the trying days immediately following Col. Hackett's departure to the hospital. Although under constant shell fire, it was largely due to you that the control and administration of the regiment proceeded so ably and so smoothly that the headquarters was hardly conscious of any change in commanders. Again, after the armistice and consequent tendency to let down in morale, your cheerfulness and ability were strong factors in maintaining the discipline of the regiment.

Praise for Col. Hackett.

"From reports of your regimental commanders and from my personal observation, I am of the opinion that, with the exception of Col. Hackett, it is due to you more than any one man that the 124th Field Artillery maintained such a high standard of efficiency throughout its service in France, and I congratulate you upon returning to your family with a sense of duty well performed."

Capt. Lord kept the records of the regiment and said that eight of them had been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross. The regimental records, however, were packed up ready for the rush trip to Camp Mills and he could remember the names of only seven of the honor men. These were Perry Modrow and Milton Webb, both of East St. Louis; Lieut. Duffy, Sergeants Cassidy, Ammons and Wright, and Private William Fink. The first three, who are attached to the medical corps, were cited for extreme bravery in aiding wounded under fire, the others for carrying guns with the infantry.

On the America were: Fifty-eighth Field Artillery Brigade Headquarters, 7 officers and 62 men; 122d, 123d and 124th Field Artillery Regiments complete, 167 officers and 4446 men, and part of the 108th Sanitary Train, 21 officers and 535 men.

(Note: A condensed history of the 124th Artillery, written by Col. Horatio E. Hackett, who commanded it in France, and who is now a patient at the Army Hospital here, appears in today's Post-Dispatch on page 13 of Part 3. In the introduction to Col. Hackett's story it is stated that the regiment is due to arrive today in New York, this date having been the scheduled time announced by the War Department at the time that section went to press. The America slipped into New York yesterday, a day ahead of the schedule.)

EAST ST. LOUIS TO GIVE THE 124TH A GREAT WELCOME

East St. Louis is preparing a great reception and celebration for the 124th (East St. Louis) Field Artillery, which arrived in New York yesterday, and likely will reach East St. Louis June 5 or 6, according to a telegram yesterday from Congressman Rodenberg to J. N. Fining, general secretary of the Welcome Home Conference.

It was said at the Adjutant General's office that the regiment would probably be detained two days in New York and then sent to Camp Grant, Ill., for demobilization, where it would be mustered out in one day and allowed to go to East St. Louis for the reception.

Gov. Lowden advised A. T. Spivey, on receiving an invitation to deliver an address, that he would make every effort to be present. Congressman Rodenberg had asked for definite instructions concerning the celebration, so that he can arrange to attend.

Bruce A. Campbell, general chairman of the Welcome Home Conferences, emphasized the fact that the celebration is for all East St. Louis soldiers, sailors and marines. All returned East St. Louis boys are asked to take part in the parade and celebration. It is expected that soldiers, sailors and marines will get in touch with Col. L. G. Harney, grand marshal, or with Clark Nixon, or Joseph B. McGlynn, chairman of the American Army Association.

Col. Harney has begun making arrangements for the parade. There will be four divisions. One will comprise the 124th Field Artillery, another all other returned soldiers, sailors and marines, another the members of the Grand Army of the Republic, the Spanish War Veterans and army nurses, and the other returned negro soldiers, sailors and marines. The executive committee decided that none but strictly military organizations could march, except in the bands.

TWO KILLED IN FALL OF AIRPLANE

Craft Plunges Into Sandbar at Atlantic City.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 24.—Beryl Kendrick, an aviator of this city, and James Bew, a local real estate agent, were killed tonight when Kendrick's airplane plunged into a sandbar in the inlet at the upper part of the city.

138TH'S FIRST REUNION IS A BASKET PICNIC

About 150 in Uniform, Several Hundred in Civilian Garb Attend Gathering.

Several hundred members of the returned 138th Infantry and more hundreds of their relatives and admiring friends assembled for the regiment's first reunion at a basket picnic at Forest Park Highlands yesterday afternoon and evening. The rain ceased early and the sun came out just in time to make dinner from bulging baskets fully enjoyable under the open sky and to admit of the carnival spirit that prevailed as the evening wore on.

About 150 of the men and officers were in newly pressed uniforms and presented a natty appearance. Most of them, particularly those who have gone back to their jobs, went to the park from their places of employment, clad in civilian garb, and sat down to the good things of the picnic baskets.

The women and girls went to the park early and picked out their tables, mostly under the covered walk to avoid being surprised by expected showers. Most of the women, apparently the mothers, brought bright tablecovers to make the situation as cozy and inviting as possible, and many of them brought hot coffee and tea in patent bottles and others had tiny alcohol stoves and "canned heat" to warm the food.

All around sat family groups beaming on the boy in olive drab in their midst, while others of the regiment exchanged greetings as warmly as though they had not seen one another for years, instead of only two weeks ago.

At the entrance women of the auxiliaries of the different companies registered each man of the regiment as he passed through the stiles, while others, including a Salvation Army girl, distributed free tickets to the concessions, confections and cigarettes to all registrants.

The young people came into their own later in the evening, in the dance hall, where the crowd was increased by the regular Saturday night patrons of the park.

OVERSEAS MAN APPOINTED AS RECEIVER BY JUDGE DYER

D. G. Grossman, Who Served as Private, Put in Charge of Gum Concern's Affairs.

David G. Grossman, 1415 Hills Terrace, who served overseas 11 months as a private in the 314th Trench Mortar Battery and returned home a week ago, was yesterday appointed receiver by Judge Dyer for the Jacobs Gum Co., against which bankruptcy proceedings was instituted last Wednesday in the United States District Court.

Grossman was selected as receiver on recommendation of Horace L. Dyer and Chase Morsey, attorneys for all parties concerned in the suit, both of whom have offices in the Central National Bank Building, where Grossman was employed before he entered the service. His duties will be to take charge of and dispose of the assets of the bankrupt concern.

Y. M. H. A. Show for Men of 35th.

Men of the Thirty-fifth Division will be the guests of the Young Men's Hebrew Association at a vaudeville entertainment, "The Follies of 1919," this evening. The show will include drama, operatic selections and musical comedy and original stunts by members, more than 150 of whom will participate.

4500 OF 89TH'S ARTILLERY AND TRAINS RETURN

getting about, so when the division left Germany, to which country he had accompanied the men, he beat his way to Brest on military trains, following his beloved. He calmly watched them march aboard the Agamemnon and when night came slipped aboard and hid himself in the hold. When he was found two days later nobody was surprised. The men merely said: "Why, here's Leon. Hello, Leon! Going over with us"

Wears American Uniform.

The captain of the ship tried to explain to Leon what the various penalties for stowing away were, but they did not awe the youth. He has a wound stripe, won in the Argonne; he has seen all his folks killed, and penalties and punishments do not mean much to him. He wears the uniform of an American soldier, cut down and abridged by the nurses abroad, and the Red Cross man is very good to him. The lecture by the ship's man in a blue uniform was not a success.

Leon has a pal, First-Class Private James Hark. Private Hark has a pretty good farm near Gypsum, Kan., where his wife and two children live, and he is going to take Leon home with him and make him an American citizen if the immigration people will let the boy enter the country. Everybody on the ship was for Leon, and the immigration people are likely to let him enter the country.

Col. Wheeler said his regiment of artillery had been a remarkably well behaved outfit. Their yelling was the only thing they ever were accused of.

"I have never had a general court martial since I have been with the regiment," said Col. Wheeler. "It has never been necessary for me to reprove an officer for his actions. We have been very fortunate also in the welfare workers attached to us. I am sure that they increased the efficiency of the outfit 10 per cent. I can't see all this criticism of these various organizations at all. They were probably one per cent bad and 99 per cent good."

St. Louisans With Train.

The 314th ammunition train numbered 1300 men all told and among its officers are these St. Louisans: Capt. T. S. McPheeters, Capt. Lloyd Wells, Capt. Frank B. Manning, Capt. Theodore White, Lieut. James Sampson and Chaplain Lieut. W. J. Corboy, S. J.

"I'm mighty glad the war is over and we are all home again," cheerily said Capt. McPheeters to the Post-Dispatch correspondent on the pier. "But just the same I've got one sincere regret. I hate to leave these boys. They are as fine a lot of soldiers as one could meet anywhere in France and I like every one of them and will part with each of them with regret. We went through a lot together, and we came through in fine shape. We were extremely fortunate. We supported the 28th Division at St. Mihiel and then were tacked on with the 89th Division, our home boys, for the great drama of the century, the Argonne-Meuse battle. We plugged through that with them right up to the armistice, which found us at Bitburg, about 40 kilometers west of Treves. Our train lost only one man, and he died of pneumonia in a hospital at Bordeaux. We had a lot of horses killed and some men injured in the St. Mihiel advance, but none of the men was killed. That was in E Company. Most of the work was done by A, B, C and D Companies, which were motor companies. Our other three companies were equipped with horses and there wasn't much chance for horses to operate in the terrain over which the battle was fought."

The Agamemnon had more than 4500 men of the 89th Division on board—the 341st Field Artillery and 314th Ammunition Train, each complete; Companies K and M of the 356th Infantry, detachments including Batteries A and B of the 340th Field Artillery, and the 314th Sanitary Train and 314th Mobile Ordnance Repair Shop, each complete. The bulk of the Eighty-ninth troops were assigned to Camps Sherman, Grant, Funston, Dodge, Travis, Lee and Dix and Fort Presidio.

The Agamemnon brought altogether 5628 troops, including four officers and 120 men of Company C of the Twenty-fifth Engineers; two officers and 45 men of the 305th Mobile Ordnance Repair Shop, 17 officers of Headquarters of the Sixth Army Corps and 588 men recovering from wounds or illness, and 38 nurses.

Fifteen officers and 729 men comprising medical detachments and batteries C to F, inclusive of the 340th Field Artillery, returned on the America, which brought back many Illinois National Guardsmen this afternoon.

AUTO CLUB OFFICER IS ARRESTED FOR STEALING OWN CAR

"Too Much Police Efficiency," Robert E. Lee Writes to Chief, After 6-Block Chase.

Robert E. Lee, secretary of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association and secretary of the Sales Managers' Bureau, Chamber of Commerce, believes that being arrested for stealing his own automobile is a demonstration of too much police efficiency. He has addressed the following letter to Chief O'Brien:

"Col. Martin O'Brien, Chief of Police.—Dear Sir: I want to enter a complaint about too much efficiency in the Police Department. Tuesday evening, May 13, my car was stolen from in front of the City Club, while the Chief of Police was making a speech to my automobile friends about 'automobile stealing.' Early Thursday morning the police of the Second District recovered the car and returned it to me Thursday afternoon. The thief had taken three tires from it.

"Thursday evening, much pleased with having recovered my car, I started out for a drive downtown, and at Sixth street and Washington avenue a service car, which had chased me from Twelfth street, cut across my 'bows' and halted me. A police officer, Alfred E. Schliefstein of the Central District, jumped out of it and placed me under arrest for stealing my own car. He had recognized the license number as I passed him, commandeered the service car and caught me just in time, as he thought, to prevent my getting across Eads Bridge with the stolen car.

"Will you please tell the entire Police Department of St. Louis that I have recovered the stolen car with license No. 7500 on it. I am afraid to drive on the streets until you do this.

"There is entirely too much efficiency in the Police Department. Yours very truly,

"R. E. LEE."

Chief O'Brien has sent out a general order to permit Lee to drive the streets in peace.

Fishing Licenses Ready.

Fishing license certificates have been received in St. Louis by License Collector Chapman and are ready for issuance to fishermen. Under a new State law no license is required to fish in a county where one lives. Licenses are required, however, where the sportsmen journey elsewhere. The penalty for fishing without a license is a fine of from $25 to $100.

HITCHCOCK TO BE WITH TAFT

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, ranking Democrat of the Foreign Relations Committee, one of the chief supporters of President Wilson's fight for ratification of the peace treaty, has accepted an invitation to accompany former President Taft on a three-day speaking trip next week in the Middle West. They will make addresses at Springfield, Ill., on Thursday, at Kansas City, Mo., on Friday, and at Omaha on Saturday, in each case at a State convention of Peace League societies.

Taft is understood to have expressed an earnest desire to confer on plans for the ratification fight.

GRUMMERS ELECT OFFICERS

Association Will Meet Next Year in Sikeston.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo., May 24.—The twenty-third annual meting of the Southeast Missouri Drummers' Association closed today with the election of officers. The convention next year will be at Sikeston. Kennett Gillespie of St. Louis was chosen president and other officers elected are: W. Ross Harris, vice president; Jules Hartmann, secretary; William Easterly, treasurer; A. A. P. Farrell, H. A. Putnam and I. T. Vierheller, members of the Executive Committee to serve one month and assist the new officers in perfecting their work.

George P. Weber, the retiring president, called upon the members of the association to do their share in the work of the world's reorganization. A resolution offering the support of the association to the State Hotel Inspection Department was adopted.

PROHIBITION AND SUFFRAGE BEHIND IN TEXAS RETURNS

Cities Vote Wet and Against Women—Drys Gain in Dallas, Lose in San Antonio.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., May 24.—The fates of both the prohibition and the woman's suffrage amendment to the State Constitution were in doubt early tonight when reports from two score scattering cities in the State had been counted. The vote then stood: For prohibition, 15,530; against prohibition, 17,768; for suffrage, 16,514; against suffrage, 15,730.

This count included many of the larger cities, some of which had been counted on to vote against prohibition and suffrage. The country and the smaller towns voted dry and for the women, and the earlier returns piled up substantial leads for both amendments.

The first set back for the drys came when San Antonio reported 42 precincts out of 93 as giving 1555 votes for prohibition and 5845 against, and 2654 for suffrage and 4893 against. Galveston added to the wet advantage when 27 to 31 precincts in the county gave prohibition 1367 votes to 3017 against, and 1542 for suffrage to 2965 against. The drys gained in Dallas and so did the suffragists, the vote being: For prohibition, 4003; against, 2935; for suffrage, 4258; against, 2885.

Cleburne, Texarkana, Paris, Beaumont, Austin, Navasota, San Angelo, Waxahachie, Denton, Longview, Mineral Wells, Palestine and other of the smaller cities voted strongly dry. Brownsville voted wet but was outvoted by Cameron County.

It was estimated that amendments to raise the Governor's salary from $4000 to $10,000, and to provide means to extend the State's credit to homeseekers, had been lost.

EL PASO, Tex., May 24.—In the city of El Paso the state-wide prohibition amendment was defeated, the vote being: Against prohibition, 1932; for, 1045. The woman suffrage amendment carried, the vote being 1699 for and 1224 against.

60 Representatives of Financial Institutions in 15 Leading Cities to Meet on Memorial Day.

MOVE TO PREPARE FOR FOREIGN TRADE

Start Made by St. Louisans May Be Utilized as the Nucleus of a Much Larger Capitalization.

About 60 bankers from 15 leading cities of the Mississippi Valley, from Minneapolis to New Orleans, will gather in St. Louis on Memorial day to hold an executive session on the proposal to organize for the Mississippi Valley a discount bank that will provide one of the essentials of the entry of the valley into competitive foreign trade.

The visitors will be entertained at dinner at the Log Cabin Club in St. Louis County by St. Louis bankers. The invitations were extended by the St. Louis County Clearing House Association at the request of the Bankers' Committee of the Mississippi Valley Association, which is the new organization launched at Chicago last month with a goal of cementing the valley in efforts at dislodging New York as a toll-taker on all foreign exports of the valley.

Chicago to Send Delegates.

The invitations requested the clearing houses of the 15 cities to name two bankers each to represent them. Chicago will send a larger delegation, headed by H. H. Merrick, president of the Mississippi Valley Association, and John J. Arnold, vice president in charge of the foreign department of the First National Bank of Chicago. The remainder of the 60 bankers will be St. Louisans.

Without a discount bank, having branches or correspondents in foreign countries to which valley products naturally would go, the valley, it is declared, will be helpless in its endeavor to capture foreign fields for marketing its surplus. As is known, a discount bank is the vehicle which permits long credits, which the valley must necessarily extend if it is to meet the trade terms of European countries in South and Central America and the Orient.

If the conference in St. Louis develops a willingness in the assembled bankers to ally themselves in a discount bank, then a further, larger gathering will be called to include representatives of smaller cities in the valley, also, at which time the actual organization of the bank will be accomplished.

St. Louis bankers already have built the groundwork of a St. Louis discount bank, to be capitalized at $3,300,000. The banks' allotment of $1,600,000 has been subscribed. The remainder of the capital stock was set aside for industries of the city. It is understood that about $950,000 of this amount has been taken.

St. Louis Bank May Be Nucleus.

It is not unlikely that during Friday's conference St. Louis bankers will propose that the St. Louis bank, being virtually organized, be made the nucleus of the valley bank, which then would become a formidable institution. It is understood that if the valley bankers do not desire to unite with the St. Louis bank, but desire another organization, that the St. Louis project will be carried forward anyway.

The organization of the discount bank is part of the "Valley Forward" movement of the Mississippi Valley Association, which plans the establishment of export and import houses and the improvement of the Mississippi and tributary rivers for shipping as a means of diverting the present east and west movement of freight through the port of New York, to a north and south movement through the cheaper and more natural port of New Orleans.

16 CONTEMPT CITATIONS AFTER INJUNCTION AGAINST PICKETING

Jewel Tea Co. Obtains Orders Striking Drivers Said to Follow Wagons in Autos.

Attorneys for the Jewel Tea Co., drivers for which have been on strike since May 5, yesterday obtained contempt citations from Federal Judge Dyer for 16 men who, it was alleged, have violated a temporary injunction issued by Judge Dyer restraining them from picketing and interfering with the business of the company.

It was set out in the petition for the citation that strikers have stationed automobiles near the company's stores and warehouses, have followed wagons and attempted to induce drivers to quit work.

Those cited to appear May 31 to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt are J. W. Dean, E. C. Rodemeyer, John Stewart, C. Worthan, O. Schroer, S. W. Martin, C. P. Miller, G. C. Lanier, A. H. Leslie, H. L. Hoffman, Fred Huber, E. Eddens, E. S. Bueckmann, W. R. Collins, D. J. Murphy, business agent of the Department Stores Drivers Union, and Harry Norman, secretary and business agent of Ice Wagon Drivers' Union.

MUNICIPAL OPERA PRINCIPALS ANNOUNCED

Charles Galagher, Blanche Duffield, Craig Campbell, Frank Moulan Among Those Engaged.

Mayor Kiel, president of the Municipal Theatre Association, received a telegram yesterday from the Executive Productions' Committee advising him of the principals engaged for the six weeks' season of Municipal opera at the Municipal Open Air Theatre, Forest Park, June 16 to July 26, inclusive.

Charles Gallagher, who was recently heard in St. Louis as the basso of the Scotti Opera Company, will be the basso for the season.

The other singers are Blanche Duffield, prima donna; Craig Campbell, tenor; Carl Gantvoor, baritone; Frank Moulan, comedian; William Danforth, comedian; Mildred Rogers, contralto; Caroline Andrews, ingenue; John McGhie, musical director; Charles Jones, stage director; Ralph Nicholls, assistant stage director.

Opera Repertoire.

The repertory for the six weeks' season of opera is announced as follows:

Week of June 16, "Robin Hood;" comic opera in three acts; libretto by Harry B. Smith, music by Reginald de Koven.

Week of June 23, "Bohemian Girl;" ballad opera in three acts; text by Alfred Bunn, music by Michael William Balfe.

Week of June 30, "El Capitan;" comic opera in three acts; words by Charles Klein, music by John Philip Sousa.

"Week of July 7, "Fra Diavolo;" comic opera in three acts; libretto by Scribe, music by Daniel Francois Auber.

Week of July 14, "Mikado;" comic opera in two acts; text by W. S. Gilbert, music by Sir Arthur Sullivan.

Week of July 21, "Carmen;" grand opera in four acts; libretto by Meilhac and Halvey, after novel by Prosper Merimee; music by Georges Bizet.

A St. Louis chorus of 140 voices is holding nightly rehearsals at 3535 Pine street, under Frederick Fischer, orchestra manager of the Symphony Orchestra and director of the Pageant Choral Society. The ballett are being trained by Olga Bates and Alice Martin.

The sale of box office seats will continue from June 2 to 9 at 1007 Olive street, and the single seat sale will begin June 9. Prices will be from 25 cents to $1. The mail order season ticket sale will open tomorrow.

IRVING SCHOOL STUDENTS HOLD THEIR FIRST 'CORPORATION' SALE

Body Organized in Profit-Sharing Plan Does Business Like a "Regular Store."

The first sale of the "Irving Mercantile Corporation," composed of students of the Irving School, was held Friday afternoon in the classrooms of the school. The corporation was organized by the students under the teachers, by the election of a board of directors who issued stock to the extent of $300,000. A system of coinage was adopted whereby the pupils' grades in class work entitled them to a proportional amount of "Irving" currency.

After several lectures on banking, a student bank was organized, modeled on regular banking lines, passbooks and check books were issued and the students deposited their class-room earnings. Stock in the corporation was sold to the pupils at $100, Irving money, per share.

With the funds of the corporation a department store was formed, which in addition to 15 departments, has a system of credits and advertising. The students are employed in the store, which is managed on the profit-sharing plan.

The sale Friday was carried out in truly businesslike fashion. There was a wide range of stock, loaned by various concerns, and the sales force was kept busy writing checks. Of course, none of the customers took their purchases with them, but that did not detract from the very mercantile atmosphere of the occasion.

The corporation's board of directors is Frances O'Rourke, Henry Dotson, Robert Samel, Fred Stansel, James McMahon, Albert Prosser, Roma Schaefer, Fred Schmidt, and Carl Brockman.

ROCKEFELLER GIVES $2,000,000 TO BAPTISTS

Mission Contribution Contingent on Completion of Fund—Organic Union Rejected.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., May 24.—Rejection of proposals for an organic union of evangelical churches, acceptance of the inter-church world movement and the gift of $2,000,000 by John D. Rockefeller for mission work, were the outstanding features of today's session of the Northern Baptist convention.

The Rockefeller gift, contingent upon the completion of the $6,000,000 church fund, was said to be the largest individual gift ever made to missionary work in any denomination. Five million five hundred thousand dollars of the sum already has been raised and President F. W. Ayer of Philadelphia told the convention he was confident the sum would be raised and the $2,000,000 obtained, one-half for the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society of Boston and the other half for the American Baptist Home Mission Society of New York.

The Rockefeller gift was in addition to $750,000 already contributed toward the $6,000,000 fund.

Acceptance of the interchurch world movement, a proposal for merger of financial interests of various denominations for a campaign of money raising similar to the united war work campaign conducted by army welfare organizations, came somewhat as a surprise, as considerable opposition had developed previous to the convention. When the vote was taken the opposition had dwindled to a comparative few, due to reservation in the acceptance providing that the interchurch federation should never attempt to effect an organic union of churches and other provisions preserving the independence and traditions of the Baptist Church.

This move was made by the Executive Committee of the convention, which substituted its own statement for recommendations of the laymen's committee in order to meet the arguments of those opposing the federation. The Southern Baptist convention already had rejected the proposal and the Presbyterian Church at St. Louis accepted the federation plan only after making reservations along a similar line.

The resolution declaring against organic union of the Evangelical churches of the country was presented to the convention by Dr. Shailor Matthews, dean of the University of Chicago divinity school. It declared that Baptist traditions and principles precluded any organic union with other denominations. The Baptist church is a democratic body, unaffiliated with any other body and looking to no higher earthly authority than its own membership, the resolution stated. It expressed the sentiment of the convention in refusing to send any delegates to the proposed conference on organic union as suggested by the Presbyterian church.

SERGT. LUYTIES, 19, IS HOME

Operated Machine Gun in Tank and Made 18 Flights as Signalman.

Sergt. Herman C. G. Luyties, 19 years old, of 36 Portland place, has returned home from France, where he served in the First Tank Corps Brigade, and in the Argonne battle operated a machine gun in a French light tank in advance of the Seventy-seventh (New York) Division.

Sergt. Luyties is a son of Herman C. G. Luyties, president of the Sanitol Chemical and Laboratory Co. He gave up an appointment to West Point to enlist in September, 1917, in the aviation service as a signalman. He made 18 flights as a radio operator, and then transferred in May, 1918, to the Tank Corps at Gettysburg, Pa. Soon afterward he was in France.

He was slightly wounded and said he "got a taste of gas."

WOMAN FATALLY HURT IN UNUSUAL ACCIDENT

Hit by Car Trailer Diverted From 18th to Pine Street Track by Belated Switch Action.

Mrs. Mamie Sipple, 32 years old, of 3226 Miami street, was fatally injured in an unusual street car accident at Eighteenth and Pine streets at 8 a. m. yesterday, which apparently resulted from the unusual throwing of an automatic switch. She died an hour later at the city hospital.

Mrs. Sipple, a widow, was standing on the east side of Eighteenth street, waiting for a northbound Park car and trailer to pass, so she could continue on her way to Nineteenth and Pine streets, where she was employed at an overall factory.

The car and the front trucks of the trailer passed, then the switch was thrown, and the rear trucks of the trailer ran onto the tracks that turn east into Pine street. The end of the trailer swung around the curve, crushing Mrs. Sipple, who was directly within its sweep.

Car and trailer were well filled with passengers, and many of those in the trailer were thrown from their seats by the violent lurch, some women passengers being badly frightened, although none suffered severe injury.

Mrs. Sipple's back was broken, she suffered internal injuries, and never regained consciousness. She was taken to the hospital in a passing automobile. Her brother, Edward Rericha, arrived a few minutes before she died.

H. C. French was motorman of the car, and E. H. Doty was conductor of the trailer.

EMINENT BRITONS SIGN APPEAL FOR MILDER TERMS

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Friday, May 23.—An appeal signed by a number of eminent professors and others, including the Bishop of Oxford, Arthur Henderson, leader of the Labor party in the House of Commons, and H. G. Wells, John Masefield, Lady Gilbert, George G. A. Murray and Jerome K. Jerome, authors, has been published here, urging the reconsideration of the terms of peace on the ground that they belie the spirit of the 14 points of President Wilson.

The appeal declares that the terms constitute a breach of faith with a beaten enemy and reduce Germany to the position of a subject nation. It concludes with a statement that on such a basis "it is impossible to establish any true league of nations."

SUITS THREATENED AGAINST 14,000 DELINQUENT ON TAXES

Amounts Due City Range From $3 to $12 a Person and Total About $125,000, Collector Says.

Notices that suits will probably be filed against them unless their personal taxes for 1917 and 1918 are paid are being mailed to 14,000 persons who are delinquent in their payments by Collector Koeln. The bills range from $3 to $12 in amount and the total amount involved is about $125,000.

The action was taken because of the shortage of municipal funds, Koeln said, as it is customary to wait until a taxpayer is delinquent for three years before filing suit.

BOZ CLUB TO GIVE BANQUET

12 Men Who Saw Overseas Service to Be Guests of Honor.

The Boz Club of St. Louis, a social, literary, athletic and fraternal organization, will hold a banquet at the American Hotel tomorrow evening, in honor of 12 men who saw overseas service: Godwin Bell, Malcolm Travis, Donald Knight, Joseph Tapscott, John Harrison, Walter Lindsay, Everitt Patterson and Charles Tebbetts, all of the 138th Regiment; Nobel Hemke, Balloon Corps; Charles Ricketts, Twelfth Engineers; J. M. Coleman, 161st Infantry, and John R. Maxwell Jr., 332d Battalion Tank Corps.

The speakers will be George L. Schaberg, Malcolm Travis, Godwin Bell, Davison Obear, Ray E. White and others just returned from service.

Y. M. C. A. SUMMER CAMP PLANS

The third season of Camp River Cliff, the sumer camp of the Young Men's Christian Association, will commence on June 14. The camp is situated among the high Ozark hills at the junction of the Meramec River with the Blue Spring Creek, and offers every form of outdoor recreation, and is but a three-hour ride from St. Louis on the Frisco.

The camp will be open for 10 weeks, and any boy over 12 years is welcome. Everything is managed on a cost basis. As the enrollment will be limited to 80 boys at one time, the applications should be mailed early to J. A. Wolf, 1873 Railway Exchange Building.

2000 SEE GIRLS OF CENTRAL HIGH IN GREEK GAMES

Many-Colored Scenes Produced in Animated Pageant in Municipal Theater in Forest Park.

While more than 2000 persons looked on, girl students of Central High School gave a program of Greek games in the Municipal Theater in Forest Park yesterday afternoon that should have caused the gods on Olympus to wag their beards in high approval.

The program was a pageant of colors, ranging from the cloud-pink of dawn to the misty violet-gray of twilight, enlivened by the poetic rythm of flashing limbs, fresh with the ruddy glow of health, and impelled by the elasticity of youth.

Some may have found fault with the technique, but the dancers had a spontaneity of action and a vigor of movement that more polished exponents of the classic dance may well have envied. That was how the audience felt about it, too.

The leaves were green over the stage and robins, undismayed by the formidable invasion of their precincts, hopped animatedly about the grass around the theater to emphasize that nature was doing all it could to make the stage such an Arcadian grove as the plot of the games called for.

Dance of the Clouds.

First came the Hours to open the gates of heaven, through which Aurora led her bevy of rose-hued Clouds. The fragrant freshness of such a dawn as makes diamonds of the dew on the grass, and wakes the forest singers into musical appreciation, was symbolized by the dance of the Clouds, before they retired with their sheperdess, Aurora, into a bower of branches.

With the advance of day came a veritable shower of little Sunbeams, who danced with the joyousness of morning until Aphrodite, Queen of Love and Beauty, was escorted into the grove by a company of white-garbed pages, who clustered around as she took her seat on a throne surrounded by high white columns, the tops of which were lost among the branches.

Then entered Atalanta and her fleet-footed friends, who ran and skipped merrily as they tossed golden balls into the air, in a sort of glorified game of "catch."

Camilla, leading a band of archers in the forest green of Robin Hood, was the next visitor to the grove, and the archers engaged in a dance before setting up their targets for a contest.

Photographer In Danger.

The sturdy figures set themselves and let fly with swarm after swarm of shafts, that glistened white in the afternoon sun. Their aim might have been better—In fact, if Camilla's jolly foresters had been dependent on their bows for fresh venison, they probably would have needs taken to a vegetable diet, but spectators had been carefully warned away from that side of the stage, and the only danger experienced was by a rash newspaper photographer, who hastily betook himself and his camera to safety behind a tree.

The torch dance which followed was essentially a night performance, and wild music and the streaming hair of the dancers could not overcome the garish daylight which took from the performance the dramatic quality which it would have possessed under different conditions.

The best action poses were those of the hurdle race, which, with its course of six three-foot hurdles, was no mean test of physical endurance. As the hurdlers took the obstacles in long, graceful leaps, with their flimsy draperies streaming behind, the audience cheered enthusiastically.

Too Much Daylight.

A finished harmony of motion was pleasantly plain in the chariot dance and the chariot race which followed, a particularly impressive feature being the proud prancing of the "horses."

The need of darkness was again felt in the last and most pretentious of the dances—a twilight symphony. It was quite impossible for the violet-gray of the costumes and the fragile figures of the dance to obtain the subtle effect which a soft moonlight would have imparted, but the audience generously took that into consideration, too.

Twilight (according to the story) descends, the Hours once more swing wide the portals, and Aurora glides out. The grove is left in silence, according to the plot, but in fact, it suddenly became the scene of noisy congratulations, proud parental comment, and the squealing of the dancers, again school girls, and eager to get to the dressing rooms to prepare for home and supper.

15 CASES OF SHOES FOUND NEAR WHERE TRUCK IS STALLED

Men Trying to Get Auto Out of Ditch, Arrested, Say They Know Nothing of Merchandise.

The Dayton Street Police Station yesterday morning received an anonymous telephone report that an automobile truck loaded with merchandise was stalled on the Bellefontaine road, about two miles north of the city limits.

Upon investigation policemen found the truck at the point designated, but it was empty. Two men, Frank Carter, 2921 Easton avenue, a chauffeur, and his employer, Arthur Morgan, 2931 Easton avenue, an expressman, were trying to get the truck out of a ditch. They said they had been hired by two men to go to Spanish Lake for a load of merchandise.

A short distance away policemen found 15 cases of shoes, marked for shipment from St. Louis to a town in Oklahoma, believed to have been stolen from a Burlington freight car on the tracks which pass near that point. While pursuing their search the officers saw three men hurrying along the railroad track, who turned and exchanged revolver shots with Patrolman Girard. They escaped.

Carter and Morgan were arrested and turned over to Sheriff Bopp of Clayton, who also took charge of the truck and the shoes. They deny any knowledge of the shoes, asserting the truck was stalled while passing that point.

ANHEUSER-BUSCH AWAITS LEGAL ADVICE BEFORE STARTING AGAIN

August A. Busch, head of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association, said last night that no decision had been reached by his company to resume the manufacture of 2¾ per cent beer, action by the board of directors having been deferred until an opinion can be had by the association's counsel.

Following a meeting of the executive committee of the brewing association yesterday, a call was made on counsel, when an offhand opinion was given to the effect that the recent New York decision in relation to intoxicants was not applicable in this district. Busch said, however, that counsel would look thoroughly into the matter and a decision would be given the directorate by May 27.

Manufacture has been resumed by the Independent Breweries Co., an organization controlling five St. Louis breweries. C. Norman Jones, manager of the St. Louis Brewing Association, said the five breweries operated by his company would resume manufacture immediately. Henry Vahlkamp, vice president of the Lemp Brewing Co., said his concern would not resume immediately, but would wait to see if the wartime prohibition act is repealed by Congress.

Foster's Three-Base Throw Was Not Nearly So Wild as Manager Griffith.

Pass to Weilman in Ninth Forces Home Run That Wins Third Straight for Browns

Harper, After Holding Burkeviki to Three Hits and No Runs, Weakens in Final Round—Four Bases on Balls and a Safe Bunt Net Locals 2—1 Victory.

AFTER outpitching Carl Weilman completely, Harry Harper, the National's southpaw, wound up his day's efforts by forcing in the run that beat him, yesterday, 2—1, the Burkemen's third successive victory over Washington. Harper "Walked" Weilman, his rival moundman, in forcing home the tally that gave the Browns their second objective—a .500 percentage for the campaign.

Harper, up to the final frame had pitched sensational ball. He had control and also was unhittable, only three safeties being made off his delivery. In all the Browns made four, three of them of the infield variety. Against this Weilman was punched for nine; but only once were the men of Griffith able to pierce the Browns' defense.

However, the real "knockout" that won for the home club came in the ninth and Harper brought about his own undoing, after a three-base wild throw by Eddie Foster had enabled the Burkeviki to tie.

The Browns' winning rally in this frame (providing you care to call it one) consisted of four bases on balls (one intentional), an infield hit and a three-ply wild throw.

The score was 1—0 in favor of the Senators, starting the last half of the ninth. Tobin first up drew a pass. Sisler beat out a bunt and Tobin tallied, while Sisler went to third when Foster threw to the right field pavilion. Jacobson was purposely passed, and Bronkie, hitting for Sloan, popped out. On an attempted squeeze play, Gerber bunted and Sisler was nipped at the plate.

Bases Filled, Weilman Up!

And then came the procession, which sent the 7500 fans present home in a fine frame of mind. Mayer, who had replaced Billings, drew four wide ones and the pillows were packed.

Here everyone figured that Burke would send in a pinch-hitter for Weilman. However, Burke crossed them by letting Weilman take his place at the plate. The first pitch was over and Weilman cracked a foul to the right field pavilion. Then Harper lost control and sent over four wide ones. Result—Jacobson crossed with the winning run, while Weilman trotted to first.

It was a great ending for the Browns, but rough on Clark Griffith, manager of the Nationals or Harper. Harper hung his head while going to the club house and he had reason to. Passing a pitcher with the bases full to force in the winning tally is a near-capital "crime," in the national pastime.

Harper Very Effective.

Omitting the ninth round, the Browns were easy picking for Harper. The hits off him were few and far between. Tobin singled through Judge, in the first. Starting the fifth, Gerber got the only real hit off the southpaw, a single to left. Severeid's hit in the eighth was knocked down by Foster, but the third-sacker could not get it to first in time. Before the ninth he had walked only two batters and had hit another.

Carl Weilman, the southpaw, while he won, did not pitch as good a game as he has on several other occasions since his "comeback." He was wilder than usual passing four batters. Great fielding also saved him from being scored upon several times.

Weilman Has Close Call.

He had a lucky escape in the fourth, when with one out, Judge singled. He was caught stealing and it was a lucky thing, as Rice followed with a safety. Then Gharrity sent a pop to right, which went for a hit, when Sloan and Gedeon collided. However, Rice, trying to score from first, was out; Sloan to Gerber to Billings.

A great stop by Jimmy Austin off Walter Johnson, who played center field for Grifith, saved a run in the sixth. With Rice on second and Gharrity on first, Johnson hit what looked like a sure single down the left field line. However, Austin knocked down the sphere and scrambled on hands and knees to touch third ahead of Rice.

No Score Until the Eighth.

However, in the eighth, the Nationals finally succeeded in counting. Shanks primed open the session with a single and was sacrificed to second by Foster. Judge coaxed a pass and Rice's third hit of the day scored Shanks. Garrhity and Johnson, however, went out on easy flies and the threatened rally was cut short.

Browns Win Eight Out of Nine.

As a result of yesterday's victory, the Browns now have captured eight of their last nine games played, all but one of them coming against the Eastern invaders on the home lot. In this stretch, the Browns' pitchers have permitted only 10 runs, while the men of Burke have tallied 33 times. Of the eight verdicts six of them have been captured by a margin of one run.

Tuero's Peculiar Record.

Despite the fact that he is credited with one victory and no defeats, Oscar Tuero, the Cuban righthander of the Cardinals, has taken part in 10 games, but has hurled only 19 innings. Bill Sherdel has also been in 10 box scores, in which he has worked 32 frames. He has lost five and has yet to gain a verdict.

Sothoron or Davenport to Face Yankees in Series Opener Today

With a new winning streak of three in a row, the Browns today will oppose Miller Huggins and his third-place Yankees in the first of a three-game series, starting at 3 o'clock. Allan Sothoron, who has only recently recovered from an injured hand, or Dave Davenport will hurl for the Browns. Southpaw George Mogridge is due for Huggins.

The heavy hitters of the Yankees have fallen down to date, and Huggins has only two .300 hitters, Peckinpaugh .333 and Bodie .320. The other regulars are hitting as follows: Vick .171, Pipp .257, Baker .221, Pratt .239, Lewis .250 and Ruel, the St. Louis boy, who is catching all the games, .203.

Among the flingers, Southpaw Thormahlen is the leader with four straight victories, having yielded five runs in 39 1-3 innings. Quinn and Shawkey also have done well, while Mogridge and Russell have been used several times. Ernie Shore has started only one contest.

Jacobson Stars in Field.

Bill Jacobson made one of the prettiest catches in yesterday's game when he went far over to left field for a fly from Gharrity in the second. Tobin was playing close to the foul line and had no chance to grab the sphere.

Lucky Hit for Janvrin.

Harold Janvrin got a lucky single in the fifth, when in trying to dodge one of Weilman's pitches his bat collided with the ball and it went over second for a hit.

Gerber Plays Nice Game.

Walter Gerber gave another nice exhibition at short. His stop and throw off Harper in the seventh was his feature fielding hit. He raced behind Weilman and scooped up a grounder with one hand and caught his man at first by a step.

Outfielders Very Busy.

The National outfielders had a busy time of it behind Harper. Walter Johnson who played center had five putouts, Sam Rice in right four and Gharrity caught one fly. For the Browns Tobin had three, Jacobson four and Sloan one.

Austin Fails to Connect.

The Browns threatened in the eighth, when the first two men to face Harper got on base, but Austin's failure to lay down a sacrifice hurt. It was the first time in many days that the third sacker failed to come through with a bunt.

Jacobson Goes Hitless.

Bill Jacobson, who has been driving in most of the runs for Burke's clan lately, failed to get a safety. His first time up he drove to Rice. Then he tapped to Harper, while in the seventh he sent a mighty fly to Johnson. Harper passed him purposely in the ninth.

Severeid Comes Through.

Hank Severeid finally was rewarded with a hit as a pinch-hitter yesterday, when Foster could not field his bounder in time to get the catcher at first.

Owner Ball All Smiles.

Owned Phil Ball saw his team win yesterday and was all smiles He remarked that Foster's throw was about the wildest wild throw he had seen in many a day."

GRINNELL LANDS IOWA STATE TRACK HONORS

DES MOINES, Ia., May 24.—Grinnell College won first place in the intercollegiate section of the annual Iowa state track meet held at the Drake University stadium today with 48 points, and North High, Des Moines, was victor in the high school section, scoring 19 points.

Despite perfect weather conditions, fast time was made in only a few events. Browning of Cornell set a new mile mark by running the distance in 4m. 30 2-5s., the old record being 4m. 32 3-5s. Grinnell tied the mile relay record of 3m. 26 1-5s.

M. A. A. GAMES STOPPED.

Friday night's rains put the baseball diamonds in the various local parks in such shape as to necessitate the postponement of yesterday's scheduled Municipal A. A. games. The games will be played later in the season as parts of doubleheaders.

Jim Park with Columbus has won two and lost a like number.

Cardinals Defeat Giants, But Drop to Eighth Place

Cuban Tuero Stops League Leaders With Three Hits and Wins by 6—2 Score.

THREE HURLERS MAULED

Barnes, Schupp and Perritt Are Found for 14 Safeties by Rickey's Crew.

NEW YORK, May 24.—Treating three Giant pitchers with as much contempt as they had for Rube Benton yesterday the Cardinals handed the league leaders a 6 to 2 beating today. Despite the victory Rickey's men dropped to last place, as Boston with fewer games played also won.

St. Louis played masterful ball behind great pitching by Oscar Tuero to which no adjective is so applicable as invincible. The small Cuban allowed McGraw's men but three scattered hits and deserved a shut out. Two of his three passes resulted in the New York tallies. In one instance a wild pitch and a hit followed a pass. Later, bobbles by Hornsby and Stock came in the wake of a walk and gave New York its second run.

Gene Paulette's hitting accounted for three of the St. Louis runs and Bert Shotton's was only slightly less sensational. Clemons' home run with Heathcote on base in the second inning was one of the longest hits of the year at the Polo Grounds. The Cardinals hits totalled 14, for a total of 20 bases, making their total hits for the two games against New York an even 30.

Clemons Hits Home Run.

Jack Smith disputed Umpire Harrison on a close play at first in the opening inning and was banished, Schultz taking his place.

St. Louis took an early lead and never lost it. Heathcote opened the second with a sharp single to right and Miller sacrificed. Clemons drove deep into the left field bleachers and chased Heathcotte around the bases.

With Stock gone in the third, Hornsby laid a hit in left and after Paulette popped to Zim, stole second. Heathcote turned a low liner into left, but Burns, racing in, picked it off the grass. Chase's triple to left center with one down in the fourth, was the first hit off Tuero. The Cuban promptly forced Doyle to foul to Clemons and Kauff to pop to Miller.

Tuero walked Barnes, first up in the sixth, and wild pitched him to second. The New York pitcher went to third while Hornsby was throwing out Burns and Young singled him hime.

Extra Base Hits Count.

After Tuero fanned in the seventh, Shotton's third hit crashed into the right field wall for a triple. Schultz doubled off the left field fence, scoring Shotton. Stock's infield out put Schultz on third and he scored when Hornsby beat out a high bounder to Doyle. Hornsby stole second and scored on Paulette's double to right.

In the Giants' half of the eighth, McCarty walked and Kling ran for him. Gonzales, sent up for Schupp, forced King but reached second when Hornsby threw past Paulette trying for two. After Burns struck out, Gonzales scored when Stock threw wild on Young's tap, Young taking second. Chase rolled to Hornsby for the third out.

Perritt and Gonzales formed the New York battery in the ninth. Stock singled to right, was sacrificed along by Hornsby and scored when Paulette pounded a hit through Zim.

Threatening weather held the attendance to 15,000 and the last out was made as a heavy rainstorm broke over the ball park.

AND furthermore, in days of yore
When men wore metal britches
To make repairs in sundry tears
They took some wire stitches.

Or, when, alas! it came to pass
The seat was getting thinner,
Or were they bent we straightway sent
Them to the village tinner.

We look askance at metal pants
With their cast iron patches:
But still I ween they must have been
O K for scratching matches.

Tin pantaloons may not be boons
In this our age enlightened;
But they would not reveal a spot
When with Swiss Kleanzer brightened.

And when our kids went down the skids
In summer or winter;
When thus arrayed they'd make the grade
And not pick up a splinter.

BRAVES DEFEAT CINCY, CELEBRATING GOWDY DAY

BOSTON, May 24.—Boston cerebrated Gowdy day by defeating Cincinnati, 4 to 1, today. Timely hitting in the first two innings accounted for Boston's runs. Former Sergt. "Hank" Gowdy, who had been greeted with cheers and given presents, hit the first ball pitched in the second inning to right field for a single. Handicap of Two Strokes Enables Morrison to Tie

As Result He and Lord Will Replay Semi-Finals Match in Algonquin Tourney.

BALLARD LOW MEDALIST

Turns in Card of 83 in Qualifying Round of Event at Bellerive Club.

A two-stroke handicap in the semifinal round match of the Algonquin Golf Club spring championship was enough to give John W. Morrison another chance against Roger E. Lord. When Lord and Morrison reached the home hole, Lord was 2 up on his opponent. However the plan of play allows that the handicap strokes be placed wherever they do the owner the most good.

Morrison applied one stroke on No. 2 and the other on No. 16. This squared the match, and as a result another 18 holes will be played this afternoon.

The other semi-final round match was not played. In this match Clarence Wolff gives a stroke handicap to his opponent, W. C. Brown.

A. F. Stockton gained the Class B. championship by defeating A. A. championship by defeating A. A. Nall, 4 up. The winner had a five-stroke handicap. Finals in Class C will be played today between P. W. Willucki and J. P. Wadham. The contestants play at scratch.

Ballard Low Medalist.

Over 90 members of the Bellerive Country Club competed in the qualifying round of the annual club championship yesterday. Low medalist for the day was J. O. Ballard who turned in a card of 83.

Three players tied for second honors, each turning in an 87. They were A. Whittemore, E. Shapleigh and C. W. Condie. The 16 low cards qualified for the championship class, while the same number were placed in each of three lower classes.

Today's golfing attractions provide for the qualifying round of the Westwood championship tournament, and the second half of the Forest Park Golf Club 72-hole medal competition. The results of this play will represent the municipal team in the Brock play at the Trans Mississippi tournament.

Central Wins Out From Yeatman, in Ten-Inning Game

Victory 9—8 Assures Mid-City Nine of at Least a Tie in Title Race.

SOLDAN WINS ANOTHER

West End Aggregation Shuts Out Cleveland in Seven Rounds.

A 10-inning victory over Yeatman High, yesterday afternoon, assured Central of at least a tie for the local High School League baseball championship. The mid-city players have but two remaining games and one win will clinch the scholastic title.

Yesterday's victory was an unexpected one, the Walkerites overcoming what seemed to be an unsurmountable lead. The final score was 9 to 8. Central scored once in the first inning, but lost the lead when the North Enders tallied two in the fourth. Errors and Bremser's wildness resulted in four more Yeatman runs in the sixth. However, Roettger was also wild and his 14 walks contributed six runs to Central in sixth and eighth inning rallies.

With the score at 7 to 7 at the close of the ninth, the teams were forced into extra innings. Yeatman scored one in its half of the first extra session; but the red and black came back with a pair, which gave it the victory.

The first game resulted in a 4 to 0 victory for Soldan over Cleveland. The contest was called at the close of the seventh inning in order to allow Central and Yeatman to take the field.

The scores:

COMMISSION MAY BE IN CHARGE OF WRESTLING

CHICAGO, May 24.—An ordinance providing for a commission to regulate wrestling has been proposed for introduction in the City Council Monday. It would fix annual license fees of $25 for clubs with seating capacity of 200 or fewer, and ranging upward to $500 for places with capacity for 2000 or more persons. It would penalize organization and wrestlers for sham contests.

SYNDICATE PURCHASES HAVANA RACE TRACK

NEW YORK, May 24.—Purchase of the controlling interest in the Havana race track by a syndicate composed of Frank Steinhardt and A. H. Diaz of Havana, and George W. Loft of New York, was announced here today by Mr. Steinhardt, who said that the deal had been completed by the granting by President Menocal of a 5-year concession to run the track. It was stated that H. D. Brown of Havana had sold his interest for $250,000.

McKinley Athletes Sweep Municipal Track Carnival

High School Boys Win Four Out of Five Trophies, Including the Point Cup for the "Open" Events—Murchison's Brother a Victor.

Athletes of McKinley High School literally and figuratively had a "field day" at Washington University Athletic Field, yesterday afternoon. Of course there were over 350 local athletes in competition, whereas the McKinley forces only numbered 36; and then the meet was advertised as the annual spring track and field meet of the Municipal Athletic Association. But the fact that the South Side performers captured four of the five cups in competition and almost landed the fifth one might justify the belief that it was a McKinley event solely.

The competition was divided into four classes: the junior for athletes under 14 years; the intermediate for those between 14 and 16; the high school class, and the open division. Cups were awarded to the winning team in each class and also to the squad which totaled most points in the junior, intermediate and open divisions, combined. Coach Castleman's team was high in each class except the open where it lost by 14 points to the unattached athletes from Washington University, who totaled 39. In this division the St. Louis A. A. was third with 24.

The crimson contingent handily won the combined point prize with a grand tally of 73, whereas its nearest opponent, Soldan High, had but 26.

The large entry included everything in the line of athletes from contenders for national championships down to paper-weights in bloomers who were making their track debuts. The program provided for 28 events and required four hours to complete.

Promoters Out $200.

Although the meet was the most pretentious athletic affair of the season, its sponsor, the Municipal Association, suffered a financial loss of approximately $200. The expenses were set at $250, while the gate receipts totaled exactly $50. The attendance was very disappointing, less than 500 persons losing themselves in the large Pikeway stand. However, more disappointing than the attendance was the fact that about one-half of the spectators came under the box-office cognomen of "deadheads." The "deadheads" came in on complimentary tickets or came to the field via other passages than the entrance.

Because of the frequent rains of the past week, the cinder track presented rather heavy going for the runners. This was especially noticeable in the short distances, as sprinters of acknowledged ability were credited with rather mediocre marks in several instances.

Slow Track Affected Speed.

The finals of the open 100-yard dash, for instance, brought together six fast men, two of whom have done even time in the century. Irwin Mahl and Bechtold of the St. Louis A. A.; Drake, Auer and Goldschmitt of Washington University, and Langlin of University City High School were the survivors of the three heats. With this field, the soothsayers presaged a fast race. However, Mahl took the lead at the start and held it throughout, winning in :10 2-5. Drake and Auer took second and third.

Track followers were rather surprised to see four of the open events—the high jumps, pole vaults, 220-dash and mile run—won by representatives of high schools. In the running high jump, Malcolm Calhoun of Soldan High School leaped 71 inches after a half hour duel with Simpson of Concordia. Inasmuch as the former scholastic record was 68 inches, Calhoun's leap established a new mark. This youth also competed in the broad jump, the open 220, and high school 100-yard dash.

Surprise for Mile Runners.

The mile run served as a vehicle for the unusual ability of Tremlitt, a McKinley athlete. Tremlitt entered the three-lap grind in a field of 10 starters, including such runners as Asakainan, Edwards, Lewis and the recently successful Becket of Soldan High. When the South Side youth hopped right out into the lead and showed heels to his more exploited opponents, the word was whispered that Tremlitt was the pacer for the wiser runners.

However, the pacer held on to his 5-yard lead and when any opponents became dangerous he lengthened his stride and managed to hold the advantage. For a moment, at the halfway mark, Edwards stepped to the lead, but the crimson jerseyed runner came right back. He finished with a lead of about eight yards, the time being 4:54. This equals the high school record established in 1916.

A New Murchison "Arrives."

The McKinley contingent was most pleased at the performance of 12-year-old Gerald Murchison, a brother of the famed Loren Murchison, who is now the national A. A. U. sprinting champion and representative of the New York A. C. Five years ago Loren Murchison started to burn things up as a McKinley flyer.

Yesterday, Gerald Murchison ran in his first race as a McKinley entrant. He won the Junior 340-yard run from a field of 12 contenders. At 200 yards he was among a field of tail-enders. At this stage, however, he crept up to the lead and won the race by a most precocious burst of speed. Later in the day, he starred as a member of the victorious McKinley High team in the Junior relay and took second place in the broad jump. Young Murchison is a slightly built youth, but, like his brother, he uses every bit of his limited resources.

Carter Wins Two Firsts.

William Carter of Washington University and Trumm of Cleveland High School tied for individual honors. Carter took firsts in the broad jump and hop-step-and-jump, while Trumm scored wins in the scholastic century dash and open low hurdles. Carter's leap of 22 feet 2½ inches in the broad leap establishes a new municipal mark. This event marked his last contest as a representative of a university. He will be graduated in June.

Gould Proves a Surprise.

It might be pertinent to mention the open half and quarter mile events. The 880 proved the surprise of the day, inasmuch as a dark horse, Gould of McKendree, took first place. Jacks, Sellman and Asakanan appeared to be the logical contenders, with a few others as outside hopes. However, when Gould crossed the mark with a safe lead, the railbirds admitted that they had been crossed.

Boeddeker, a Great Lakes sailor running for the St. Louis A. A., and Pete Pemberton of Washington U. furnished the thrill of the day in the 440. Boeddeker took the lead at the first turn and held it from there on. However, at the 220 station Pemberton forged from the rear to the heels of the ultimate winner. In this position the pair flew for 200 yards. Boeddeker crossed the tape a scant foot in front of the Piker entrant. The time was 52 3-5 seconds, commendable considering the track.

MIDWAY WINS KENTUCKY HANDICAP BY A LENGTH

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 24.—Midway, J. W. Parrish's 5-year-old horse by Ballot-Thirty-Thirty, came from behind and in a driving finish won the Kentucky Handicap at Churchill Downs today by one length, with S. M. Henderson's Beaverkill second, a nose in front of Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Exterminator. The Porter, St. Bernard, Royce Roots and Vulcanite finished in the order named. Cudgel, highly regarded prior to post time, and Freecutter were scratched.

The race was at a mile and a quarter for 3-year-olds and upwards and carried $10,000 in added money. It was worth $11,300 net to the winner, $1500 to the owner of the second horse, $800 to the third and $400 to the fourth. It was run over a muddy track, in 2:10 2-5, seven seconds slower than the track record.

It was one of the most stirring contests in the history of the handicap. Parimutuel betting indicated that the public had placed its confidence in Exterminator, the show price on which for a $2 ticket was $2.70.

Midway paid $12 to win, $6.40 to place and $3.60 to show. Beaverkill rewarded his backers with $7.20 to place and $3.70 to show.

Ruth Owns .189 Mark.

"Babe" Ruth, the slugging pitcher of the Red Sox, has not turned out to be much of a batter to date this season. Ed Barrows's star owns a .189 mark for 16 games. He has scored 12 runs and connected for only 10 safeties. He has three doubles, three triples and two homers to his credit.

Camp Sees Wider Field for Sports With End of War

Famous Yale Authority Expects Industrial Athletics to Increase.

Walter Camp, famous football writer and authority on athletics, naval commission of athletics, Yale '80, who is attending the convention here of the Associated Western Yale Clubs, last night gave his impression of the future of sports, now that the fighting is over, to a representative of the Post-Dispatch.

"There will be a very great increase of sporting interest, which is beginning to make itself felt now," he said. "The effect of the war will be to increase the interest and spread of sport of all kinds, both in the colleges and outside. All the old traditional major sports will be revived with greater interest.

Industrial Athletics Coming.

"I think, too, that athletics are going to go into industrial life more in the near future," Camp said. "I think we are going to have factory and departmental athletics in a new and more intensive way."

Camp has been very instrumental in developing physique in the navy and army, especially in the aviation services. He holds a high place in the opinion of Secretary Daniels of the navy and of other heads. His uniform is similar to that of naval aviators, but resembling also that of the War Camp Community Service. His civilian status has been retained, his office as commissioner having been especially created.

Interscholastic Sport Permanent.

"Is there any chance that boxing will get a permanent foothold as an intercollegiate sport as a result of the war?" Mr. Camp was asked.

"Possibly," he replied. "At any rate, there will be more individual boxing."

"Will mass and intramural athletics ever wipe out intercollegiate sport, in your opinion?"

"No. We shall get some of the mass athletics, but they will never replace the standard major sports."

"Is there any chance that the goal from touchdown football rule will be abolished or modified?"

"That is a perennial question that will undoubtedly come up for discussion again this fall. How it will be answered I cannot say."

"Does the fact that Yale now has a paid head director of athletics mean that graduate coaching has finally been proven a failure at Yale?"

"That is something like asking a man if he has stopped beating his wife. There will be some graduate coaching this year, however."

CORNELL OARSMEN WIN OVER PRINGETON CREWS

ITHACA, N. Y., May 24.—Cornell defeated Princeton in both the varsity and freshmen rowing races here today. The Ithacans were not hard pressed in either event.

Vincent Richards Injured.

NEW YORK, May 24.—Vincent Richards, youthful tennis star, who today was reinstated after having been suspended from competition because of hi sconnection with a sporting goods concern, tore a ligament in his arm this afternoon when he attempted to crank an automobile which was to carry him to a tournament at New Rochelle. According to his physician his injury will keep him from the courts for a month.

Mrs. Hill Is Winner.

Mrs. T. M. Hill won the individual event in the Wilson Woman's Handicap bowling tourney last night at the Washington Alleys. In three games she counted 184, 200 and 160, totaling 556, with a four-pin handicap in each game. Mrs. M. Kelly Jr. was second, with 201, 172 and 160, and totaled 536 with a pin handicap per game.

The other scores were as follows: Tied for third, Mrs. J. A. Johnson, handican 18, total 520; and Mrs. H. R. Sheene, handicap 51, total 520.

Sir Barton Wins 3rd Feature Race

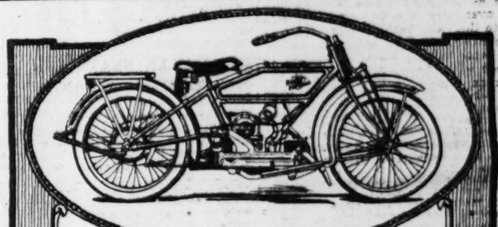
NEW YORK, May 24.—Sir Barton, owned by Commander J. K. L. Ross, captured the Withers, one of the oldest turf fixtures in America here today. Despite the slow track, Sir Barton came within two-fifths of a second of the ocurse record, which was established in 1916 by James Butler's Spur, running the mile in 1:38 3-5. Eternal was second and Pastoral Swain third.

Six horses went to the post, the field parading to the start with Sir Barton following at the heels of the lead horse, an old English custom which was inaugurated at a Maryland track and adopted later at Jamaica and Belmont. Sir Barton got away first in a good break, though Eternal led the pace for the first half mile with Sir Barton running just behind. At the three-quarter pole, Eternal was a length and a half in back of Sir Barton which came down the stretch unchallenged and won by two lengths.

The largest crowd of the turf season attended today's session of the spring meeting of the West Chester Association here. Over 25,000 were drawn by the historic Withers stake. The track was in poor shape, owing to the torrential rains the night before and the going being very heavy.

Ladder of Light Wins.

TORONTO, May 24.—Ladder of Light won the King's plate at the Toronto Jockey Club at the Woodbine course today after a hard finish. Doleful, a Seagram entry, was second, and Hongkong, another Seagram entry, third. Time, 2:09 2-5.



The New Harley-Davidson Sport Model

A Horizontal Twin Harley-Davidson Lighter Weight Motorcycle

A powerful, swift, quiet, vibrationless, solo mount—with the sweetest running, cleanest engine ever built into a motorcycle.

A Few of its Features

Unit power plant with horizontal opposed cylinders. 100 pound lighter than the average twin.
Super-heated, twin-cast manifold.
Drive chain enclosed.
Trussed cushion fork.
Automatic lubrication of motor, transmission and clutch.
Multiple disc steel plate clutch running in oil.
3-speed sliding gear transmission.
Spiral gear system of undergearing.

That's what those who have ridden it say. You, too, will experience a new thrill and delight when you try it. You will marvel at its ease of handling and splendid riding balance, due to low center of gravity and low saddle position.

Its smooth, glide-away action, its get-away, its pep on the hills—all are due to its perfectly-balanced opposed twin motor.

We know you will say it is the greatest achievement in motorcycle engineering.

Go to the nearest Harley-Davidson dealer and ask for a demonstration. Then, and then only, will you know what the Harley-Davidson Sport Model really is.

GIRL, 15, TO TELL HER STORY TO SAVE FATHER

Defense of Kentuckian Who Killed Man, Whose Wife Will Fight for His Name.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 24. — Verda Burch, 15 years old, will go on the witness stand in the Criminal Court as the chief witness for her father at his trial for the murder of Raymond Embry. The case is set for May 29.

The story to be told by Verda Burch will be the defense's chief support. The defense will claim that Burch, after hearing this story of her alleged wrongs by Embry, was crazed and not responsible when he shot Embry down at the door of his office in the Starks office building the morning of Dec. 9.

Three letters said to have been written by Embry to Verda Burch while she was on a visit to her aunt in Chicago will figure in the case. It is said that discovery of these letters by Verda Burch's parents caused them to get from her the story that brought on the killing of Embry.

Verda Burch will not be 16 until July. The wrong alleged is said to have been committed two years ago when she was 14.

Denied Any Wrong.

On the other hand, the family of Raymond Embry, who was a young insurance man here, and of the highest standing socially and in business, will fight to protect his name. Embry lived two days after being shot and was conscious almost to the last. He protested to his brothers that he had never done any wrong to Verda Burch and made the same avowal to his wife, who, ill at Saranac Lake, hastened to him and arrived several hours before he died.

Mrs. Embry is expected to be a witness. She is a young woman of rare beauty. It was through Mrs. Embry that Verda Burch became acquainted with Raymond Embry.

Mrs. Embry says that one morning, several years ago, she went to the door of her apartment in the Weissinger-Gaulbert, in answer to a knock, and found there a little girl with a kitten in her arms, who asked, "Is this your kitty?"

It was Verda Burch, visiting her aunt in the building. Mrs. Embry says she was so charmed with the child that she made her come in. Verda at the time was only about 10 years old. After that she and her husband made a pet of the little girl. She understood her husband's interest, she says, and is certain it was an unsullied friendship.

Intimation of Story.

According to intimations, the defense will claim that, in the summer of 1917, Embry took Verda Burch, who was only 14 that summer, for rides in his automobile.

The Embrys have a summer home, a cabin on the hills around Iroquois Park, south of Louisville.

Burch is still in jail. He was refused bond. The case was called for trial early this month, but was continued because of the illness of a witness for the commonwealth.

It is expected to go to trial without fail on May 29.

Salesman Wanted

I want a man who can sell goods — who knows he can by past experience — to represent me in this country. Have a real proposition for a real man of real money-making possibilities. I have one man who is today making at the rate of $12,000 per month — not year — on this same proposition — but he is a real, big, high-class salesman. Here's an "honest to God" chance for the right man who can deliver the goods.

CLIMBS FROM FLYING AIRPLANE TO ANOTHER ON ROPE LADDER

Former Army Pilot's Feat at Atlantic City Was Never Before Performed.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTIC CITY, May 24.—Lieut. Omar Locklear, formerly with the air service of the army today gave a demonstration, said to be the first in the annals of flying, of catching a dangling rope ladder from a second airplane and climbing into the craft from which it hung. The feat was done at an altitude of 2500 feet. He has leaped from one plane to another in the air before, but never made an ascent from one plane to another.

The performance was one of the features of the days' flying events held here in connection with the Pan-American Aeronautical Committee meeting. The intercollegiate land plane race over a 31-mile course was held today. Aviator Dunn, piloting a plane for Lieut. Jack Frost of Princeton, won the race in 16 minutes, six seconds.

The results of today's races make it nip and tuck between Princeton and Columbia, the latter winning the first contests in the series here three weeks ago. The first prize is $250 in Victory bonds, the second $150, third $100 and the fourth $50, the awards going to the pilot.

COMPANY BUYS 2176 U. S. ARMY AIRPLANES AND 4600 MOTORS

Largest Sale Ever to Private Corporation—Will Be Used for Commercial and Pleasure Purposes.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 24.—The Curtis Airplane and Motor Corporation announced tonight the purchase from the War Department of 2176 airplanes and 4600 motors. The price was not announced.

Negotiations for the purchase, which is said to have been the largest ever consummated by a private corporation, had been under way for several weeks. The contract was signed for the War Department today by Major-General Chas. T. Menoher, chief of the Air Service.

The planes are of the Curtiss "JN" type and were used for training purposes. After they have been carefully inspected and repaired when necessary, they will be sold for commercial and pleasure purposes.

JEWS, IN CABLE TO PRESIDENT, DISCUSS SITUATION IN POLAND

Adolf Kraus and Julius Rosenwald Send Rejoinder to Recent Message of John F. Smulski.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 24.—Adolf Kraus, president of the Independent Order of B'Nai B'rith, and Julius Rosenwald, vice chairman of the American Jewish Committee, today sent a cablegram to President Wilson as a rejoinder to a recent message to the President from John F. Smulski, president of the National Polish Alliance. The message discussed the reports of pogroms in Poland. Today's cablegram saying in part:

"American citizens, irrespective of religion, who stand aghast at the brutality directed against Polish Jews, have no desire for vengeance. They wish all the people of Poland and Rumania happiness and prosperity. They ask merely that the butchery of Jews be stopped and that justice be accorded to them in those lands in which it is denied them in precisely the same manner and to the same extent it is accorded their neighbors."

$100,000 SOUGHT BY CONVENTIONS BUREAU

Business Houses and Industry Will Be Solicited by Teams for Public Working Fund.

The campaign for a $100,000 maintenance fund for the St. Louis Convention and Publicity Bureau, which will take place next week, will be carried on by canvassing teams representing the large industries and leading business organizations.

The St. Louis Hotel Men's Association has pledged its support, inasmuch as the present prosperous condition of the hotel business here is due in part to the number of conventions being held. However, the Convention Bureau holds that other lines of business share with the hotel business in the financial benefits of conventions.

The hotel men agreed, it was announced, that normal rates would be maintained for convention visitors, and that the Convention Bureau would have the privilege of making reservations for rooms for such visitors.

The Associated Retailers have assured the Convention Bureau of cooperation. The Chamber of Commerce has appointed a committee to work with the Finance Committee of the bureau, the members being John G. Lonsdale, Richard S. Hawes and Edward Buder.

The Advertising Club, the Optimists' Club, the Rotary Club, the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Junior Ad Club have also pledged support. The solicitation will be by groups of businesses and industries.

As showing the work of the bureau, Charles F. Hatfield, secretary-manager, announced yesterday that 14 conventions have recently been obtained for St. Louis.

One of them is the meeting of the wholesale stationers of the United States, which will be held in May of next year. Another is that the Southwestern Division of the Red Cross, embracing the chapters of Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, Texas and Oklahoma, which will assemble on June 16. It is expected that George W. Simmons, manager of the division, will have returned from Siberia by that time. The chief matter to be considered by the delegates will be a peace program.

The other conventions announced are as follows: American Institute of Actuaries, June 5-7; Catholic Education Association, June 23-26; Knights of Malta, June 14; American Bankers' Association, Sept. 29-Oct. 2; Investment Bankers' Association, in October; National Association of Ornamental Iron and Bronze Manufacturers, in October; Association of Military Surgeons of the United States, Oct. 13-15; Central Oil Jobbers' Association, Oct. 9-10; American Association of Engineers, March, 1920; Mississippi Valley Association, April, 1920; and United States Football Association, May, 1920.

WEBSTER WILL ERECT FIRST COUNTY SOLDIER MONUMENT

Eleven Lost Their Lives in World War—Shaft to Name All From Town in Service.

The first monument in St. Louis County or City for soldiers of this war will be erected by Webster Groves, in the triangular city park at Lockwood boulevard and Big Bend road, in memory of the 11 residents of Webster Groves who lost their lives. Work on the excavation for the concrete base was started yesterday. The monument will be unveiled at 4 p. m. Friday, following a parade and other ceremonies.

It is a granite shaft, seven feet high, three feet wide and three feet thick, having two bronze tablets, one setting forth the names of the men who died and the other containing the names of the 590 men and women of Webster Groves who were in the war. A sealed niche in the shaft will also contain the names, ages and addresses of the 590 names of the contributors to the manument fund and a history of Webster Groves to date.

The memorial was proposed by the Webster Groves Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. About $100 0was raised by popular subscription.

You can find the house you are looking for through Post-Dispatch WANT ADS.

U. S. Mission Leaves Vienna.

Read What Our Government Says About a Cadillac

THE Cadillac Motor Car Company is pleased to announce the acceptance of the Cadillac car, by its Standardization Board, as the standard officers' car of the United States Marine Corps. A decision in favor of the Cadillac was reached after a careful examination of the records of the various cars as kept in the office of the Quartermaster, Headquarters Marine Corps, and by reports of Marine Corps Quartermasters in service elsewhere. Supplementing this information were the reports, criticisms and recommendations of the Army Motor Transport Corps, as well as the actual tests of the various cars under consideration.

It is of interest to note that at the conclusion of exhaustive tests and inquiries the decision in favor of Cadillac was almost identical with that reached by the Army authorities more than a year ago after similar tests and inquiries.

The Cadillac was selected after exhaustive competitive tests as the Standard seven-passenger car for the U. S. Army.

POSTHUMOUS WAR CROSS AWARD REACHES ST. LOUISAN'S PARENTS

Citation Accompanying Cross Tells How Corp. I. F. Schindler of Marines Took a Prisoner.

The French Croix de Guerre, a posthumous award to Corp. Irwin F. Schindler, a member of the Sixth Marines, who was killed in action Nov. 1, has been received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ignatius Schindler, 4839 Milentz avenue. They had received no previous information of the award.

Accompanying the cross is a citation, stating that he "went alone into the enemy lines and captured a prisoner, who gave valuable information concerning the number engaged in the enemy counter attack."

Schindler enlisted in the Marines in St. Louis, April 17, 1917, and went to France the following October. He was in the battles of Chateau-Thierry, Soissons, St. Mihiel and the Argonne. He was 24 years old.

NEGRO ROBBER GETS FIVE YEARS

He and Two Companions Held up Grocery and Butcher Shop.

James Jennings, 32 years old, a negro living at 4310 Cook avenue, was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary by a jury in Judge Garesche's court yesterday on a robbery charge.

Jennings, with two other negroes, Anderson Dunlap and Henry Ellis, held up Samuel Balber in his grocery and butcher shop, 4300 Fairfax avenue, on the night of March 15, last. At the points of revolvers they took $30 from him. Dunlap and Ellis entered pleas of guilty prior to the commencement of Jennings' trial. Sentence was deferred in their cases and they were used as State's witnesses against Jennings.

JUNIOR GARDEN LEAGUE PAGEANT

Public Urged to Attend Three Performances to Be Given This Week.

An appeal was issued yesterday by Mrs. A. C. Arnold, chairman of the Junior Garden League, to the public to attend the league pageant, "The Nation's Need," which will be given three more performances, as follows: Tomorrow night, Yeatman High School; Wednesday night, Central High School; June 3, at McKinley High School.

The pageant has more than 100 boys and girls in the cast. Tickets are 15c for children and 25c for adults, on sale at Kieselhorst's, 1007 Olive.

Mrs. Arnold stated that $500 contributed by the public for the street car fare of school children has almost been exhausted because there had been such a big registration of children who wanted free plots in the gardens, and that unless sufficient money is raised from the pageant the work could not continue during the summer. All connected with the pageant are giving their services and the entire proceeds go to the garden work.

ALLEGED FORGER WHO POSED AS ARMY OFFICER IS ARRESTED

John T. Hardy, Wanted Here, Declared by Authorities to Have Served One Sentence.

Agents of the Investigation Bureau of the Department of Justice in St. Louis were notified yesterday of the arrest in Silver City, Ok., of John T. Hardy, 24 years old, under indictment on a charge of having cashed several forged checks in St. Louis under the guise of being an army officer. It is alleged that as "Lieut. Garrison" he cashed one check for $26.50 at Hotel Jefferson and as Lieut. J. B. North" he cashed one for $33.05 at the A. L. Sherman Co., 309 North Sixth street, and one for $69.95 at the Central National Bank.

According to the officials, he was arrested in a Southern state after these forgeries and served a short term. On his release, it is alleged, he returned to St. Louis and cashed a check for $44.55 at the Hance Electric Co., 1110 Olive street. This check was signed "H. D. Brennan" and was payable to "Capt. W. C. McLaughlin Jr." Brennan is the name of the chief of the Department of Justice agents in St. Louis and McLaughlin is the name of his first assistant.

Know the "Traffic" of Today

Not a weak link in the chain

Read and learn for yourself why the Traffic is the most wonderful truck value in the world today. Note the quality of the truck throughout and realize that while the Traffic is the lowest priced 4,000-lb. capacity truck in the world, price was a secondary consideration in the designing and construction of the Traffic Truck.

Lift up the hood—there purrs a 3¾x5 Red Seal Continental Motor. What better motor than the Continental could be used? You also see a high-tension magneto with impulse starter; this insures a hot spark at all times. The carburetor is a Carter, known for its efficiency and economy. (The Traffic will average twelve miles on one gallon of gasoline.) And there is the radiator, a masterpiece in itself—heavy four-piece cast shell, bolted-up type with a brass cellular core. Regardless of what price you pay for a truck, you could not get a better radiator than that used on the Traffic.

Now let's go back to the clutch. It is of the multiple disc type—easy to engage—no grabbing or jerking of the mechanism, and, once engaged, it will never slip.

And the standard Covert Transmission, large broad-face nickel steel hardened and ground gears with roller and ball bearings on the main and counter shafts.

And there is the propeller shaft of two-piece construction with three universal joints with a 3-inch self-aligning Hyatt roller bearing supporting the shaft at the center, this construction absolutely eliminates all distortion and whipping out of the universal joints.

Now just look at that Russel Rear Axle—a thoroughbred. It is of the internal gear type, with the driving shaft located ahead of the dead axle. This shortens our propeller shaft and applies the power out near the rim of the wheel where it is wanted. The load is carried on a round 2⅜-inch chrome nickel steel dead axle. Ball and roller bearings are provided at all points of service, thereby eliminating friction and wear. This axle is one piece from hub to hub. Note the large, efficient brakes, both external and internal, operating on the wheel drum.

The front axle is of the Elliot type of one-piece drop forging. The spindles are of nickel steel, with large Timken Roller Bearings in the wheels.

The springs, both front and rear, are of the semi-elliptic type, made of special alloy steel. Note the large size of the springs and the number of leaves, nine in front and ten in the rear.

The frame of the Traffic, the backbone of any truck, is constructed of 6-inch U-Channel Structural Steel. Both the front and rear ends are rounded, acting as a perfect torque, one end against the other, thereby eliminating any stretching or distortion of the main side members. Note how it is braced, bound and gusseted. The Traffic frame is a masterpiece and an exclusive Traffic feature.

The dash is of a heavy pressed steel construction, with the gasoline tank mounted integral, insuring a perfect flow of gas on all grades.

Now then, step off and take a good look at the Traffic. Note the sturdiness of the truck throughout—the 34x3½-inch Fisk solid front tires and the 34x5-inch Fisk solid rears. Note how everything is in exact proportion—the 133-inch wheelbase—the 122-inch length of frame behind the driver's seat—the ease of control—nothing has been overlooked in the construction of the Traffic. The Chassis comes regularly equipped with driver's seat with lazy back and cushion, Chassis painted and varnished, lamps, horn, tools, etc. Note the completeness of the Traffic and then stop and realize that we are producing this quality truck at a retail selling price of $1395.

Let your "Horse Sense" prompt you to investigate the Traffic before spending your money for a motor truck, and learn for yourself that the Traffic is the most wonderful truck value in the truck world today. Chassis $1395, f.o.b. St. Louis.

REALTY MOVEMENT SURPASSING THAT OF 80'S FORECAST

By Jan. 1 Next "City Will Begin to Resound With Big Operations," Is Prediction of Lorenzo E. Anderson.

CITY'S ADVANTAGES GENERALLY KNOWN

Transactions During Last Week of a Nature to Show That Capitalists Are Awake to Prevailing Opportunity.

By Berry Moore.

Lorenzo E. Anderson, stock and bond broker, director of the Mercantile Trust Co. and a member of the Hammett-Anderson-Wade Real Estate Co., which flourished 25 or 30 years ago, predicts that St. Louis will have within the next year a real estate movement of proportions, excelling that of the '80s.

"We will work up to it this year," said Anderson. "By Jan. 1, 1920, the city will begin to resound with big operations of this character. The revival, which is now in its inception, will extend to all parts of the city and embrace all classes of property.

"I recently made a tour of the country, visiting the principal cities, and found a house shortage everywhere, even more acute than that which confronts St. Louis.

"The geographical advantages of this city for business purposes have come to be generally recognized," Anderson said; "and many large interests are contemplating establishing plants or headquarters here. The cue has been given by the General Motors Co., which has purchased a site at Natural Bridge road and Union boulevard for a plant to be constructed at a cost of $5,000,000, and which has completed arrangements for a lease of a building to be erected at the southeast corner of Leonard avenue and Locust street for the United Motors Co., its distributing medium.

"From the general aspect of things, the indications are that the city is on the eve of a decided awakening. Accordingly, it would seem that now is the psychological time to buy real estate in St. Louis, either for investment or for speculation, as there promises to be a general appreciation in property values within the next few months. So my advice to real estate men is to get ready."

Capitalists Shown to Be Awake.

Transactions reported duringthe week indicate that capital is awake to the opportunities in the St. Louis real estate field for investment or for speculation. An impressive number of acquisitions of flats, apartments and business holdings, as well as dwellings, were concluded last week, according to announcements of real estate agencies. Besides various other transactions involving large amounts, Sam Hamburg Jr. announces the sale of the Woodrow, the Pershing and the Simms apartment buildings.

"The Woodrow, located at 4009 Lindell boulevard, and recently erected by the Koplar Real Estate Co., of which former Mayor F. H. Kreis...nn is president, was sold for $65,000. The name of the purchaser is withheld for the present. This building comprises four stories, divided into 12 four-room suites, and occupies a lot 60x125 feet. The premises include garages for six machines.

"The Pershing, of which there are two units, 5386-90 Pershing avenue, each having 16 suites, and the Simms also of 16 suites, 5510 Pershing avenue, were purchased by a furniture manufacturer of Grand Rapids, Mich. The price mentioned for the three buildings was $300,000. The annual rentals in these instances aggregate $36,000.

The purchaser, whose identity has not been disclosed, it is understood, has plans for furnishing and operating this group of buildings on the hotel plan as soon as the present leases expire, which will be next fall.

Hotel-Apartment Projected.

As a site for a lofty hotel apartment structure, a client of the Rosenbaum-Hauschulte Real Estate Co. has purchased the northeast corner of Pershing and Belt avenues, 100x170 feet. The upper floors will be divided into 200 rooms, while the ground floor will be arranged for stores. The basement, which will be of French conception, will be equipped for a restaurant on a handsome scale.

Another distinguishing feature was the acquisition by the Manewal Bakery Co. of the bakery building occupying a lot 150x250 feet at the northwest corner of Page and Walton avenues. The price paid was $60,000, according to Hamburg. The building comprises two stories and forms one of the most complete bakery plants in the city. It was formerly occupied by the Heidland Baking Co., a client of the Rosenbaum-Hauschulte Real Estate Co.

Another notable sale engineered by Hamburg was that of a block of stores and tenements, 87x142 feet, at 2009-13 North Broadway. The purchaser was Rose Weherar, the vendor being Nathan Frank.

Other sales by the Rosenbaum-Hauschulte Co. included 2027 Eugenia street, and 1006 Compton avenue, bought by William Goldman, also 4911-19 St. Louis avenue, three single flats of five and six rooms, purchased by Samuel Lewis, an insurance man, and 938-42 Beach avenue, a seven-room residence and a three-story apartment building renting for $1920 per year, purchased by Edward Kassner.

The Mercantile Trust Co. sold two valuable business holdings at auction during the week, winding up certain undivided interests.

These included a four-story building at the northeast corner of Sixteenth and Pine streets, 83x109 feet, which was acquired by John F. Quinn, a client of the J. E. Kaime Real Estate Co., and a four-story building at 120-22 South Main street, 39x107.10 feet, purchased by the Audrey Realty Co. of which Eugene Freund is president.

A first-class restaurant will be opened at 515 Locust street by Mrs. Irene Willman, who has taken a lease of the quarters through T. W. Droege of the Mercantile Trust Co. Mrs. Willman has been connected with a large Olive street restaurant for a number of years.

The Mid-West Manufacturing Co. has leased, through the Mercantile Trust Co., the four-story building at 1520-26 North Thirteenth street. The negotiations were conducted by T. W. Droege, of the Trust Co.'s leasing department.

Plans are being made for the erection of a substantial fireproof business building at 1117-21 Pine street, 65x125 feet, recently purchased by the Leonard and Locust Investment Co., of which Sam Hamburg Jr. is president. The site is occupied by three-story building.

FAMOUS AND BARR CO. ADDS 615 LOCUST ST. TO HOLDINGS

William A. Maguire reports having leased 615 Locust street for Clifford M. Dolph to the May Department Stores Co. for 28 years. This gives the Famous and Barr company the entire front on the north side of Locust street from the Equitable Building to Seventh street.

The company intends to wreck the three-story building occupying the site and to erect a seven-story structure to conform to the Dolph Building, to be occupied by the Famous-Barr as additional space.

DITTMEIER & VOGEL R. E. CO.

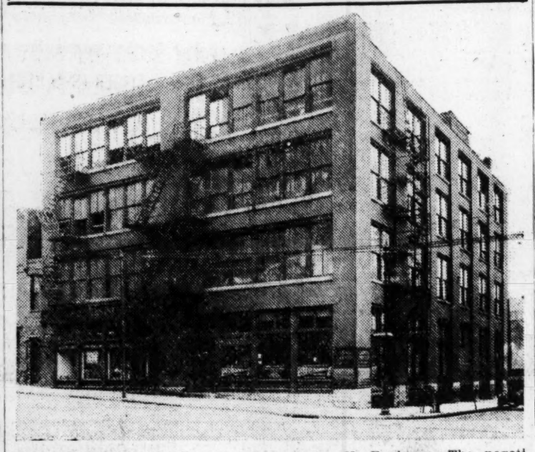
The Frank L. Dittmeier & Chas. F. Vogel Real Estate Co. reports the sale of 6626 Elmer avenue, four-room cottage, for a client to Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Hodges for $2,900.

Also 3820 North Twenty-third street, single flat, for a client to Mr. and Mrs. Carl Ellerman for $3250.

Also 2714-16 Henrietta street, double flat, for a client to Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Schlocsser, for $8750.

Also 4016-18 Lucky street, double flat, for Mrs. Harriett Bernett to Charles Tillman, for $9000.

Pine Street Building Purchased by the Century Electric Company



It was disclosed yesterday that the Century Electric Co. was the purchaser of the four-story building at the southeast corner of Nineteenth and Pine streets, sold recently by the Mercantile Trust Co. on behalf of Amadee V. Reyburn. The negotiations were conducted by T. W. Droege of the trust company in conjunction with Albert T. Terry & Co.

The price paid was $60,000.

AGENTS REPORT $19,595 SALES OF RIVERVIEW GARDENS 'FARMS'

Sikking & Beckwith reports sales aggregating $19,595 of "Little City Farms" in Riverview Gardens last week. The last section of these "farms" is rapidly being absorbed.

"We have had all the buyers we could handle during the few bright hours we have had," said Beckwith, "and we believe that when the weather settles we will sell every available plot in two weeks."

These "farms" are tracts of 100 feet front and from 170 to 300 feet deep, and are being sold on monthly payments, without interest or taxes for a year, at from $300 to $500 apiece. City water is being laid to each farm, and cinder roadways built throughout. More than 75 per cent of the Riverview tract, which is just above Baden, has been sold, and gardens are blooming all over the subdivision.

BERGFELD COMPANY TO BUILD 8 HOMES AT COST OF $150,000

The Geo. F. Bergfeld Realty Co. last week broke ground for the erection of eight residences, five in Ames place, one in Park View, one in Hillcrest and one on Flora boulevard, three of which have been sold from the plans.

These homes will be built of matt or tapestry brick, varying in size from seven to 10 rooms, with two and three baths, sun parlors and most of them containing two sleeping porches. All of these will be equipped with hot water heating systems, and each will be piped for vacuum cleaners.

The cost of the eight homes will be approximately $150,000.

The five houses being built in Ames place will complete the block on Waterman avenue, between Adelaide and Trinity avenues, which is known as the "Bergfeld block."

STIFFENING OF VALUES CLEARLY APPARENT, MORFIT DECLARES

"Almost everyone is convinced that the cost of building will not come down," said James C. Morfit yesterday. "The impression prevailed in some quarters after the armistice that prices would drop, but this has given way to the conclusion that the day of high wages and higher prices has come to stay.

"Homeseekers have been active in the last six months, with the result that residences are very scarce. Opportunities are still offered to purchase houses at moderate prices, but indications point to a general stiffening of values."

Morfit reports a heavy demand for city and suburban residential properties. That building is being revived is evidenced by houses being constructed in Skinker Heights, Ames place, Hillcrest, Hi-Pointe and Webster Groves.

REAL ESTATE BOWLERS BANQUET

The Real Estate Bowling League held its annual luncheon last evening at Kissner's Grove. Charles F. Joy was toastmaster. Talks were made by President William S. Specht, James P. Blake, William A. Giraldin and Will C. Wissmath.

Prizes were awarded to the teams and also to individuals. Following is the standing of the teams for the season, just finished, in the order named: Kaime, Dittmeier, St. Louis Title, Recorder of Deeds, Giraldin, R E. Bulletin, Blake and Clucas.

TWO APARTMENT SUITES LEASED

Oreon E. and R. G. Scott report having leased the first floor east apartment at 5406 Delmar boulevard, "Forest Ridge" building, to Herman C. Stifel.

Also the second floor east of the building, now nearing completion at 5354 Delmar boulevard, known as Portland Apartment, to William Foley.

The above apartments contain 10 rooms and five baths each, with chauffeur quarters.

BIG BLAST FURNACE ALSO TO BE ERECTED

Shareholders in Enameling Company Offered Privilege of Absorbing $1,453,400 Treasury Preferred Stock.

Plans for the erection of a 500-ton blast furnace and plant for the production of gas, tar and coke at Granite City have been announced by the National Enameling and Stamping Co., which has its plant there.

The new coke plant is to be built by the St. Louis Coke and Chemical Co., a Maine corporation. The National Enameling and Stamping Co. is to purchase $1,250,000 of the stock of the new concern.

The enameling company has sent a letter to its common and preferred shareholders, offering them the privilege of subscribing pro rata, at the par value of $100 a share, for $1,453,400 of treasury preferred stock, the unissued portion of the original $10,000,000 authorization. The greater portion of the proceeds of this issue will be used for the purchase of stock in the coke concern. The announcement to National Enameling stockholders says:

"The St. Louis Coke and Chemical Co. is to erect, within one mile of your Granite City open-hearth steel plant and mills, a 500-ton blast furnace and plant for the production of gas, tar, and coke; the latter by means of certain patented processes for coking the coals of the adjacent Illinois field, of which the St. Louis Coke and Chemical Co. is the licensee.

"In addition to the purchase of the aforementioned shares your company has secured from the St. Louis Coke and Chemical Co. valuable contract rights. In the opinion of your board of directors your company's stock interest in the St. Louis Coke and Chemical Co. in communication with the benefits to your company from the contract rights accorded it of the value in excess of the $1,250,000 payable under the contract."

Sites for Large Plants.

According to realty circles, negotiations were concluded during the week whereby several extensive plants will be established in St. Louis which will add in no small measure to the city's prestige, but details are not available. In other words, the sites for these enterprises have been assembled, and details of the plans are being worked out.

Sites were also acquired for homes for several quasi-public institutions, to be erected in the near future.

The demand is more diversified than for many years.

CITY REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

10
MORE LOTS SOLD IN HI-POINTE

Another $60,000.00 Worth of Buildings to Be Started

THE RUSH IS ON! BUILDERS GETTING BUSY

Following our announcement last week that $100,000.00 worth of buildings would be started in Hi-Pointe within 30 days, a strip of ground was sold to a building corporation, which will start

$60,000.00 Worth of Buildings Within the Next Ten Days

ALL SUCCESSFUL BUILDERS realize that the place to build and to sell is where there is a great amount of building activity. Rapid building means an immediate increase in real estate values, and a subdivision quickly built up is always a prosperous and successful subdivision.

YOU WILL FIND OTHER BUILDERS STARTING IN HI-POINTE IMMEDIATELY. THIS IS A BUILDER'S HARVEST.

$50,000.00 WORTH OF BUILDINGS NOW UNDER CONSTRUCTION.

$160,000.00 WORTH TO BE STARTED WITHIN 30 DAYS. WHAT WILL THIS MEAN TO THE ADJOINING PROPERTY?

PRICES ARE GOING UP, AND GOING UP RAPIDLY. WHEN BUILDERS BUY, THEY DO NOT BUY A LOT AT A TIME.

FROM 150 TO 500 FEET IS THE USUAL PURCHASE FOR A BUILDER.

AT THE RATE THESE LOTS ARE GOING, 30 DAYS FROM NOW THE SUBDIVISION WILL BE SOLD OUT.

The real proof, the absolute proof of the desirability of real estate is your ability to sell it. When all is said and done, when all arguments are in, that is the real test, the acid test and the proper way to judge where to buy.

Nearly $400,000.00

worth of this property has been sold, yet you cannot re-purchase a single lot without paying the owner a substantial profit.

DOES THIS NOT SPEAK FOR ITSELF?

NEARLY EVERY DAY, SOMEONE IS BEING OFFERED A PROFIT.

LAST WEEK, TWO LOTS WERE SOLD AT A PROFIT OF $500.00 EACH.

When you compare Hi-Pointe with the prices at which similar property is being sold, you will realize the tremendous profits that are going to be made.

COMPARE it with any West End property, compare it with the many apartment house districts, for instance, selling at $60.00 to $100.00 per front foot. You will find that Hi-Pointe excels in everything that makes and maintains real estate values, yet the price is not nearly so high.

The lots are wider and deeper, with the building line farther back from the street. The streets better made and more attractively arranged. And splendid street car service right at your door.

On the East you have 1400 acre Forest Park, and on the West the grounds of the new $300,000.00 Christian Brothers' College. Schools, colleges, churches and stores conveniently nearby.

YOU CAN LOOK DOWN FROM HI-POINTE ON WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY AND THE ENTIRE WEST END.

PURCHASERS OF HOMES LOOK FOR AND APPRECIATE THESE THINGS, AND BUY WHERE THEY CAN HAVE THEM.

This is a rare opportunity for a sure profit and a quick turnover. If you wish to participate you will have to act at once, for the builders are now in the market and these lots will be sold several at a time.

Restricted Maryland Terrace

St. Louis' Most Thoroughly Developed Subdivision, Adjoining Campus of Washington University

If You Make $400 a Month—If You Pay $80 a Month Rent You Can Own Your Own Home in Maryland Terrace

Come out today—see the homes already built, the Sunken Garden with its Pergola entrance, the 5000 growing shade trees, the wide Boulevards bordered with wide parkings, the deep building lines. See how impossible it is for Maryland Terrace to ever be crowded or congested.

See the plans for the fifteen new homes which will soon be erected. Learn of the many people who have purchased home-sites here and who are building.

See Everett Davis, President, living at northeast corner Williams and Westmoreland in Maryland Terrace, for full details of the homes you can get for $13,000, $14,000 and $20,000, and how you can pay for them with a reasonable initial payment and the balance like rent.

Drive to Pennsylvania avenue, west boundary of Campus, then west on either Maryland or Westmoreland Drives. Maryland Terrace starts at campus and goes west to Clayton, with University car direct to door.

Choose the Right Place—

Choosing the right place is the first and most important step in building a house.

You can build an economical house on valuable ground. But you can't build a valuable house on cheap ground.

Your house may cost a lot, but if its site was ill chosen, you can never, never get that cost out of it.

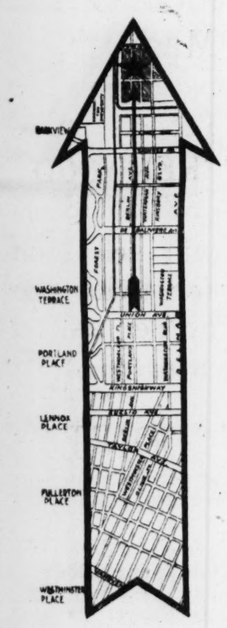
You can save a little money at first, perhaps, by buying cheap ground.

But every dollar you save on the lot may mean $100 lost on the finished home property.

The lot represents about 20% of the producing cost of the average home.

But the location of that lot decides about 80% of the selling value.

With this in mind go out and look at



Ames Place

Adjoining Washington University and Parkview, between Pennsylvania and Kingsbury boulevard.

Can you get anything else you'd have at $52.50 a foot? You can't. There isn't any more. St. Louis residence property like this is not for sale anywhere else at these figures.

See Ames Place today. You will find a competent man in the office at Pershing and Pennsylvania avenues who will give you full information in regard to lots for sale, restrictions and price per foot.

RESIDENCES FOR SALE

SOUTH

8-ROOM RESIDENCE HOT WATER HEAT

My well-constructed, first-class 8-room modern residence, containing 8 beautiful large, light, airy rooms; entire first floor finished in oak; beautiful electric fixtures; high-class cabinet mantels; many large closets; marble and tile bath; slate roof; splendid hot-water-heating system; high dry basement; large garage.

I built this place for my home and spared no expense; it is built right and in perfect condition; built on a large lot, and on a corner; it will make a splendid home for anyone, but especially suited for physician.

I am going to build a bungalow, that is the only reason for disposing of this residence.

This is not an old, worn-out house, but a splendid residence, in first-class condition, and in a very good neighborhood.

Will sell at far below cost and make very reasonable terms.

Apply to owner on premises, 2122 Ann av.

MANY FACTORS HELP RISE IN STOCK MARKET

Enormous Wheat Crop and Belief Germany Will Sign Treaty Cause Buying.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 24.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review, says:

"It is merely repeating what everyone now recognizes, to say that the great activity and persistent strength of the financial market are based on the three convictions that Germany will sign the treaty, thereby removing the deterrent economic influences of a continuing state of war; that our own economic situation, notably the extraordinary wheat crop under such unprecedented conditions of world demand and world supply, will promote industrial revival in America, and that the country's existing wealth and financial power make the forward movement certain. The further theory, occasionally heard, that this is an 'inflation market,' is perhaps too vague an explanation to be accepted quite as readily as the others.

"'Inflation markets' of the past, such as that on our Stock Exchange after the Civil War, were frankly governed by the large depreciation from gold value of the currency in which even stock market prices were measured.

"A similar market undoubtedly existed in Germany during the last years of this war; when, in spite of increasing economic exhaustion and increasing probability of military defeat, prices on the Berlin Stock Exchange stood in many instances twice as high as in 1914. But the German currency, as measured by the exchange rate in neutral European markets, was depreciated 50 to 70 per cent, and prices both of stocks and commodities were merely adjusting themselves to paper values.

Foreign Exchange Markets.

"Foreign exchange gives no such evidence today as to American currency. If all the world were to remove tomorrow the restrictions on gold shipments, the United States would possibly be importing gold from every large market in the Eastern hemisphere, excepting Spain.

"Our outstanding currency is very much larger than when we went to war; but the gold reserve against it is 10 per cent greater than the law requires, and the currency itself is smaller in amount than at the end of 1918.

"Loans of the banks have increased correspondingly since the war began, and a very substantial part of that increase is admittedly in the form of loans secured by the war bonds of our Government.

"But even economists are strangely slow in recognizing the fact that this particular form of credit expansion does not of itself operate for, but against, a rise in commercial and financial prices—for the sufficient reason that in proportion as banking resources are tied up, directly or indirectly, in subscriptions to the war loans, the less of the total credit fund available is left for use on the business markets, where it could have direct effect in raising prices.

"The larger question, as concerns financial values, is how the markets will be affected in the long run, when we enter on the program of loans, on a probably unprecedented scale, to the recent European belligerents. That these impending operations will, when fairly under way, serve to terminate the excited movement in outstanding home securities, would naturally be expected.

The Stock Markets of the Past.

"The very similar stock markets of 1899 and 1901, were similarly brought back to normal through the outpour of new industrial securities on the market, and the absorption in the new investments of the capital which had been rushing to the Stock Exchange.

"That these operations in the foreign field will be of very large proportions and will not be long delayed, every indication of the day foreshadows. The ready capital is here. The investor's imagination will be touched by the termination of the war; his practical reasoning by the fact that the capital thus placed will be invested at a moment when circumstances make the opportunity for such use perhaps the most advantageous in our time.

"Not least of all, the unprecedented 'merchandise export balance,' and the excessively violent movement of the exchanges against Europe and in favor of New York, show that in such investment we shall not be drawing on the accumulated capital reserve of years long past, but making our advances to the foreign borrowers through goods whose production serves of itself to increase our own people's profit and prosperity.

FULTON IRON IS STRONG IN STOCK TRADING HERE

Sales Are Made at $56.50, Compared With Previous Transfers at $52.50: Bank Shares Are Steady.

Fulton Iron common continued in good demand at the session of the Stock Exchange here yesterday, and sales were made at $55.50 to $56.50, compared with $52.50 at the close Friday. Independent Brewery 6s also showed strength and were 2 points higher at $49 and $48.50. They were influenced by announcement or resumption of the brewery business.

United Railways preferred stock was unchanged at $11, and Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney common held steady around $50. Bank and trust shares showed no important changes on the call. Bonds were in limited request at steady values.

COTTON UP 140 POINTS IN THE NEW YORK MARKET

Heavy Rains Cause Flurry of Buying in All Options at Week-End Session of the Exchange.

NEW YORK, May 24.—Reports of heavy general rains in Texas and over the central belt caused an exceedingly active and excited opening in the cotton market here today. First prices showed an advance of 15 to 20 points, with October deliveries selling 20 points above last night's closing figures on heavy general buying.

The continuing active spot demand reflected in the big sales officially reported at most of the advance, but the main factor was the scare over unfavorable crop conditions and the new crop months showed relative strength.

Heavy realizing sales were absorbed with apparent readiness and the market showed continued activity and strength later in the morning, with July selling at 31.10c, October 146 points above last night's closing figures. The close was strong, at a net advance of 88 to 141 points.

Cotton—Spot steady; middling, 32.60c. Cotton futures closed strong; July, 31.10c; Oct., 30.45c; Dec., 29.95c; Jan., 29.75c; March, 29.55c.

In sad but loving memory of my beloved husband, and our dear father and grandfather, William Hart, who died this life one year ago, May 21, 1918. Sadly missed by

WIFE, CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN. (1)

In memory of my dear sister, Alvina H. Schettler (nee Martin), who died May 28, 1908.

Days of sadness still come o'er me,
Tears in silence often flow,
Fond memory keeps you ever near me,
Though you died so many years ago.
Sadly missed by your sister,
MRS. TILLIE C. WOLFF.

In sad memory of our beloved son and brother, Eddie Huepper, who departed this life May 26, 1913.

Roses wither, fall and die,
Friends may forget, never will I.
Sadly missed by his mother and brothers,
OSCAR AND ARTHUR HUEPPNER.

We miss thee from our home, dear father,
We miss thee from thy place;
A shadow over our life is cast,
We miss the sunshine of thy face,
We miss thy kind and willing hand,
Thy kind and earnest care.
Our home is dark without thee,
We miss thee everywhere.
MRS. ANNA SIEDD AND SON.

In loving remembrance of my devoted husband and our dear father, William Osterwiach, who departed this life May 27, 1918:
One year has passed; our hearts still sore,
As time goes on we miss you more.
Your loving smile, your loving face,
None can fill your vacant place.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In loving remembrance of my dear husband and father, Will H. Bollman, who departed this life two years ago, May 27, 1917:
Rest in peace, our dearest daddy,
Years may go, but memories stay.
You are gone, but not forgotten,
And we'll all meet again some day.
Sadly missed by his WIFE, DAUGHTER AND MANY OTHERS
WHO LOVED HIM. (c)

In loving memory of Marie O'Gorman, who departed this life one year ago, May 20, 1918.
One year has passed
Our hearts still sore,
As time goes on
We miss you more;
Your loving face,
Your loving smile,
None can fill
Your vacant place.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER AND FAMILY.

In loving memory of my dear wife and our dear mother, Minnie Alfeld (nee Hebl), who departed this life three years ago, May 23, 1916.

None can fill your vacant place.
Sadly missed by her husband,
HENRY ALFELD AND DEAR CHILDREN.

In sad but loving remembrance of Willelmina Thesse, who departed this life one year ago, May 24, 1918.
A rose when it is sweetest and fairest in the end is killed by the frost.
And the flower that is dearest and rarest is the method first.
You are not forgotten, mother, dear, nor ever will you be,
As long as our lives and memories last we will remember thee.
Sadly missed by little daughter, parents, brother and sisters.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

P. A. Q.—Write War Department. YOURS TRULY.—Pay tax on your piano. Report to City Assessor.

JACK.—Charles K. Harris, Columbia Theater Bldg., New York. Harry von Tilzer, 222 W. 46th st., New York. Irving Berlin, 1571 Broadway, New York.

A READER.—Landlord cannot increase your rent unless you are willing to stand for it by agreeing to same, so the notice sent you, date of delivery, etc., does not matter. Tender usual rent when he calls to collect which he is bound to accept or have no standing in court.

ANXIOUS.—Your wife being sick would not prevent landlord from suing you at once for the rent or possession, but said he is advised heretofore and on renting the place you must continue to do so in future or landlord can take action against you and recover demand for such advance payment.

ANXIOUS MOTHER.—Your query is not explicit enough. Do you intend to file the suit in Illinois or Missouri? In Illinois your claim for damages must be filed within 2 yrs. of date of the injury. What do you mean by affidavits? If the plaintiff is unable to attend trial and depositions may be presented. These must be obtained in a manner outlined by the Court, who, as a rule designates who shall preside when the depositions are taken.

G. A. R.—Sometimes molting of canary extends into autumn. Canary Bird Cut from a bamboo fishing pole a piece as long as you like, stick the bird is roosting on and ½ inch thick (or in diameter), not smaller, fill or cut 6 or 8 cuts crossways ½ inch apart, so that there will be that many holes on the under side of the stick when you put it in the cage. The first week the bird should be taken out every day and knocked endways on something hard over a bowl of boiling water in which has been mixed a little carbolic acid. This makes sure that the little pests are killed outright. All sweeping should be burned at once in all seasons. You will be surprised how many hundreds of insects a bird can harbor. It will be 2 or 3 weeks before most of them are gone. Another week a little sulphur in the drinking water, take away a hemp seed and give a bit of egg yolk with red pepper in it. Use the dusting pan. Give him fresh water and put some sand in the cage. Hang a bit of cotton from the top; the lice will fill it; then you can burn it. Above are recommendations as to any treatment for canaries.)

MIKE.—U. S. Secret Service: The Chief of the Civil Service Bureau at Washington has charge of that department of the Government throughout the U. S., which is divided into districts with main offices of the following cities: New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburg, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago, San Francisco, Minneapolis, Seattle, Baltimore, Charlotte, N. C.; New Orleans, La.; Birmingham, Ala. Each district is superintended by an "operative in charge," a stationery, while all other employes, for reasons best known to the department, are kept moving about from one district to another, according to the demands of the work. To secure a position in this department it is necessary to make application on the required form to the Civil Service Commissioners, Washington, D. C., which is filed with the Secretary of the Treasury. In case your application meets with approval an examination of a personal character is conducted by the chief. If you are again successful you are in line for appointment as "substitute" for a probation. This appointment is for 90 days. Should your work prove satisfactory in this preliminary test you would be made a permanent employe of the department with wages ranging from $3 to $7 a day, according to your ability. The average wage is $5 a day.

D. N. B.—Elderberry wine: Ripe fruit, 5 pounds; soft, clear water, 1 gallon; sugar, 4 pounds; cream of tartar dissolved in boiling water, 11-4 ounces; brandy, 2 or 3 per cent. The fruit for wine should preferably be gathered in fine weather, and not until it has arrived at a proper state of maturity as evinced by its flavor when tasted, for otherwise wine will be harsh, disagreeable, unwholesome. Then remove stalks and rejected fruit, and well bruise it. The bruised fruit is then placed in vessel with strainer over top hole to keep back husks and seeds when juice is drawn off. The water is now added and the whole macerated 30 to 40 hours, during which time it is frequently stirred up with suitable wooden stirrer. The liquid portion is then drawn off; the sugar, tartar, etc., are now added to the mixed liquor and the whole is well stirred. Temperature being suitable (generally 75 to 85 degrees), fermentation soon commences. In about three weeks fermentation will have ceased and wine be settled. Then bottle. Bottles should be wired and corks covered with tinfoil. * * * Elder-blossom wine: Pick one quart dry blossoms from stems and put into stone jar. Make syrup of 3 pounds of sugar and 1 gallon water and, when boiling hot, pour over blossoms. Let stand until lukewarm, add one yeast cake; let this stand three days; strain through cheesecloth; put back into jar and add 1 pound seeded raisins chopped fine and juice of one lemon. Set away, closely covered, until October, then rack off. It is ready for use at once. (Phone dancing master for new dances, etc.)

O. J. B.—Telegraphed from Cambridge, Mass., 15 yrs ago: Prof. William R. Dwight of the geological department of Harvard has been studying the geology of the great lake region, especially about Niagara Falls, and has reached the conclusion that if the present tendencies continue the time will come when most of Chicago will be submerged. Unless, he adds as a proviso, the people of Chicago continue rapidly enough to raise the city above the Lake Michigan level. He began a lecture in the university with a description of the forge hewed out by the Niagara cataract, and then gave an account of the early character of the Great Lakes region, of successive advances and retreats of the laurentide ice sheets, and of the gradual evolution of the Great Lakes and their present system of drainage. Originally the lakes drained into the Mississippi through what is now the Illinois River; but with the gradual progress of physiographic changes, the northern outlet became lower than that at Chicago, and the flow followed out that through one channel and then through another, finally finding its way over the retreating escarpment between Erie and Ontario through which it has cut the Niagara gorge. Estimating that the cataract has taken about 10,000 yrs. to cut back to its present location, although this estimate is uncertain owing to the carrying volume of the river with certain changes in the drainage system, we might conclude that when it is relatively short time the falls will make their way to Lake Erie, when that body of water will be drained out and the falls will disappear. About this, however, there are serious doubts. Observations within the last 60 yrs. have shown that the country north of Lake Michigan is slowly rising. Before Niagara has cut back to Lake Erie this rise may have progressed so that the St. Lawrence outlet will again become higher than that at Chicago. Then the immense volume of water now pouring over Niagara falls will be turned back upon Chicago, and, as speaker added, St. Louis may then get some consolation for the unexpected ascendancy of the Illinois metropolis.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving remembrance of my dear wife, mother and grandmother, Amelia K. Mueller (nee Nerzinger), who departed this life three years ago, May 28, 1916.

Silently the shades of evening
Gather round the lonely door,
While alone I sit thinking
Of that sweet smile I'll see no more.
But some day I hope to meet her,
And this aching void to fill;
But now all I have is memory
And that grave on a distant hill.
Sadly missed by
HENRY A. MUELLER AND FAMILY.

In loving remembrance of Rudolph Heimann, who departed this life one year ago, May 28, 1918:
In the graveyard, softly sleeping,
Where the flowers softly wave,
Lies the one we love so dearly
In his lonely, silent grave.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER FATHER AND SWEETHEART,
CATHERINE SCHNELL.

BELMONT'S dance talks: come and see me and lets have a heart-to-heart talk about your wonderful method of teaching ballroom dancing. Go and visit some of the so- called dancing schools, watch the way they teach and then come and visit us. You will enroll at once and visit us. You will see that we are the leader of all schools in the art of dancing. We don't use a method that has long passed into oblivion, but a modern and up-to-the-minute system. We guarantee to teach you the tickletoe and all the late dances as soon as they come out. Each pupil receives individual attention. We don't receive you and push you like a bunch of cattle. Your age makes no difference. We teach results. Classes Monday, Wednes- day and Friday nights for beginners and ad- vanced pupils; private lessons any hour of the day or night. Just think, 12 lessons for $3; they are worth $20. Belmont School. Odeon Bldg.

RAISE RABBITS

BUT BE SURE OF A STEADY MARKET.

I have the only rabbitry in St. Louis conducted as a sole business, with a completely equipped office and motor truck for deliveries and for assembling stock raised for me. Don't ask me other people about my proposition, but write or call, because secondhand information is unreliable. I furnish magnificent Rufus reds and giant breeding stock at right price and buy all you raise at 30c to 60c per pound. Send 10c for Breeders' Instruction Booklet; contract price list, etc.

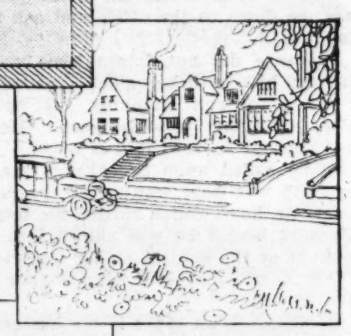
"At Dawn the Answer Flashed on Me!"



I Now Own a $25,000 Home

Go Traveling Whenever I Want to

—And Live in Luxury

How a young man jumped from $30 a week to $50,000 a year. His remarkable success he attributes to the way he uses his will. "What I've done, I believe anyone can do," he says.

THERE are only a few $50,000 jobs—yet of all the men in this country it is difficult to find enough to fill the few big jobs available. There are plenty of men for the $25-a-week positions—but the thousand-dollar-a-week openings "go begging." How this young man trained himself for earnings of $50,000 a year is one of the most interesting chapters in the annals of even present-day fortune making. This is the story told me, almost word for word by the young man who did it.

"Three short years ago I was $5000 'in the hole'—and earning $30 a week. I had a wife and two children to support, and I used to worry myself sick about the future.

"Today—it seems like a dream—all my troubles are over. I am worth $200,000—enough to keep me and my family in comfort for the rest of our lives. I own two automobiles. My children go to private schools. I have just purchased, for cash, a $25,000 home. I go hunting, fishing, motoring, traveling, whenever I care to.

"LET me say in all sincerity that what I have done I believe anyone can do. I am only an average man—not 'brilliant'—have never gone to college—my education is limited. I know at least a hundred men who knew more than I, who are better educated and better informed—and their earnings probably average less than $50 weekly while my income is over $1000 weekly. I mention this to show that earning capacity is not governed by the extent of a man's education—to encourage those who have not had the advantage of a comprehensive education.

"What, then, is the secret of my success? Let me tell you how it came about.

"One day, about three years ago, something happened, that woke me up to what was wrong with me. It was necessary for me to make a decision on a matter which was of little consequence. I knew in my heart what was the right thing to do, but something held me back. I said one thing, then another; I decided one way, then another. I couldn't for the life of me make the decision I knew was right.

"I lay awake most of that night thinking about the matter—not because it was of any great importance in itself, but because I was beginning to discover what was wrong with me. Along toward dawn the answer flashed on me and I resolved to make an experiment. I decided to cultivate my will power, believing that if I did this I would not hesitate about making decisions—that when I had an idea I would have sufficient confidence in myself to 'put it over'—that I would not be afraid of myself, or of things or of others. I felt that if I could smash my ideas across I would soon make by presence felt. I knew that heretofore I had always begged for success—had always stood, hat in hand, depending on others to give me the things I desired. In short, I was controlled by the will of others. Henceforth, I determined to have a strong will of my own—to demand and command what I wanted.

"WITH this new purpose in mind, I applied myself to finding out something more about will power, and in my investigation I encountered the works of Professor Frank Channing Haddock. To my amazement and delight, I discovered that this eminent scientist, whose name ranks with James, Bergson and Royce, had completed the most thorough and constructive study of will power ever made. I was astonished to read his statement, 'The will is just as susceptible of development as the muscles of the body!' My question was answered! Eagerly I read further—how Dr. Haddock had devoted twenty years to this study—how he had so completely mastered it that he was actually able to set down the very exercise by which anyone could develop the will, making it a bigger, stronger force each day, simply through an easy, progressive course of training.

"It is almost needless to say that I at once began to practice the exercises formulated by Dr. Haddock, and I need not recount the extraordinary results that I obtained almost from the first day. You already know the success my developed power of will has made for me.

"People sometimes worry because they cannot remember or because they cannot concentrate. The truth is, will power will enable them to do both. The man who can use his will can not only concentrate and remember but can make use of these two faculties. And I want to leave this one word with you—no knowledge, no plan, no idea is worth a penny unless it is used—and it cannot be used unless someone's power of will does it!"

PROFESSOR HADDOCK'S rules and exercises in will training have been placed in book form, and I have been authorized by the publishers to say that any reader who cares to examine his startling book on will power may do so without sending any money in advance. In other words, if after a week's reading you do not feel that "Power of Will" is worth $3, the sum asked, return it and you will owe nothing.

When you receive your copy for examination I suggest that you first read the articles on "The law of great thinking; How to develop analytical power; How to guard against errors in thought; How to drive from the mind unwholesome thoughts; How to develop fearlessness; How to use the mind in sickness; How to acquire a dominating personality."

It is interesting to note that among the 225,000 owners who have read and praised "Power of Will" are such prominent men as Judge Ben B. Lindsey; Supreme Court Justice Parker; Wu Ting Fang, ex-U. S. Chinese Ambassador; Gov. McKelvie of Nebraska; Assistant Post-Master-General Britt; General Manager Christeson of Wells Fargo Express Co.; E. St. Elmo Lewis; Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, and thousands of others.

As a first step in will training, I would suggest immediate action in this matter before you. It is not even necessary to write a letter. Use the blank form below, if you prefer, addressing it to the Pelton Publishing Company, 134-J Wilcox Block, Meriden, Conn., and the book will come by return mail. This one act may mean the turning point of your life as it has meant to me and to so many others.

Pelton Publishing Company,
134-J Wilcox Block, Meriden, Conn.

I will examine a copy of "Power of Will" at your risk. I agree to remit $3 or remail the book in 5 days

Why an African Skull and a Caliph's Koran Appear in the Peace Treaty With Germany

In one case a Teutonic scientist raided a graveyard and took away the cranium of a venerated ruler whose tomb was a talisman of good luck—Copy of Koran was 1300 years old and was prepared by Mahomet's son-in-law and successor :: :: ::

"Germany is to restore within six months the Koran of the Caliph Othman, formerly at Medina, to the King of the Hedjaz I, and the skull of the Sultan Okwawa, formerly in German East Africa, to his Britannic Majesty's Government. * * * and agrees to return to China at her own expense all the astronomical instruments seized in 1900 and 1901."

* * * * * * * *

GERMANY, throttled in her mad ambition to subjugate and fasten her kultur and her Hohenzollernism on the rest of mankind, is now paying the price. As the preceding extracts from the peace treaty indicate, not an item of loot can be retained by her. In addition to lands and treasures that have a tangible value, she must restore to the newly formed kingdom of Hedjaz the Koran of the Caliph Othman, the intimate friend and kinsman of Mahomet, the founder and prophet of Islam; she must hand back to the British the skull of the Sultan Okwawa, who in his day was a commanding force in East Africa, before anyone had a chance to take profane liberties with that very essential part of his corporeal self. What Germany has been doing with these relics the treaty does not tell, and there has been much speculation on the subject; but the dictum of the Allied Powers is that she must hunt them up and make restitution within a period of six months. If Othman's Koran was given to Turkey to bolster up the cause of German kultur, she will have to see her late ally and get possession in order to obey the terms of the mandate.

Both relics have a sentimental value of great weight with countries which, despite the activities of Christian missionaries, still persist in following the tenets set forth by the Prophet Mahomet in his Koran; and in the Hedjaz country as well as the domain of the late Sultan Okwawa, Mohammedanism is the prevailing religious belief and its devotees do not want a nation professing Christianity to hold on to any of their venerated articles.

The National Geographic Society, which has been looking into the disappearance of Okwawa's skull, has recently issued a bulletin which throws much light on what was regarded at first as a mystery, as very few persons outside of the African explorers and scientists had ever heard of this particular African. The report of the National Geographic Society shows that he was looked upon as a sort of a second-rate edition of Mahomet or Confucius, and was regarded with much awe. His clansmen were quite numerous, and when he died there was great lamentation in the land he had ruled with such wisdom and piety.

His body was placed in a tomb, where it rested under a guard, the people holding firmly to the belief that it had a talismanic value and that they would be received with favor in the next world if they but preserved the skeletal remains against desecration. The watchers made good on their task until 1907, when along came an expedition financed largely by the German Government and headed by Adolphus Frederick, Duke of Mecklenburg, presumably to make a study of the African possessions under German protectorate.

Believing that this skull, so treasured by the fanatical natives, might be utilized to some advantage in the preparation for "der tag," this body of distinguished Huns just dug it up and after separating it from the other remnants of Okwawa, carried it back to Berlin. There were a great many other skulls in the burial ground of the colony and a number of these were also carried away, according to a book treating of the expedition issued later by the Duke. In this work he told of the collection and removal of 1017 skulls and 4000 other ethnographica. He commented on the generosity of the natives, but noted that "yet the purchase of ethnographical material met with obstinate opposition." He explained that each clan specially reveres some totem, believing that the spirit of the deceased enters these objects of devotion. He mentions in addition to human skulls, the toad, crested crane, the leopard and the goat.

It is worthy of note, however, that no demand was made on Germany for the return of any of the other ethnographical specimens. The natives of that district of East Africa wanted the skull of the departed Okwawa, which had been taken off in the big crop gathered by the Duke of Mecklenburg 12 years ago, while the land was under the Kaiser's protection. As the colony now passes to British protection, the Government of Westminster will quiet the fears of the natives by restoring the skull; but as all African skulls look alike, care must be exercised that the right one be taken from the Mecklenburg collection. As the Duke has probably lost his ducal job by this time, he may not care to retain the Okwawa talisman, and besides, it did not bring him good luck.

And the astronomical instruments seized by the German soldiers in Pekin during the Boxer uprising in 1900-01, they, too, must be taken out of the Potsdam Gardens, where they now serve as ornaments, and be handed back to the republic of China.

When the German troops went out to repress the Boxers they had an inspiration furnished in an historic address delivered by the Kaiser himself, and when they got through they just helped themselves to instruments in the big Oriental observatory that were produced nearly 300 years ago and held in high estimation by the Celestial astronomers. When China saw a chance to force restitution through the grand court at Versailles, she promptly asked the return of her property. Hence, the grand garden at Potsdam will shortly be stripped of these unique souvenirs.

When Germany complies with the other mandate and restores to the King of the Hedjaz the Koran formerly owned by the Caliph Othman, the scholars in the new kingdom will find a well thumb-marked book; that is, if the Germans hand back the real article. For of all the Caliphs following in the wake of Mahomet, Othman was a consistent and conscientious student of the Prophet's revelations. He was, according to most histories, the least selfish of the disciples of the founder of Mohammedanism, and besides, he was the son-in-law in a double sense, having married two of Mahomet's daughters, though he was only a few years younger than his father-in-law. He accompanied Mahomet on both of his flights, or hegiras, the first into Abyssinia and the second to Medina. He had the confidence of Islam's founder to a very high degree and his advice and counsel were often sought by the Moslem prophet.

The Koran of Caliph Othman is one of the holiest things imaginable to the followers of Mahomet. It is, in fact, as sacred to the Moslem as would be one of the books of the Bible in the original script to the Christian. It was one of the three copies especially prepared under the direction of the venerable Othman himself, soon after Mahomet was placed in his tomb. Of the three copies made, two were sent away from Medina, the other remaining in the mosque for the Caliph and his successors. The book was stolen by Enver Pasha and his troops just before Gen. Allenby progressed that far in his famous march on the Holy Land. When this remarkable volume passes to Husaian the First King of the Hedjaz, it will greatly enlarge his influence as the political successor of Mahomet and draw to his support the faithful throughout the world.

Othman was 70 years of age when he was proclaimed Caliph and he assumed this high rank at a perilous time, as he was the immediate successor of Omar, who, after an illustrious reign replete with victories for the Moslem cause, fell a victim to a fire-worshipping fanatic. Though Medina was filled with intrigue, Othman, despite his years, his harem and other worries, took up the work of pushing the new creed with such proselyting weapons as fire and sword and held the leadership for 12 years, when he was murdered and his body thrown into the streets by those who envied his power. Chief among the conspirators who inflamed the public mind were his supposed friends Merwan, who had been his secretary, and Ayesha, one of Mahomet's widows. Ayesha was the daughter of Abu Beker, the first Caliph following the death of the prophet, and of all the women in the Moslem court, she was the beloved of Islam's creator. Despite her high standing with Mahomet she was a dangerous, designing woman and had much to do with the tragic death of the pious Othman, who refused to question the loyalty of those who surrounded him and on whom he relied for friendly direction. Following Othman's violent end, Ayesha professed to be overwhelmed in grief and she even sought to lead those who demanded blood as satisfaction for the Caliph's murder.

Caliph Othman was born in the year A. D. 573, just four years after Mahomet, and the two were close friends from their childhood days. Othman did much to spread the light of the new cult and backed up all the miracious aspects of the proselytism. He substantiated all the marvelous tales associated with the revelations which Mahomet had ascribed direct to Allah, and was a most important factor in the wonderful spread of the Eastern creed. He was foremost in the work of making converts and pushing the spiritual and material influence as well as the territorial conquests for Islam. He was a sincere believer in the Koran and the pilgrimage and found time during the 12 years of his caliphate to continue his studies, preferring the spiritual side of the new faith to its more material interest, associated with the conquest of additional lands and peoples. In the days of his journeys with Mahomet, the prophet always spoke of him with the utmost affection and paid much heed to his counsels. Illustrating his high regard for his disciple, Mahomet used to say: "Each thing has its mate, and each man his associate; my associate in paradise is Othman."

When Mahomet died, in A. D. 632, in the eleventh year of the hegira, Medina went into a state of uproar at the announcement. Many of the more fanatical mussulmen could not quite understand how it was possible for one who had been held up to them as the mouthpiece of Allah to do such a mortal thing as to lie down and die, just like any other person who had no such close relationship with Moslem's Supreme Power. It was then that the four greatest men of Medina assembled in conclave to select a successor to the departed prophet. Confusion and mutterings filled the places of the assemblage in Medina, and there were flashes from the highly polished scimitars that were freely brandished by their owners. Though Bolshevism was then unheard of, there were indications that a disturbing propaganda was at work among the frenzied masses, who had been aroused by the new creed and its loot of conquest. The quartet consisted of Abu Beker, Omar, Othman and Ali, and each one was related in some way to the dead prophet. The great warrior, Osama Ibn Zeid, was called in and told to hold the populace in check, with as little demonstration as possible. He did this by planting the Moslem standard in front of the house of mourning and posting troops in different parts of the city. Abu Beker was then chosen Caliph, with the understanding that Omar would come next in the order of succession.

That woman's influence went a long way even in the earliest days of this cult was shown in the resourceful activity of Ayesha, the daughter of Abu Beker, and the favorite of the Mahomet menage. She was a vigorous supporter of her father's claims and she was determined above all things to suppress the strong movement that was under way for Ali, aided and abetted by his brilliant and beautiful wife, Fatima. Much of Ayesha's hatred of Ali was due to the credence he had given to the charge of incontinence that had been placed against her, and which failed of establishment. Ali was told when his supporters continued to caucus after the election of Abu, that his house would be burned with all of its inmates if he did not speedily concur in the selection of Ayesha's father. This threat stopped all further activity of Fatima, who was just about getting her campaign in splendid working order.

Following the violent death of Omar, who succeeded after the comparatively short reign of Abu Beker, there was a long conference before the title was formally bestowed upon Othman. The Council was composed of Ali, Othman, Telha Ibn Obeid'allah (another of Mahomet's sons-in-law)), Zobeir, Abda'lrahman Ibn Awf and Saad Ibn Abu Wakkas. They had all traveled at different times with Mahomet and were styled "His Companions." The conference offered the command to Ali, but loaded down the tender with such conditions that he declined. It was required of him that he govern according to the Koran, the traditions of Mahomet and the laws laid down by the two preceding Caliphs, Abu Beker and Omar. Ali agreed to subscribe to all the traditions and the Koran, but he resolutely declined to be bound by the laws of the two Caliphs,

The Girl in His House

"You are Mr. Armitage?"

"I am."

"Thanks. Good evening."

The stranger began to walk away again, but this time Armitage caught him roughly by the sleeve.

"You will explain to me, or I'll hand you over to the police.'

The man threw back the lapel of his coat and displayed a silver badge.

"You are a detective?"

"I am. Satisfied?"

"I certainly am not. What I demand to know is the meaning."

"And I don't propose to tell you."

"Let me see that badge again."

The stranger complied. The badge was the insignia of a famous private detective agency.

"If you want to ask any more questions, Mr. Armitage, go down to the office and ask them of the chief. Good-night."

Armitage did not detain him further, but moodily watched him until he vanished around the first corner. A detective, and watching the house every night! What could that possibly mean? Here was a mystery that must be investigated at once.

So he called upon the agency the following morning. He was kept waiting in the reception room for nearly an hour, which ruffled his temper considerably. When at length he was shown into the chief's office he went at the subject rather undiplomatically.

"Mr. Armitage, this is none of your business," he was bluntly told.

"I believe I can make it my business."

"How?" imperturbably. "You no longer have any legal interest in the house."

Armitage thought for a moment. "Supposing I should tell you that I had?"

"Will you be good enough to explain?"

"I'll explain fully if I have your word that my explanation will not go beyond that door."

The chief twisted his cigar from one corner of his mouth to the other.

"Go ahead. A confidence in this office is inviolable."

When Armitage completed his tale the chief threw up his hands.

"Sold the house and skipped with the cash! Well, I thought I knew every trick on the calendar, but this certainly is a new one to me. Why don't you fight it?"

"The girl's father bought the house in good faith. The only hope I have is to get to Bordman."

"We could find him for you."

"I don't want the present incumbent to know anything about it."

"Some world, isn't it? What do you want to know?"

"Why your men are watching that house."

"Rest assured that we are her friends also."

"But what's the object?"

"I'll tell you what, Mr. Armitage. I'll admit that you have just a little moral right to ask questions. I am acting in the interests of my client, who is wholly within his rights. Our actions mean no harm to the young lady you are interested in. Quite the contrary."

"Well, how long has this espionage been going on?"

"Since the purchase of the house. This office is always on the side of law and justice. The young lady is not in any danger whatever. In fact, she knows nothing."

"Suppose I acquaint her with the fact?"

"That's rather a poser. Our orders are that she must not know."

"Satisfy all my doubts, and she shall know nothing from me."

"Until Jan. 1 we are her legal guardians, as you might say. Our business is to see that her servants are honest, what they do and how they act, to note who comes and goes, where she goes and what she does and with whom she makes friends, and to send in our report fortnightly."

"Her father?"

"There you have touched the queer side of this affair. I don't know who my client is. A fat certified check was sent to us in April with instructions. Our client knew what our terms were, and the check covered everything up to Jan. 1. Our reports are sent to the Italian consulate in New Orleans, whence no doubt they are forwarded to our client's actual address. You have figured in a number of these reports, Mr. Armitage. And there you are. Since this is an honorable affair, open and above board, we have naturally made no attempt to obtain either the name or the address of our client; but, like yourself, we suspect him to be her father."

"I am perfectly satisfied," said Armitage. "If I was a bit abrupt, my apologies."

"Don't let that worry you. The job has had us all thinking. We didn't know but the young lady was in some unknown danger. You spoke of her father. Who is he? We know his name, of course, but not what he is."

"Hubert Athelstone, an explorer and archeologist."

Reaching for "Who's Who," the chief searched diligently among the A's. He shook his head and pressed a button. "The English 'Who's Who,'" he said to the clerk. But the second search was equally fruitless.

"That doesn't really matter. An archeologist has to discover a King's tomb to get into those books. On the other hand he's pretty sure to be a member of the Royal or National Geographical Society. Come with me into the next room; I've got a real library in there."

But Hubert Athelstone belonged neither to the Royal nor the National; he was an outsider.

* * * * * * * *

Doris grew tired of tossing on her pillows. So she got out of bed, put on her peacock kimono, her slippers, and sat down on the hassock by the window in the dark. The first real snowstorm was making headway. Beyond the street lamp the flakes were feathery white, this side they were black and shadowy. She wondered what time it was.

She was very unhappy. She was always comparing her own existence with that of those about her. The

His name was now upon the door, and he never looked at it without a tonic thrill of pride.

Burlinghams were nice and their friends were nice, but her association with them only strengthened her sense of loneliness. They all had "people," and most of them had known one another since childhood. She had no such friendships. She had formed friendships during her school days, but all these had been broken and never reformed. Those occasional visits from parents! How she had watched the greetings, sadly, with an envy that would not be smothered! And the holiday boxes! Regularly she used to receive a check. But checks could come any time; there was nothing Christmasy about slips of paper that represented money. She had wanted boxes like the others, and boxes had never come.

Still, she had been happy in those days. Beautiful Florence! The roses in the spring up the road to Fiesole, the afternoon drives in the lovely Cascine, and the rides into the Tuscany hills! Il grilly!—the lucky crickets! Each Maytime she had gone with her companions into the park and caught a single cricket for luck and put him into a funny wire cage, and night after night he would saw away at his fiddle (whether in rage or in happiness she never knew) until she set him free. Il grillo! That's what the sister called her.

She choked and rested her head on the cold window sill—and raised it almost immediately. Somewhere in the house the floors, the wooden floors, were talking. She listened intently. The sound came from above, directly overhead, from the storeroom on the servants' floor. Mark!" it said; and after a little while it said, "Hark!" again. Someone was in the storeroom.

She rose to her feet, went over to her bureau and armed herself with an electric torch and a small automatic. She then opened her door carefully and stepped out into the hall. There was enough light from the front window to guide her to the stairs. She was afraid, but she went on. Hadn't her father always told her to go on when she felt fear? To love truth was easy, to be kind was equally easy, but this thing called fear, which insisted upon recurring, which must be conquered and reconquered eternally! A draft of cold air struck her. She was conscious of it, but did not pause to investigate the source.

She mounted the stairs slowly and lightly. She did not want any of them to call out a warning, though they were all more or less talky, these stairs. She held the torch in her left hand and the automatic in her right, tensely. Her knees were shaking and she possessed a great longing to run back to her room and hide under the bedclothes. But that invisible force which had always been behind her—a compelling pride in the observance of her father's law of conduct—made it impossible for her to turn. What if he should learn some day that she had run away in a crisis? So she went on, the bravest of the brave.

In her travels she had learned how to use firearms—another injunction which had been laid down by that imperialistic parent of hers. She could shoot passably, but always in horror if at some living target.

She decided to move in the dark, not to turn on the light of the torch until the very last moment.

The storeroom door was open. There was a wide circle of light on the ceiling. A shadow rather than a human being crouched before the wall. She saw a black square hole. A safe in the wall. Here was a thief, taking something that doubtless belonged to Mr. Armitage. For her own sake she was a bit of a coward, but for the sake of someone she liked she was as brave as a lion. Click! went the key on her torch.

"Stand up!"

The burglar, a cap drawn over his eyes and a dark handkerchief hiding the lower half of his face, obeyed—less in terror than in fascination—and silently drew back from a box he had withdrawn from the safe. There was enough illumination from his own upstanding torch to outline her face and bring out the gorgeous patterns on her kimono.

"Hold your hands out in front of you!"

Again the man obeyed.

"Come out. Now walk toward those stairs, and don't lower your arms."

At the head of the stairs the burglar was ordered to march down, warned that the slightest suspicious movement would have serious results for him. She wondered if the man understood voices. Hers wasn't anything like her own, it was dry and thin and seemed to come out of nowhere, certainly not her throat. She kept the light of her torch focused squarely upon his back.

Now these stairs were the old-fashioned, circular kind. She did not observe that the man was quietly taking two steps to her one. As he reached the beginning of the lower curve he made a swift break for liberty. Wide-eyed, she fired. The shock of the explosion caused her to drop the torch. It bumped down the steps, casting grotesque globes of light, now on the wall, now on the ceiling, now along the spindles of the banisters, and again into her own face.

Suddenly everything went dark.

La-may Face Powder Does Not Contain Any Rice Powder

Now you can use a pure face powder that is guaranteed not to injure the most delicate baby skin. It will not cause enlarged pores, blackheads and irritations. And, it really stays on better than any other face powder. It does not contain white lead or starchy rice powder (Poudre de Riz) to make it stick. White lead poisons the skin and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that encourages enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder pimples. The specialist who makes this improved powder used a medicinal ingredient that doctors use to heal the skin. In fact, this new powder helps to prevent and reduce enlarged pores and pimples. It is also astringent, discouraging flabbiness, crow's feet and wrinkles. Because it is pure and because it stays on so well this La-may powder (French, Poudre L'Ame) is now used by over a million American women. The large size is only fifty cents and the trial size is twenty-five cents. Remember, La-may is guaranteed absolutely pure. Five thousand dollars reward is offered any chemist who finds it contains any white lead or rice powder. Refuse substitutes. Here's a Factory Which Has Been Run as an Industrial Democracy for Two Years

All management in the hands of a Senate, House of Representatives and Cabinet—Twenty-dollar-a-week employe gets divident of $6.00 every two weeks when business is good—Men co-operate in increasing production because their own profits then become larger -:- -:-

WHEN rugged steel workers and coal diggers from Tennessee hopped off a Long Island train at Brooklyn Manor Station, Richmond Hill, a few afternoons ago and walked up the hill to the Demuth pipe factory to watch the proceedings of the Senate and the House of Representatives. At the factory door they stated their business to the gate keeper, who admitted them to the Senate chamber on the third floor of the factory building. The Senate was in session, so the visitors, with hats off, tiptoed to seats on the visitors' benches, and listened in wide-eyed amazement to the debates, as the order of business proceeded. Later they sat through part of a session of the House of Representatives.

To those men from Tennessee it was the first unfolding of the practical application of a new industrial democracy where Senators and regularly elected Representatives in shirt sleeves, overalls and working aprons had assembled to legislate and to frame laws governing, not the conduct of a nation, but the manufacture of tobacco pipes and the hours of labor, the wages, working conditions, hygiene, education and welfare of all the 900 factory employes. They had been sent here all the way from Tennessee as specially appointed delegates from the Tennessee Coal and Iron Works to look into the working of this experimental Industrial Democracy. They are returning to present a report favoring the application of a similar method of home rule management to the mines and mills where they are employed.

Inquiries concerning the Demuth "Houses of Parliament," as they were called, have been received from Canadian manufacturing centers, with a view to their adoption there. In this country labor and capital may be said, figuratively, to have an eye glued to the keyhole of the Demuth congressional chamber, watching for developments and giving it the test of time in order to judge whether it is going to be a success or not.

"It is a success already," President Leopold Demuth assured me after the adjournment of the House of Representatives. "Look at the facts. The Senate and House of Representatives were organized in this factory two years ago. We have not had a strike since. We have no labor troubles. The men work under conditions formulated by themselves, and, speaking from a practical business point of view, I don't see how those condition can be improved upon. Efficiency is at the top notch.

The men work under conditions formulated by themselves.

"Some time ago the employes decided that they were observing too many holidays. Idle machines and lost time were clogging the departments and interfering with their business. Our employes refer to this producing plant as 'their business,' and that's exactly what we want them to do. The interference to business they complained of was resulting in a falling off in factory production and a corresponding decrease in bonuses and percentage figures. So, through their Senate and House of Representatives, they had laws passed cutting down the number of holidays in the factory. The employes did that, bear in mind, not the firm. We're satisfied with what they did, and so are they. No man in the factory can nurse a grievance long enough to hurt himself or to infect others. If he has a complaint to make, or if he knows of a factory condition which might be improved upon, he takes it up, not with his foreman, but with his representative in the House. There is one regularly elected member of the House of Representatives for every 30 employes, and it is the first duty of each Representative to take good care of the interests of his 30 constituents, and you can rest assured that each of them does it, too."

Industrial Democracy as founded in the Demuth factory has for a framework a Cabinet, a Senate and a House of Representatives. It is patterned closely after the Government of the United States. The Cabinet consists of the president and executive officers of the company. Foremen and heads of departments constitute the Senate. They are not elected but are appointed by the Cabinet. An employe promoted to a foremanship or to the head of a department automatically becomes a Senator and his appointment to that legislative office is made at the time of his promotion. The House of Representatives is an elective body. Members are elected to serve one year and are eligible for re-election. The membership of the House is based on one Representative for each 30 factory employes. Any employe who has worked for one year in the factory, who speaks English and is absolutely "on the square," is eligible for election to the House. It may be added that at election time there is no dearth of candidates.

The workmen are even paid for their time in going to school.

Let's take a look in at the Senate while it is in session. It meets every Thursday afternoon at 1:30 and adjourns promptly at 3:30. The Senate Chamber serves many purposes. Ordinarily it is a part of the stock room. From 12 to 1 it is the dining hall, furnished with chairs and long wooden tables and dotted with palms, efficiency charts, Liberty Loan posters and, being in Brooklyn, the inevitable rubber plant.

There is an average of 30 Senators in attendance at every weekly session. The immaculate head salesman sits alongside the unkempt foreman in blue jeans. The assistant factory manager comes up from his office and sits next to the boss color man. The foreman of the hand-made bits shop in khaki overalls and rolled-up sleeves is paired with the polished chief of the payroll division. Such is the Senate of the new Industrial Democracy.

President Arthur Titeze of the Senate bustles up from his workshop and takes his place just in time to open the session at 1:30. He, too, is in his working clothes and his sleeves are rolled up to the elbow. The clerk of the Senate, the stenographer and the office-boy pages are already in their places. Down goes the president's gavel.

"The Senate will please come to order," announces Mr. Tietze during the hushed pause that follows.

From that point on the session is an ordinary one, where parliamentary procedure is observed. There is the usual roll call, adoption of minutes of the previous meeting, disposal of labor turnover and so forth. Then the Senate gets down to the business of pipes. Foremen take the floor in turn to report. In referring to the firm they use the word "we." There is no part of the firm's business, financial or otherwise, with which they are not familiar. All the books are open to them. The firm's business is "our" business and they refer to it as such. But, naturally, certain details of the firm's business, openly discussed by the Senators in session, were not intended for consumption by rival firms or even the general public.

Everything ran smoothly, denoting absence of friction in or between departments, until the Senator from the hand-made bits shop got up to explain a falling off in production in his department and a consequent holding up of the finishing department. The bits shop needed more men to run the machines in order to speed up on production.

Now, ordinarily, the answer might have been: "Go ahead and get more men." But the Senate of the Industrial Democracy doesn't do business that way. The Senators keep one eye on the firm's payroll all the time. An increased payroll means increased factory cost of production, and every time you add to the cost of production you cut down the profits and the proportionate bonus of every man, woman and boy employed in the factory. The bonuses are paid every two weeks, in a separate pay envelope and are worth having. A man earning $20 a week may reasonably expect, when the factory is working under a good head of steam, to receive an additional $6 as a bonus. That will explain why the Senate, instead of recklessly instructing the Senator from the hand-made bits shop to get more men for his department, sifted the matter until a solution was found by the passing of a motion ordering the removal of the idle machines to the floor below, where, in the silver ring shop, all the delayed work on rubber bits can be rushed through and kept up to schedule without the necessity of hiring any additional men.

In other words, a kink was taken out of the firm's business so that things could run smoothly again. Other kinks, and they are bound to occur in any business, are always being straightened out in much the same way.

The motion as passed by the Senate goes straight before the House of Representatives for concurrence and to the Cabinet for approval. As a rule any action taken by one branch of the Congress is approved by the other. In case of a hitch, a joint session straightens out the difficulty. And the Cabinet, while reserving to itself the power of veto, has never found it necessary to exercise that power or to countermand any recommendation or law passed by the houses governing the operation of the factory.

All their recommendations have been wise ones.

"On the contrary," said President Demuth, "they seem to figure things out better than we could ourselves. All their recommendations are wise, enterprising and beneficial, the result of serious deliberations and careful forethought. Moreover, they are rulings made and approved by the men themselves. The men take special pride in seeing that each of their rulings proves of advantage to all of us."

Now let us see the House of Representatives in session. The House sits immediately after the Senate adjourns and continues in session until 5 o'clock. In considering the composition of the House it is well to remember that fully 50 per cent of the 900 factory employes are foreign born. No one nation has a monopoly on pipe making and along the Demuth factory benches Russian Jews work in harmony with Austrians, Germans, Italians, English, Poles, Scandinavians and 450 native-born Americans. The foreign-born workers are as keenly appreciative of the advantages of Industrial Democracy and many of them have been elected to the House. Not a few have become foremen and are now members of the Senate. Several departments where women are employed have elected Representatives of their own sex. George Meyer is chairman of the House of Representatives. His handling of the lower house is equally as efficient as that of President Titeze in the Senate.

"The chair recognizes Mr. Labinsky; the gentleman from the sandpaper room will please take his seat," is the form of ruling employed when two or more rise at one time demanding to be heard.

In the House all details connected with the actual operation of the factory and the welfare of the employes are given careful consideration. There are committees on mechanical improvements, safety, sanitation, athletics, entertainments, programs, lunchroom, social welfare and education, besides the more serious committees dealing with labor adjustments. Several of these are joint committees, appointed from both houses.

The factory manager, F. L. Feuerbach, who was invited recently to deliver an address before the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, describing the introduction and development of the Industrial Democracy idea among the Demuth factory employes, is one of the most enthusiastic supporters of the co-operative industrial system today.

"At the outset the representive system did not work smoothly," said Mr. Feuerbach. "A few of the elected representatives did not attend the meetings—some because they did not grasp the idea, others because they were afraid they might be called on to speak and thus expose their curious English. But other members did

"Thanks. Good evening."

The stranger began to walk away again, but this time Armitage caught him roughly by the sleeve.

"You will explain to me, or I'll hand you over to the police."

The man threw back the lapel of his coat and disclosed a detective's badge.

"Come with me," he said, and after a little while it said, "Hark!" again. Someone was in the storeroom.

She rose to her feet, went over to her bureau and armed herself with an electric torch and a small automatic. She then opened her door carefully and stepped out into the hall. There was enough light from the front window to guide her to the stairs. She was afraid, but she went on. Hadn't her father always told her to go on when she felt fear? To love truth was catch the theory of representative government from the start.

"Some, of course, at first believed that the whole idea was a fake, but they were willing to be convinced; and once they had the conviction of our sincerity, they went to any length to make the experiment a success. They knew and were in touch with the mass, and they knew the mass psychology. It is true that their initial interest was purely financial. These people had no practical conceptions of democracy, and democracy in business was something entirely unknown and foreign to them, almost as much as it was to ourselves.

"Representative government meant nothing to them at the start. They had heard vaguely of various assemblies, but they never had discovered that the form of government made much difference to the individual. They simply came to work to make a living and to get as much money as possible out of their job.

"A mighty few of them realized their responsibility in returning as much as possible for the money which they took out of the business. Each man worked for himself, showing little or no concern about his neighbor in his own or the next department. Co-operation to them seemed entirely superfluous and had to be taught in a practical manner, as preaching with the labor class usually doesn't go very far. They had heard too much of that in the past and received too many promises which were subsequently not kept, and a lack of response to and confidence in preaching or ethical lessons is not their fault so much as the fault of those who are responsible for their disappointment. The practical way we found to be in our dividend system, and this is how it taught co-operation:

"A number of men desired to celebrate an Italian holiday and stayed away from work. At the next meeting of the House of Representatives it was announced that the dividend for the past two-week period would be only 12 per cent, but that it would have been higher, probably 15 per cent, had not the men taken the holiday. That is, a man who earned $20 a week, or $40 for the two-week period, received a dividend of $4.80, instead of the $6 he would have received had the dividend been 15 per cent, thereby losing $1.20 because some other fellows did not work.

"It is one thing to stay away from work knowing that only the company and yourself will lose money by your act, but it is quite a different proposition to realize that you are guilty of causing a loss of money to your fellow workers. Dividends are due to mass action and co-operation is a mass force. The mass can bring in and create co-operation as quickly as it can cause disorder.

"Our plan of paying a bonus or dividend on top of wages as an incentive for better work and a pride in the man's or woman's job and in the product which he or she manufactures is as follows:

"At the expiration of a two-week period the efficiency of the entire shop is determined by the relative value of its output to its cost of production. Standards of production and cost have been established in each department and the savings occasioned by increased production and quality of work, as well as decreased cost and overhead are shared on the 50-50 basis with our employes. Our first dividend amounted to 6 1-2 per cent and has gone as high as 17 1-2 per cent. These dividends are paid in a separate envelope marked 'employes' dividends' and represent their share of profits derived by interest and better work—a bonus upon service.

"I recall going through the plant one day during the first month we had our dividend system in operation, and I noticed on entering the sandpaper shop that one of the boys tried to attract the attention of his fellow worker, who, however, would not be disturbed. Jack insistently called to Jim until the latter finally turned around quite indignantly and said: 'Say, Jack, cut it out; you are stealing my dividends.'

"This and many similar instances showed very plainly that the folks were getting interested, and time and again we could see that the dividend envelope was quite an incentive to them, and that, in return, meant a great deal to us as far as quality and workmanship were concerned.

"After the dividend had been in operation about three or four months the House of Representatives came to the conclusion that some of the workers did not do as much as others to earn these dividends. For instance, some would stay out on Mondays and take it easy, while those in the shop were working hard and earning dividends for them. They subsequently suggested in their House of Representatives that a committee be appointed to work out rules inflicting a penalty for tardy, careless or disinterested fellow workers. The committee brought in the following recommendations, which were unanimously accepted and approved by both Senate and Cabinet and they have been in force ever since:

"'If any employe comes late or stays away without a proper excuse for one day during the two-week period, he loses one-quarter of his dividends. If this happens twice he loses half his dividends, three times, three-quarters, and if it occurs four times during the same period he loses all his dividends.'

"This plan, remember, was a suggestion from the men themselves and not a penalty imposed by the employers.

"I cannot say specifically whether or not Industrial Democracy has reduced the cost of production during the last two years. Our costs have risen, as we expected they would do, on account of the war conditions, which affected everyone else. But we are convinced that under the old system we would have had a much more rapidly rising scale of wages and considerable difficulty with our employes, all of which would have increased our costs far beyond the point to which they did rise.

"Still, even if our new form of factory government had not increased our profit by a single dollar, I would be inclined to feel that it was worth the money. It has made life more worth the living in that both our employes and ourselves as employers now occupy the most happy kind of relationship to each other. Antagonism has been entirely eliminated. We believe in our employes and they believe in us."

Although it was said at the beginning of this article that there has not been a strike at the Demuth factory since the introduction of Industrial Democracy two years ago, Assistant Factory Manager A. H. Walker recalled one instance of a near-strike.

"Four or five men in one of the departments," said Mr. Walker, "had an idea that by striking at a time when labor was scarce they could get more money. They got busy among the other men, who reported what was going on to their Representatives in the House. A special committee was appointed at once by the House to investigate the grievances of the men who advocated striking. They found it was simply a question of getting more money for their labor. The committee investigated still further and found that while the cost of living due to the war had gone up 10 per cent, the wages of the Demuth factory employes had risen 25 per cent. During the same period there had been an average increase of 11 per cent in wages throughout New York State. The committee found that the demand of the dissatisfied men for higher wages was not justified by the facts and so reported to the House. Notice to this effect was sent to the strikers and next morning they were back at work.

"The firm itself had nothing to do with the handling of this strike. The employes handled it themselves. Since then there has been no labor trouble of any kind."

One important work attended to by the Industrial Democracy is the education of the factory employes. Classes have been established where those who have been deprived of the benefits of a sound education are enabled to make up for lost time. They are even paid by the firm for attending school. Half the time they spend in school is counted as working time and paid for at the regular scale of wages. The other half they are required to contribute from their own spare time. It might also be added that the sessions of the House of Representatives and the Senate are held during working hours also. While the legislators are in session they are being paid just the same as if they were at work at their benches.

"Well . . . I don't reckon I could describe the doin's of Josh and them if I was to take all day fer it. But the long and short of it is, they jist picked up that organ and walked out with it and dumped it on to their pile of burnin' logs afore you could say 'scat,' hardly. And of all the times. . . . Well! . . . You will jist have to imagine it, I reckon.

"Hup was so dumfoundered he jist stood around with his mouth open, and when it was all over, he got up on a stump by the light of the dyin' embers, as the sayin' is, and made a speech.

"'Brotherin and sisterin,' he says, 'us that's civilized cain't afford to stop jist because they is others that ain't. I'm shore glad we helt ourselves in durin' these disgraceful proceedin's and didn't commit nothin' that we'd a-been sorry of hereafter. It's enough fer us to know that we ain't responsible fer 'em. Ever' big organization of people that ever was, has had its fanatickers—even the churches,' he says.

"Right here he happened to look my way and I ketched his eye and grinned. He stopped jist long enough fer me to see that he knowed he was a-gittin' a dose of his own medicine, and I forgived him right then and there when I seen he was brave enough to swaller it without even makin' a face. 'The great millions of people who is a-tryin' to carry on things by peaceable means, cain't afford to stop jist because they is a few millertants in the world,' he says.

"'Good old pappy,' whispers Millie, and me and her hugged each other and cried a little out on the aidge of the crowd.

"'And,' Hup was a-sayin', 'here's $3, brotherin and sisterin' toward another organ.'

"And, as he was a leavin', he comes up to me and Bud and he says to me, 'Nannie,' he says, 'if that womern suffergist ever gits around in these here parts, tell her to eb shore to come and see us. Millie and her ma would be plumb proud to entertain her,' he says. 'And I'd like to see that hoss of her'n. Good horses is shore a notion of mine,' he says. 'Maybe I could trade her out of La Belle,' he says.

"He was just so plumb cheestered that I didn't have the heart to rub it in, but Millie—him bein' her pa give her a little more rope, of course—she says: 'Pappy,' she says, 'they didn't even take it out to Effigy. You jist let 'em burn it right smack under your nose,' she says. But the way she said it! Millie is plumb cute sometimes. Her pappy, he jist kinder grinned and double half-soled his invitation fer you to visit the Milligan fambly when you was in this neck of the woods."

The Future of the Movies as Griffith Sees It

—"AND TO RETURN CERTAIN DOCUMENTS STOLEN FROM FRANCE IN 1870"

One phrase in Peace Treaty lifts veil which has hidden one of the most amazing happenings in European history—How Prussian soldiers, in 1870, hunting for firewood, came across a package of documents which Bismarck used as a club against Bavaria and other German states to force submission to the Hohenzollern will—Pledges to help Napoleon against Prussia among the papers :: :: :: :: ::

NOW that the treaty of Versailles has demanded that they restore to France the Rouher papers, stolen during the Franco-Prussian War in 1870, the veil of secrecy that was thrown round the remarkable use made of these documents by the late Prince Bismarck has been raised and all of Europe has been keenly watching for developments. The story disclosed is one of the most astounding of the many truly marvelous things that have come out of the world's greatest war. There were many reasons for keeping the contents of these papers from the people, and the wily Bismarck, who came into their possession through the sheerest accident, kept his counsel; but between times, he made telling use of the secrets involving various crowned heads in the German system of empire.

The history of these papers from the time of their removal from Paris to the home of M. Rouher at Cercay, France, and their subsequent theft and transfer to the strong box of the Iron Chancellor of the first Kaiser Wilhelm, whose rule of "blut und eisen" will never be forgotten, might be molded into a wonderful play that would sink some of the greatest of the historical dramas and tragedies into comparative insignificance.

The recent peace treaty presented to the Germans referred to these papers in this laconic style:

> The German Government is also to restore to the French Government certain papers taken by the German authorities in 1870, belonging then to M. Rouher, and to restore the French flags taken during the war of 1870 and 1871.

Thus in a few lines is the demand expressed. The nature of the documents is not even hinted at; but there was no occasion to identify them further, as Germany knows their meaning; that is, the statesmen of the shattered empire who have been closest to the Kaiser and his kulturists.

When the recent treaty was made public many expressed wonderment that such a clause should find its way into a declaration practically remaking the map of half of the world and affecting the destinies of nearly all the nations of the earth. But they did not comprehend the secret that was preserved closely in the breasts of the comparatively few statesmen who knew the story of the stolen papers and what followed in the construction of the Germanic empire. There are many men high in the affairs of the European countries who are now convinced that had these documents remained in their hiding place where the last French Emperor, Napoleon III, and his trusted Counselor, M. Rouher, intended they should stay, the war just concluded would never have occurred. In their judgment, the discovery of these documents by the Prussian soldiers in 1870 was almost as disastrous to mankind as was the traditional opening of the box of ills and other things by the mythological Pandora.

The term "blackmail" has a harsh and sinister sound, but its employment is justifiable in characterization of the use of these fateful papers that was made by the blood and iron Chancellor into whose rapacious maw they fell, following the raid of the Prussian troopers on the chateau at Cercay.

Among the documents were letters from several of the German states prior to the formation of the empire, pledging assistance to France in the event of a war with Prussia. These expressed the utmost hatred of the Prussian system and opposition to the Bismarck plan of swallowing up the smaller kingdoms to make an empire dominated by Prussia. Chief among the objecting states were Bavaria and Wurttemberg. In ignorance of the discovery of the letters in the raid at Cercay, the bitterly anti-Prussian Bray, Prime Minister of Bavaria; the equally hostile Baron von Varnbuler, Premier of the Wurttemberg kingdom, and Von Dalwigk, the Hessian Minister of State, arrived at Versailles in the closing hours of October, 1870, in response to an urgent summons from Prince Bismarck. The Prussians were then in possession of Paris, following the total collapse of the French armies, and the Iron Chancellor was hard at work on his plan of Prussianizing the rest of the German people, who had shown a preference for self-government without any dictation from the Hohenzollerns.

Previous to this summons Bismarck had sent emissaries to Munich, Stuttgart and Darmstadt to reason with the objectors and secure their consent to join the empire. Their reports were not satisfactory; they were even bitterly hostile to the Bismarck project, the Kings of Bavaria and Wurttemberg going so far as to declare that they would much prefer to abdicate and retire to private life than submit to an empire with the Prussian King as the Emperor. But that was before they discovered that the advocate of the "blut und eisen" policy had, to use an expression heard in some forms of gambling, a very impressive looking "ace in the hole." The papers filched from the chateau at Cercay had come to him at the psychological season. He "had the goods" and he made these astute statesmen of the objecting kingdoms believe that he would make use of his information, come what may, if they did not incline a favorable ear to his scheme of empire building.

There were executive sessions and, as the story has come out of France, they were told with the brutal frankness that characterized the speech of this man of iron, that he had letters written by their royal masters and themselves to Napoleon III, actually pledging help to the people of France if they invaded Germany for the purpose of crushing Prussia. It is told that following that announcement these ministers emerged from the conference room with distended eyes and drawn faces and thereupon they began to see the Bismarckian proposition in an entirely different light. There were hurried trips back to the capitals of these objecting countries, and then came submission to the Prussian will.

Even Count Beust, then Chancellor of the dual empire, who had been a bitter opponent of Prince Bismarck, changed his attitude very hurriedly, and became one of his most emphatic supporters. This conversion, it appears, was brought about after a talk with his intimate friend, Count Bray, the Bavarian Premier, who doubtless told him of the cards held by Bismarck.

Count Beust had been Prime Minister of Saxony and as the story runs had also been writing some letters which he did not wish to see printed. He had been anxious, it appears, to see France strike at Prussia in order to give the states in the south of Germany a chance to shake off the Prussian domination. Through the agency of the same letters and his threats to give them publicity, Bismarck was able to whip into line nearly every force of opposition that crossed his path. The fact that these papers were in Bismarck's safe was known to very few, and those who were taken into the Prince's confidence on the subject were not disposed, after their interview with him, to volunteer much information to others.

Naturally, the ease shown by the Iron Chancellor in bending his erstwhile opponents to his will created a great furore through Europe, but it did not astound the limited circle of French politicians that shared the confidence of Napoleon. When they learned of the capture of the Rouher papers they were quite prepared for the triumphant realization of the program mapped out by the Hohenzollern strong man.

The discovery of these papers, as the legend runs, was after all but a chance happening. Eugene Rouher, who thought he had them securely hidden in his home, known as the Chateau de Cercay, was in no way to blame for the miscue that placed such a terrible weapon in the hands of France's bitterest enemy. He was probably the strongest single factor in the entire reign of Napoleon III, and shared the confidence of his Emperor to a greater extent than any other statesman in France. So marked was the esteem in which he was held that envious ones referred to him as the Vice Emperor. Emile Zola, the popular novelist, gave him special attention in his book and made little effort at disguise. Under the pseudonym of "Son Excellence Eugene Rougon," he furnished a clear portrait of this remarkable man who was held in awe in court circles in Paris. No matter what came or happened, Rouher had access to the imperial ear at all times and was everywhere acclaimed the most formidable adviser in the Napoleonic Cabinet, and he was at all times trusted implicity by his Emperor.

As one of the organizers of the coup of December, 1851, which, for the second time, changed the status of the country from a republic to a monarchy, M. Rouher was able to appreciate the weaknesses of a throne which, born of one revolution, was always in danger of perishing before another. He knew the people of Paris and he understood the history of his country well enough to know that there would be an uprising in the gay capital if the French army met with reverses in the field.

So it was that when the war of 1870 became a certainty he began to make provision for what he considered was inevitable; he would secure the documents of state in a safe place before they could fall into the clutches of a commune or other form of revolution in the great city. His judgment had proven valuable on so many previous occasions that Napoleon readily consented when the suggestion was made that confidential papers of the empire be taken out of the palace of the Tuileries and St. Cloud and placed where they could not be disturbed by any possible uprising. Rouher knew what was contained in these papers and he realized that it would be inadvisable to leave them exposed either to a Parisian mob or a Prussian invasion. The papers were quickly packed in cases and, without attracting much attention, were dispatched to the chateau at Cercay and stored in what was considered a very secure place. Not only the letters, but the more important documents of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs were taken from the Quay d'Orsay and stored in the chateau. Events that followed completely vindicated the judgment of Rouher. France met with one defeat after another and then came the crowning disaster at Sedan, where Napoleon surrendered himself and his army to avoid annihilation. The mob in Paris broke out about this time and overthrew the empire, raiding the palace and destroying much property. The republic was proclaimed and the Emperor, Empress and other leading figures in the former Government had to flee for their lives. Rouher joined in the flight and his chateau at Cercay was left in charge of servants. At the beginning of October the Prussian army was before Paris, while King William of Prussia, Von Moltke and Bismarck, with the others of the staff, were in possession of the palace at Versailles. It was about Oct. 10 that a regiment of Mecklenburg cavalry reached Cercay and, seeing the well-kept chateau, its officers concluded to make themselves at home. The house was cold and some of the troopers were detailed to forage for wood, that the place be made comfortable for the officers. The soldiers went to the cellar, and, seeing a number of packing cases, proceeded to break them open, when the sealed

"Hup" Milligan's Conversion to "Sufferage"

By Alice Curtice Moyer-Wing.

He was "plum agin" women who burned President "in small, little town of Effigy" and build "old, rough-rived picket fence" around White House instead of "nice, smooth painted one" — But when Josh Biggs and his crowd carried off the new organ and burned it, saying it "wasn't nothin' but the voice of Satan a-squealin'," "Hup" he 'lowed that even the churches have their "fanatickers" :: ::

"WELL, about women a-votin', don't you git plumb tard and outed with people sometimes? Don't it seem quare that you have to keep a-tellin' 'em the very same old things that Susan B. Anthony had to argy about as long as she lived—and that people before her had to jist put up with er argy but the best they could? Seems like I'm plumb whipped out with 'em sometimes, but, of course, it's the never-endin' drappin' that wears away the rocks, as the sayin' is, and ever time jist one person more commences to see how foolish they air when they talk agin it, it's jist that much he'p. These here auntys don't know yit, I reckon, how they make their selves look purty nigh plumb like a last year's bird's nest with a hole punched in the bottom of it, and they's somethin' plumb pitiful about a last year's bird's nest even at its best."

Nannie Benton pushed back her sunbonnet and leaned her bare arms on the gate as she talked. How in keeping she was with the sturdy spring wind that had planted the freckles on them and had painted cheeks and throat with the tan of health!

She put out a brown, shapely hand and stroked La Belle's soft nose.

"Won't you git down and stay fer dinner? Bud, that's my man, he's helpin' his pa today and won't be back till night. You cain't? Well, we'll jist talk a while, then, at the gate. I've been a-thinkin' I'd send word for you to come round this way ever sence our church row—oh, no!"—at my protest—"it wasn't nothin' I wanted you to do except to hear about Hup Milligan and the funny part of it. They's a joke in it that you'd laugh over with me and Bud. We're a heap alike, me and Bud is, when it comes to seein' the funny side of things. Always was.

"I reckon that was one of the reasons we got married—though the principal reason was that we jist natcherly couldn't get along without each other. We could always see through a joke, though, as fur as the next one, and while we ain't got the heart to laugh at Hup to his face, as plumb beat as he is, still we have shore had a heap of fun about it jist to ourselves. And then, you've got to hear about it anyhow, because you're shore skedjiled fer a visit at Hup's.

"Me and Bud ain't been married but jist a little teensy spell," she said. "We thought a little about gittin' married before he went to trainin' camp, but decided we'd better wait and see what happened. Then, when the war was over and he was home fer Christmas—well, we jist thought, bein' we'd waited so long, we'd jist as well wait till he was home fer good. But the minute he got home to stay we went right over to the preacher's and got the knot tied. . . . As we was a-walkin' back that evening, Bud, he tied my shoestring fer me that kept a-comin' undone, and 'lowed he'd make it as tight as the knot the preacher had jist made fer us, and do you know, I had to cut the string to git my shoe off? It shore was good and substantial and we tuck it as a good sign fer our life together.

"But about Hup and the church fuss. He's one of our nighbors, Hup is, and we think a heap of his fambly. And Hup hisself is a plumb good feller. One of the Milligan girls, Millie, is about my own age, and we're kinder like sisters, we're sich good friends. Her feller was in trainin' same time as Bud and her and me was together a right smart; 'peared like it was kinder comfortin' with the boys away.

"Millie, she shore never did agree with her pa about the way he used to take on over womern sufferage. 'Women is already repersented,' he'd tell us. 'They've already got somebody a-votin' fer 'em,' he'd say.

"'But, pappy,' Millie said one mornin' at the breakfast table, 'pappy, that ain't no reason at all.'

"It was Sunday mornin' and Hup always likes to set at the breakfast table and talk on Sunday mornin's. Millie, she looks at me and winks and says agin: 'Now, pappy, that ain't no good argymint at all,' she says. 'Put jist suppose that it was a good argymint—jist suppose it,' she says. 'Then, in that case, I want to ax you jist what about them women that ain't got no husbands,' she says.

"But Hup, he 'lowed that he didn't have no plan at all fer them women without husbands. He jist 'lowed that it was their own lookout if they didn't have no husbands to vote fer 'em, and they could jist natcherly abide by the consequences so fer as he was consarned.

"When we all commenced to git ready fer church, Hup he reckoned maybe he wouldn't go. 'I'm a-aimin' to clean up my gun and git the shears sharpened fer them men that's a-comin' to shear the sheep tomorrer,' he says, a-throwin' off a joke on some of the neighbor men that takes Sunday fer sich little jobs as that. 'I reckon,' he says, 'that I'll jist slip into heaven on the House by now, they'd been a-workin' at it so long. But if he was them he'd at least a-made a good one fer the President while he was about it, he said—a nice, smooth painted one, he said. None of your old-rough-rived, split-out pickets frum blackjack fer his, he 'lowed. He was shore down on it enough as it was, and a old, rough picket fence would jist about settle the question forever. They jist wasn't nothin' that could do away with the disgrace of what them women was a-doin', he said, and it didn't make no difference whuther they was jist a few a-actin' that-a way, er whuther it was the whole caboodle of 'em. They'd shore spilt the beans fer him, he said.

"Well, I was kinder posted up on things frum readin' a magazine that I subscribed fer with part of my egg money, and I told him about some of the capers in the history of the world that men had cut when they didn't git their rights, and cited him to some of the doin's takin' place over the old countries right now. Not that I was a-upholdin' that handful of women down there at Washington. I wasn't. I was on the other side, I told him—the side of the millions of women who work and work without burnin' up the President er anybody else. But I had always noticed, I told him, that when the boob-ketcher got good and busy, a right smart sprinklin' of the scalps he brung in wasn't women's.

"But Hup, he jist went on shavin' and gittin' ready fer church. That joke about not goin' was only skin deep. You couldn't tie Hup away from church, hardly. They'd shore miss him if you was to. He's a great feller fer church, and I've always wondered how he could be so all crooked out of shape on the womern votin' subject, but I reckon it cain't no more be explained than we can tell jist why the same kind of ground will grow roses and cockle burrs at the same time.

"'Well,' he says, all of a sudden, spittin' out a bunch of soap suds he'd got in his mouth by accident—Mis. Milligan's home-made lye soap is norated fer the awful good lather it makes—'well,' he says, 'I don't take so much stock in what history tells us has been done and gone; ner what they're a-goin' hawg wild over in the old country. It's whats done at Washington er right around nearder by that gits my goat,' he says, 'and the next time you hear about a passel of men in the United States of Ameriky, round here er enywheres else, a-makin' fools of theirselves, you jist come and tell me about it, will you?'

"Well, I didn't talk no more with Hup about womern sufferage fer a right smart while. In fact, not till after the church row."

Nannie laughed reminiscently. "You see, it was like this: They was two hobnobs in the church. One of 'em wanted a organ and t'other one didn't. It's shore bad to have hobnobs in a church, but the devil gits 'em into most ever' place. It's one of his favor-ite specialties, hobnobs is. Hup, he jist worked his head off, purty nigh, raisin' money fer a new church organ, and Josh Biggs and his crowd was a-workin' jist as hard to keep it out, 'lowin' that it wasn't nothin' but the voice of Satan a-squealin'—meanin' a organ—and he was aginst havin' the devil r'ared up in plain sight before the congregation, and Hup, he got back at him by prayin' in public for them that could fly in the face of Providence and keep up a rumpus by objectin' to soundin' brass and tinklin' symbols, 'lowin' that if that didn't mean a organ to jist tell him what it did mean. That was all—to jist tell him.

"Me and Bud was so busy goin' to housekeepin' that we couldn't 'ten the pie suppers to raise the money, but we give Hup a dollar and was kinder glad we didn't have time to git right thick with either crowd, though ever'body knowed where he stood, and Josh Biggs got so he wouldn't hardly speak to us when he met us on the road.

"Well, we went to the meetin' the night they had the reception fer the new organ. Josh Biggs and some of his gang was a standin' around a big bonfire out doors as the night was chilly and we stopped to pass the time o' day with 'em and went on in to set in the choir. We always aim to pass and ree-pass with anybody that will meet us even less than half way. Jist a little speck of the way is enough fer us.

"The church shore looked awful purty. It was all lit up and decorate with green pines, and Mis. Milligan had brung her bucket of chrysanthemums. Lethie Martin was there frum town to play the organ fer the reception. Everything was a-startin' out lovely and we was shore havin' a good time. Lethie had played three songs we all knowed and was a-learnin' us one that we hadn't never heerd before, when in walks Josh Biggs and his crowd.

"Hup, he looks up and smiles the pleasantest. Here was the fellers who had stood off and objected, jist a-comin' right in to hear the organ. Maybe they would goodness of my sweetheart,' he says, a-kissin' his wife right there in front of us all. Hup is shore fond of his fambly and thinks a heap of 'em. 'She's jist so plumb good,' he says, 'and the gates will open so wide when she gits up there, that I'll jist go in as she does, and they won't nobody ever know the difference,' he says, a-pinchin' her arm.

"They jist picked up that organ an' dumped it onto their pile of burnin' logs afore you could say 'scat.'"

"'But, pappy,' says Millie. 'What about them pore men that ain't got no wives?' she says. 'Air they to miss gittin' to heaven jist because they ain't got nobody to do their religion fer 'em? Ain't you got no plan fer them pore fellers,' she says, 'er can they jist natcherly abide by the consequences so fur as you're consarned?' she says, and we all laughed. All but Hup. The best he could do was to git up a little sickly grin as he saw the joke was on him, and then to bust out on his big, big, big argymint that he always saved up fer the last.

"It's plumb frantic how he used to jist purty nigh explode over them doin's in Washington where a few women done sich playful little tricks as burnin' the President's speech and picketin' the White House and sich.

"'And that ain't all. They've gone and scorched up a big doll er somethin' down there in Effigy, a-pertendin' it was the President hisself. What do you think of sich doins as that?' he roared, lookin' at me. 'I'm plumb proud they wouldn't let 'em burn him in Washington,' he says. 'They shore run onto a snag when they tried in the city of our country,' he roars. 'I reckon,' he says, lookin' at me agin, jist as if I hadn't read the papers none myself, 'I reckon you know,' he says, 'that they had to go to Effigy fer the burnin? It's a little, small town, I reckon,' he says, 'without much govermint. Anyhow, they had to clear out of the city of our country to burn the President. They's some satisfaction in that. I don't reckon you're in cahoots with 'em when it comes to burnin' the President alive?' he roars, lookin' at me agin.

"'I ain't,' I says. 'And they aint none of the other shore 'nough suffergists in cahoots with 'em nuther. But what can we do with 'em?' I axes him. 'What do you men do with your own fanatickers?' I says. 'You cain't kill 'em, can you? They might be human and you'd git tuck up fer murder. Every big move that ever was got up has its fanatickers,' I tells him.

"But it didn't do no good to talk to him. He jist refused to see the pint. They was, he 'lowed, like as not a old picket fence clean, plumb around the White

The Future of the Movies as Griffith Sees It

- NUMBER EIGHT OF A SERIES OF ARTICLES ON THE PHOTOPLAY INDUSTRY -

Producer of the biggest features tells how some of the classics made money while others failed—Thinks the best creative writers ought to write for the screen—Still he notes continued improvement in the plots and pictures, and hopes for more

By KARL K. KITCHIN.

"ALL motion picture producers are liars," said D. W. Griffith.

"And you are the exception that proves the rule?" I suggested.

"No, I'm something of a liar myself," he answered, with an attempt at laughter. "You see, I'm a showman and it is as natural for a showman to lie about his offerings as it is for him to eat. But I don't lie as much as I used to," he added. "Not half as much, really."

This was refreshing frankness, and it gave me high hopes that at last I might learn the real truth about the movies from the biggest man in the industry, game or art, whichever one chooses to call it. For David Wark Griffith is recognized not only as the greatest producer of photoplays but the most intelligent, most able and most progressive film maker in the world. The moving picture business is a business that changes rapidly. Stars and presidents of film companies that are at the top of the heap today may be "has beens" and bankrupts tomorrow. But ever since Mr. Griffith produced "The Birth of a Nation" he has stood head and shoulders above everybody else in the movie world. Consequently his views have some value, especially as he agreed to talk facts and leave the "bunk" for his rival producers.

"Why do you movie people put out so many lies about your work?" I asked the famous producer, as soon as we were comfortably settled in the private office of his Hollywood studio.

"For instance?" he queried.

"Well, why do you producers announce that some of your pictures cost half a million, that 10,000 men and 3000 horses were used in them and all that sort of thing?" I replied. "And the lies that are sent out about your stars. Nobody believes that Theda Bara, for instance, was born in Egypt. In fact, everybody knows that she hails from the east side of New York and that her real name is Theo Goodman. Yet her managers circulated that lie. Then there is the salary lie. For instance, a film magnate announced the other day that William Farnum's salary is $780,000 a year. As a matter of fact, it isn't half that. The public doesn't believe your lies any more, so why keep on fooling yourselves?"

"The only answer is because we're showmen," said Mr. Griffith. "Lies—exaggerations, if you prefer—are inherent in showmen. However, I think we are improving in this respect. I know I am. But I agree with you that the stupid lies that film makers have put out have done more to give us a black eye with the thinking public than anything we have done.

"There's another side to it, of course," he went on. "As one of my friends said the other day: 'This film industry is so blamed big that you can't tell the truth about it without lying.' The possibilities of the films are so great that it is not surprising that we are sometimes carried away by them. Still, there is no occasion for stupid lies about the salaries of stars and the costs of picture plays. And I believe the time will come when these evils will be corrected. The industry is important enough without trying to exaggerate its features. There are more than 17,000 moving picture theaters in the United States alone and between nine and ten million people buy admittance to them every day of the year. But while figures lie, liars figure."

"What is the greatest evil in the motion picture industry today?" I asked.

"The distribution evil," he answered. "And that's why we have formed the United States Artists' Association. We had positive information that the big distributing companies were planning to form a combine that would have us—Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and myself—at their mercy. We have simply banded together to protect ourselves, and it is our intention to make our pictures and sell them on their merits instead of allowing them to be sold to bolster up a program.

"At the present time, you know, exhibitors have very little choice in the selection of their pictures. To get the big pictures that will attract capacity audiences they have to take the ordinary program pictures. The good pictures under the present arrangement do not run any longer than the poor ones. They are replaced at the end of a week in the big cities, although they are still playing to capacity. Our contention is that the exhibitors should be permitted to choose the pictures they want to show and that these pictures should be handled strictly on their merits, like any legitimate theatrical attraction. I believe if they are handled on a percentage basis and allowed to run as long as they will attract audiences in paying numbers many of the present day evils of the movies will be corrected.

"In the first place, fewer and consequently better pictures will be made. The overproduction evil is responsible for many of the poor photoplays which are to be found on every side. It is an impossibility to turn out good pictures as rapidly as many of the studios are producing them. In the second place, when pictures are shown on a percentage basis a poor picture will have a very brief run. In fact, this method will tend to eliminate many of the pictures which are shown today simply because the exhibitor has paid for them in advance and cannot cancel them. And, what is more important, the exhibiting end of the industry will be put on a legitimate business basis. Naturally, the film men handling programs say that this cannot be done, but whether it can or cannot be done does not change the fact that it is the real solution of the greatest evil of the industry. Time will tell the story."

"Will the $2 movie ever become an established feature of the industry?" was asked.

"Let me show you through the lot where I made 'Intolerance' to answer that question," replied the originator of the 'fade out,' the 'cut back' and other features of the photoplay that have brought it to its present more or less exalted estate. And suiting the action to the word we left the studio and walked across Sunset boulevard to the big lot where the ruined walls and towers of Babylon still rear their departed glories to the California sky.

These Babylonian ruins are the most picturesque monuments to the film industry in the Los Angeles district. Seen for the first time, they are actually impressive, for even in their present partially dismantled state they are more than 150 feet high. And as they are pointed to with pride by everyone in the movie colony it was not surprising that Mr. Griffith was anxious to show them to me personally.

When he filmed the big scenes of "Intolerance" against these walls three or four years ago the police reserves had to be called out to held back the crowds of Los Angeles who wanted to witness the proceedings. But audiences did not exhibit as much enthusiasm to pay $2 a seat to see the finished product. And the morning Mr. Griffith and I strolled among its ruins there was only a solitary watchman on the lot.

" 'Intolerance' was the biggest and costliest picture ever made," said Mr. Griffith. "But it didn't make any money. There have only been two pictures that have made money at the $2 scale—"The Birth of a Nation" and "Hearts of the World," both of which I happened to produce. Whether the public would again pay $2 to see another spectacle is extremely doubtful. And without the spectacle, no matter how remarkable the story or the actors, the $2 scale isn't worth discussing. I am not a prophet, and in the motion picture business almost anything is possible—so I do not say that the $2 movie will not figure in the future. But there is none in sight at the present time."

Talking as we went along, Mr. Griffith led me up a wide runway to the highest point on the Babylonian wall, and on the camera platform where he directed the filming of the big scenes we continued the interview.

"One of the commonest charges against the movies is that authors do not receive just compensation for their work," the producer began. "As a matter of fact, authors are receiving more for their stories in the movies than they ever received before. Do you know

Taking a run over the ruins of Babylon to see how "Intolerance" was filmed. While it was an artistic triumph it was not a money-maker hence the producer discourages shows at $2 per seat, that is for the present.

As time is money with movie producers but little can be wasted. David Wark Griffith and Robert Harron indulging in a "hurry-up feed."

The Man With a Seventy-Million-Acre Farm

AN inventory of the property holdings of Gen. Luis Terrazas, who is living in enforced exile at El Paso, Tex., has just been made by the Office of Confiscations and the Mexican State Treasury. It brought to light the surprising fact that Gen. Terrazas is the owner of 70,000,000 acres of land, all situated in the State of Chihuahua.

Besides his landed holdings, he possesses title to more than 200 houses in Chihuahua, several productive mines, many manufacturing plants, and was largely interested in banking affairs.

According to the official report, all of this vast estate, which in pre-revolutionary days had a total value in excess of $150,000,000 gold, has been taken over by the State government under confiscation processes.

If Gen. Terrazas lives until July 21 he will have reached the age of 90 years. Recently he was afflicted with a slight stroke of paralysis, but he is said to be well on the road to recovery notwithstanding his advanced age. His wife died at El Paso a few days ago.

Notwithstanding the fact that he has been forced to make his temporary home outside of Mexico during the last several years, he has kept up a continuous bulldog fight for the protection of his property holding in his country. When he fled into exile his ranches were stocked with more than 1,000,000 head of cattle, 300,000 mules and horses and 200,000 goats, according to the Government report.

He has put up a remarkable long-distance fight against Francisco Villa and his bandits, and also against the officials of the so-called constitutional government of this State. It has been a losing fight for him, however, as many of his ranches and farms have been divided among his former employes and are operated by them for their own benefit and possible profit.

Gen. Terrazas' career has been filled with thrilling exploits and armed strife from the time that he was a small boy. He was born in Chihuahua, his parents belonging to the peon or laboring class. He was left an orphan when 10 years old and was thrown into the street to make his livelihood.

He worked at odd jobs, was taken into a store as general utility boy and there began learning something about the mercantile business. He was advanced from one position to another until he occupied a responsible place in the establishment. During those struggling years he saved as much of his earnings as possible. Before he had reached his majority, he had started a store of his own. It was a small beginning, but with the careful attention that he gave it, the business quickly expanded and he became one of the leading merchants of the city when still a young man.

It was about the time that the United States and Mexico were at war—in 1848—that Terrazas became interested in politics. He was elected jefe politico of Chihuahua, which was his first public office. In those days banditry raged through all the country districts of Mexico. He proved an efficient public officer and was re-elected from time to time to this position. It was while he was Mayor of this city, in 1860, that several hundred bandits made a raid and captured the town. The Governor and other State officials fled to Juarez, where they established the seat of government. Terrazas was forced to retire from the city but he soon organized an armed force and proceeded against the bandits, driving out and dispersing the bold band.

In March, 1867, Terrazas led an army of Mexicans against the French invaders under the ill-fated Emperor Maximilian. He had already placed his fortune at the disposal of the Government to assist in overcoming the movement to make Mexico a part of the French Empire. At the head of a division of the army he drove the French out of Chihuahua, recapturing the city and inflicting a decisive defeat upon the enemy.

During this military campaign Gen. Terrazas had maintained his army out of his private fortune. When the war was ended the Government found the national treasury empty and no funds available with which to repay Terrazas for his services. It was then that the Congress of Mexico ceded to Terrazas large tracts of wild land in Chihuahua in lieu of the money that he had advanced and in payment of his services to the country. That was the nucleus for his vast fortune. He added large acreages to these original grants until he became the largest land owner in the world. He branched out in various other lines of industry and was in a fair way to becoming a close second to John D. Rockefeller in amount of wealth, when the Madero revolution intervened and the troubles began that have reduced him almost to a condition of poverty.

Enrique C. Creel, a son-in-law of Gen. Terrazas, who is now living in exile in Los Angeles, was formerly Mexican Ambassador to the United States. Creel was a son of Reuben Creel, a native of Kentucky, who located in Chihuahua when a youth and married a Mexican woman. When his father died young Creel was thrown upon his own resources. He also entered the mercantile business and rose to enormous fortune by his own efforts and when he became a member of the Terrazas family. He and Gen. Terrazas owned the Banco Mineral, one of the large financial institutions of Mexico. When the Madero revolution began this bank had a capital of $5,000,000. Gen. Terrazas, Mr. Creel and other members of their families were forced to flee from Mexico on almost an hour's warning. The long trip to the border was made on horseback as a means of evading the revolutionists. They left the Banco Mineral behind and not long afterwards Villa tortured Luis Terrazas Jr., one of Gen. Terrazas' sons, into revealing where $500,000 in money was hidden in one of the hollow columns of the bank.

At the time Gen. Terrazas was driven into exile he also owned a large interest and was president of the Banco Central, a financial institution of the City of Mexico, with a capital stock of $10,000,000. He was also a director and large stockholder in several railroads.

After serving many terms as Governor of the State he turned that office over to his son-in-law, Mr. Creel, and later, Alberto Terrazas, one of his sons, occupied the office. Alberto Terrazas was Governor at the time Madero started his revolution in this State, and it has been said that but for the weakness which he displayed in dealing with the situation the whole plot might have been nipped in the bud and Mexico would be pursuing its peaceful course to this good day.

It is known that the late President Porfirio Diaz had a wholesome fear of the power of Terrazas. He knew that upon the ranches and farms which Gen. Terrazas owned there were constantly employed 10,000 to 15,000 men who could be converted into a nucleus for a revolutionary army any time the great land-owner felt so disposed. Diaz and Terrazas were never warm friends.

stubbornly insisting that he would follow his own judgment in all things aside from the written revelations. It was then that Othman Ibn Affan was called upon to accept, and he agreed to all the conditions, including those spurned by Ali. On the third day following the assassination of Omar he was proclaimed and installed. He was a very rich man and was noted far and wide for his charities. Despite his great wealth, he lived on meager fare and spent most of his time in fasting and meditation. His Koran was his constant companion and he pored over its leaves at every opportunity.

Just before his accession he furnished relief to the poor of Medina, who had suffered a famine, by bringing a supply of corn from distant places. He had also fitted up houses above the mosque at Medina for the wives of the deceased prophet, that they might live in a style befitting their station. He had also supplied 650 camels and 50 horses for the campaign against the Tabuc, who were slow about accepting the new religion. Hardly had Othman taken over his high station before he was asked to apply against Obied'allah the stern law of retaliatory punishment for the deaths of prominent persons he had directed, just because he thought they might have had something to do with the murder of his father, Omar. This was a severe trial to Othman, who loved the son of Omar, and besides, he did not want to see the murder of the father followed up by the execution of the son.

When someone suggested that since the son of Omar had caused these deaths during the interregnum between the two caliphates, there was nothing in the Moslem law to visit retaliatory punishment on any person, even though there was a legal exaction for vengeance. He gladly grasped at this straw and Obeid'allah escaped punishment for the wholesale murders he ordered as a sacrifice to his father's memory. Thus it was during Othman's caliphate that the first technicality in the interpretation of Moslem law was invoked.

During the reign of Othman the work of conquest went on just as vigorously as it did in the days of Abu and Omar. First of all, he completed the conquest of the empire of the Khosrus and Mesopotamia. The Moslem Generals and their fanatical followers halted at nothing; no undertaking, however fraught with danger, caused even a moment's hesitation in their triumphant forays. It was during this caliphate that the remarkable capitulation of the beautiful city of Ispahan was encompassed. When the Moslem conquerors neared its gates with banners flying and scimitars flashing in the bright sunlight, it was noticed that it was well garrisoned and the troops of Othman prepared for a bitter fight. To the surprise of both armies, Ispahan's Governor, Kadeskan, staked the fortunes of the place upon a single thrust with the Moslem commander. At the first shock of the lances, Kadeskan surrendered and the town and people fell into the arms of Islam. The beautiful Persian cities fell in rapid order before the armies now advancing from all directions. The city of Istakar, the stronghold of the Persian pride, made a heroic stand and assembled an army of more than 100,000 soldiers, prepared to fight to the last man, only to share the same fate as the others. Shah-reg, the warlike Governor of the Persians, led his men and was dispatched with a lance thrust early in the struggle. Then fell Istakar, the ancient Persepolis, and thus a one-time mistress of the Eastern world was compelled to bend the knee and pay tribute to the Arabian Caliph, who sat in his meditation room at Medina poring over the leaves of that same Koran which Germany must now hand back to the King of the Hedjaz.

From Istakar the Moslem legions made a waste of the vast province of Khorassan, and though there was resistance, often very spirited, nothing was permitted to stand in the way of victory and tribute. Othman's caliphate saw the conquest of Syria, Persia and Egypt and witnessed the greatest collection of loot assembled in the home of Islam from the death of Mahomet up to the period of the Crusades. Following the Caesar-like death of this leader, it was discovered that much of the wealth he had stored away in his strong boxes was in furtherance of a methodically planned charitable program.

He was succeeded as Caliph by Ali, son-in-law of Mahomet and father of Fatima's children, the only posterity of the prophet.

The Documents Germany Stole From France

and beribboned documents began falling all about them. While they were thus engaged the Colonel happened along and looked at some of the papers and whistled. Then he ordered the cases removed to 14 Rue de Provence, Versailles, where Bismarck and his party had taken up their headquarters, without the formal consent of the owner. To make sure that there would be no mishap, a powerful guard was sent with the packing cases and their precious contents. These papers reached him Oct. 12.

It was about this time that the late Sir William Russell, who was attached to German headquarters as correspondent for the London Times, mentioned in his articles in that journal that Bismarck, who had until then been extremely gloomy and irritable, suddenly became the most genial, jovial and happy tempered of men, thanks, so Sir William heard, "to the chance discovery of some very valuable state papers belonging to the French Government."

There is no mention of these papers in any of the Bismarck biographies, and as far as the records show the Chancellor never made any statement for the public concerning them. The German papers were forbidden to mention the find or even speculate on what they were supposed to contain. In the Hohenlohe diary reference is made in an entry dated in 1871, that the correspondence seized at Cercay was so voluminous that the Chancellor had not had time to complete his investigation of their contents. The only document from the collection that was ever given out for publication was a letter addressed by Count Bendetti, French Ambassador at Berlin, to Napoleon, in 1866, concerning a project to annex Belgium to France. This was printed in the official Gazette of Berlin, for the apparent purpose of showing the world that France was deserving of no sympathy. A few days later the Parisian newspaper, Le Peuple Francaise, at the request of Eugene Rouher, who had returned to Paris, printed the following paragraph in very bold type: "The letters of Benedetti are not the only documents which have fallen into the hands of the Prussian Government. All the confidential correspondence of the French Government with the rulers and Governments of Bavaria, Wurttemberg, Hesse, Prussia and Austria, from 1865 to 1870 was likewise preserved in the Chateau of Cercay, and is now in the hands of Prince Bismarck."

No more use was made of the Cercay "find" by Bismarck following this warning.

When the Germans were destroying property relentlessly in the war just closed, a body of soldiers attacked the Rouher chauteau at Cercay and left it a pile of ruins. The Huns seemed to visit special malice on this old home and when they completed the work of demolition they carried away the furnishings. This piece of vandalism was accomplished in January, 1915, just when the fortune of war seemed to be with the Germans, and there might have been some special order from the "All Highest" with reference to this famous chauteau, which furnished the club Bismarck used so emphatically in the formation of the Hohenzollern empire.

THE GIRL IN HIS HOUSE

A SURPRISE LOVE COMEDY OF NEW YORK TODAY

By HAROLD M'GRATH
Illustrated by LEE CONREY

THE STORY FROM THE START.

James Armitage, a New York clubman, returns from abroad to find that Bordman, an absconding agent, has played havoc with his estate and sold his house, which is occupied by a strange girl named Doris Athelstone. Armitage faces the mystery, falls in love with the girl, and settles himself systematically to the task of retrieving his shattered fortune, both financial and sentimental.

CHAPER V.

FROM 11 until 1 o'clock each day Armitage sat in his office. His name was now upon the door, and he never looked at it without a tonic thrill of pride. Often it takes but little to amuse one's vanity. He was playing the game, anyhow; he was no longer a cipher in human affairs; he was something, even if infinitesimally something. It was odd, but twist away from it as he might, this new energy was primarily due to Bordman's calm, unimpassioned analysis. The irony had cut deep. Bordman had rooked him thoroughly, but on the other hand the old scalawag had awakened a desire to play the game. What he had lost in money, then, he was determined to gain in character.

About his only customer was the janitor, with the usual round of complaints from tenants. Morrissy came in about noon, and together they would go over matters in detail. Plumbers and gasfitters, meter men and electricians, masons and tinsmiths—there was very little poetry to the job. When Armitage undertook to serve an idea he served it thoroughly; that was in the blood. He rather enjoyed the new responsibilities. His tenants always found him courteous, albeit he was always firm.

About 20 minutes were sufficient to cover the day's work; the other hundred were devoted to the newspapers, broken dreams, and the window from which he could get a glimpse of the ceaseless flow moving north and south on Broadway, two blocks west. Sometimes he would stand over Bordman's globe and pick out the spots he had intimately known. Only a little while ago he had been in this place or that. Here he had shot his first lion, there his first black leopard, over back of Perak. Sometimes his thoughts veered to Bordman. Where had he gone with his ill-gotten fortune?

Armitage always became cynical whenever Bordman came into his mind. He recalled the old curio dealer in one of Balzac's tales, "The Magic Skin," and how the young wastrel had wished that the old chap fell in love with a ballerina. He could not quite separate Bordman from the idea that someone had accompanied him on his journey. There was no fool like an old fool. Every day in the year the newspapers had some story of this caliber. When a young woman enters the life of an old man there is no folly inconceivable. She would probably pick his pockets some day, and retribution would come in for its own.

Promptly at 1 Armitage left the office, changing his restaurant frequently for fear that he might fall into the old habit of going certain rounds until he became so bored that wanderlust might not be denied, for all that at present New York held him in the strongest thrall.

The rainy season had fallen upon the town by the end of October. There were no more gallops through the park. But there were occasions when he drove Doris about town in his recently purchased runabout. It was rare sport teaching her how to drive. She was always alive with interest—a child's interest. He did not notice the strange silences that often fell upon her. There was a certain restraint and demureness in these spells that would have interested Betty Burlingham.

One Saturday, as he rocked in his creaky swivel chair, smoking his strong pipe and dreaming pleasantly, the door swung open and Betty and Doris swept in, bright of eye and rich in color, for a cold northeaster was blowing. He was on his feet instantly.

"Well, this is a pleasure!"

"Don't be too sure of that," replied Betty. "We came at this hour because we thought you might ask us out to lunch."

"I thought you might perhaps be looking for an office. There's one to rent."

Betty perched herself upon a corner of the desk, while Doris strolled about. She paused at the globe, and with the tip of her finger sent it spinning upon its axis.

"How do you like work?" asked Betty, pushing the still smoking pipe to the furthest end of the desk. "I don't see why we women marry you men, you have such horrid habits. But never mind. How are you making out?"

"Which hand?" Doris asked. "The one nearest the heart."

"Great! I can tell a plumber from a mason at a glance. I can tell a book agent from a charity worker by the smile alone."

"Into what class do you put us?" asked Doris, giving the globe a final spin as she turned away.

"Angels from heaven!"

"We'll certainly fly if you talk like that. And so this is the place where that funny little agent of yours used to work? What has become of him?"

"He was getting along in years and concluded to retire," said Armitage, reaching for his pipe and putting it into a drawer mechanically and wondering all the rest of the day what he had done with it.

Betty stared at her hands because she was afraid to trust her eyes.

"He was very quaint," said Doris, innocent of the bomb fuse she had lighted. "Can you write on the typewriter?"

"I can pick out 'Yankee Doodle,' but that's about all. It's 12," he said briskly. The sight of Doris in this office rather embarrassed him. "Any place in mind for lunch?"

"Yes. We want to go where there's dancing. Doris hasn't seen that phase of New York life yet. Bob's too busy to come uptown, and so we thought you might help us out."

"All right. But I'm as much in the dark as Miss Athelstone. You'll have to do the guiding, Betty. How'd you come?"

"Subway. We've been shopping all the morning. Doris wants a new dress for that dinner I'm going to give Clare. The Honorable George is very nice. Clare is in luck."

"So am I," said Armitage.

"It will be my first real dinner. I'm so excited!" Doris came close to the desk. "How nice and kind you people are to me! Someone told me once that a person might live and die in New York and not know a single neighbor."

"That's true enough," said Armitage, getting into his coat. "But on this especial occasion you moved in next to the nicest lady but one in this world."

"And just who is the nicest?" Betty demanded; but she was thinking. "What a stupendous, scrumptuous thing that would be! For now that Armitage had signified his intention of settling down and becoming a stay-at-home, she must search around among the younger women to find him a suitable wife. A normal married woman can no more tolerate a handsome eligible bachelor than she can tolerate poison in the nursery. Armitage's doom was sealed then and there. And what appealed to Betty most strongly was the fact that it would be the most romantic thing she had ever heard of.

A pleasant hour and a half was idled away at one of the popular restaurants on Broadway. There was a little dancing, just enough to show Armitage that he had entirely lost track of the game. But Doris was interested. Her little foot kept patting time to the music. She confessed that she had never known the exhilaration of a waltz. And Armitage, gazing at her beauty, considered that it would be an exceedingly pleasurable task to be her instructor.

An idea formed and grew in his head, too; it haunted him all the rest of the day, followed him into bed that night, and made havoc of his dreams. Thereafter this idea became an obsession. Arguments were outargued and logic had its legs knocked from under. He fought it, denied it, foreswore it, but always, like the north wind, the idea returned. It grew like the genie free of the bottle, and he knew that in his case he never could coax it back into the bottle again. I don't suppose he would have changed his plans even if he could have seen what was forward—the bullet that was nearly to write "Finis" to his pleasant if rather checkered career.

Rather a peculiar thing happened at the dinner Betty Burlingham gave to Clare to announce her engagement to Wickliffe. After dinner and the solemn announcement that Clare was ready to risk her liberty once more, there was dancing in the big drawing room. Doris, of course, did not dance—that is, not well enough to risk a flight across the glistening floor. She and Armitage watched the dancers for a while. Suddenly she leaned toward him.

"Let's go home," she said in a whisper.

The suggestion hypontized him; the phrase was so intimate and companionable. Home, her home and still his! For it was his morally, no matter how well legally she might be intrenched there. Arabian Nights! They stole out unobserved.

But no sooner were they in the house next door than he saw the monumental folly of his act. "We'd better run right back," he said, gravely.

"But why?"

He covered his confusion. "Well, they'll be missing us shortly. Betty has Argus eyes."

"But what if they do miss us?" she asked, innocently.

"How the dickens am I going to make her understand?" he thought.

"Come into your old study. There's a fire ready. And I've got the most wonderful surprise for you. I was going to give it to you some morning after our ride, but the weather's been too bad."

"We'd better march right back to Betty's."

"Don't you . . . Wouldn't you like to stay?"

"Like to! Why . . . that isn't it." How was he going to tell her that it was not proper to be with her in this house at this hour? He saw instantly that, whatever she knew about social conventions, the present situation was not clear to her. The innocent! He arraigned himself bitterly.

Whatever his resolves, these were negatived by an unexpected action on her part. She laughed, caught him by the sleeve, and ran with him into the study.

THE ELEVATOR

. . By . . Tudor Jenks

The Elevator - - (Continued)

"What is her address?" asked Jean.

Mr. Bunker gave the address and Jean came out and tried to call her up. Jean seemed to have some trouble in getting an answer.

I stood by and listened, and finally I heard Jean say:

"Gone? Without leaving any word?"

Then Jean's face changed as she heard the answer. It was half dismay and half triumph that I saw in her expression.

"You say she's skipped the bill?"

Then came a long answer and Jean hung up the receiver.

"Oh, Victor," said Jean to me, "the little scamp has skipped out from her boarding house, owing them a lot of money! And they don't know anything about her!"

"The deuce she has!" said I. "Well, when Old Bunker hears"——

Just then the door of the inner office opened and the Old Man came out, looking decidedly fussed and worried. He came over to the telephone, and asked us:

"Well? What did you hear?"

So I told him what we had heard; and he looked even worse, but made no comment. He hurried back into the office, forgetting to close the door, and we saw him working over his safe—apparently trying to get the combination. But in a few minutes he gave it up and came back to my desk.

"Welles," he said, "somebody must have changed the combination of the safe. I can't do anything with it. You don't know the combination, of course?"

"No, sir; Miss Tomlins was the only one who knew it."

"Damn Miss Tomlins!" he burst out angrily. "Here—you go and get a safe expert, and tell him to open this thing, even if he has to do it with a sledge hammer or dynamite! Go quick, too! I've got to see"——

He returned to his own room, and I left on a run.

When I came back I brought an expert, who went to work on the safe.

Meanwhile, I saw that Bunker had been going over all his papers. He filled his waste basket with scraps and covered a large part of the floor with trash. And he seemed worried to death till the man had drilled the lock and opened the door of the safe.

Then—there wasn't much to see. When Bunker had unlocked the inner compartment he found nothing inside except a scrap of paper on which was neatly written in blue pencil:

"Good-by! I've got a good start!

"THERESA, alias SMOOTH SUE."

That was all. And apparently it was enough.

Bunker looked at the paper a minute, and turned gray. Then he held it out to the expert with shaking hand.

"What does it mean?" he asked.

"'Smooth Sue'?" said the expert. "Didn't you ever hear of her? She's one of a big gang. You've been robbed, that's all. She has cleaned out the safe, and then changed the combination to gain time. She's one of the worst in that line. There's a reward out for her ever since that big trust company was robbed in Beckwith avenue."

The paper dropped to the floor.

"All right," said Bunker. "Send your bill in tomorrow, I'll not be back today."

And he picked up a satchel from the corner and left the office without a word to any of us.

He did not return that day—nor the next day; nor any day.

But the office was busier than ever, so long as it lasted.

"You say she's skipped the bill?"

Within a short time came creditors, clients, men with bills, the police, detectives—and it did not take us long to find out that Bunker had been skating on the thinnest kind of black ice.

He had collected all the cash he could get in, and was just about to make a clean getaway with it, when his private secretary, the "Elevator"—who had so thoroughly raised the moral tone of the office—had in the nick of time outdone her thievish employer by collaring the bundle of swag just as it was nicely made up for ready transportation.

Seeing that the game was up, Bunker had skipped, too—and that was the end of the office.

But we found one pleasant incident in the whole transaction. When the office broke up, we found that there was due Jimmy about $25; to Jean Nesbit a little more; and I lacked about $150—on salary account.

About two weeks after the "Elevator" disappeared I received a package inclosing a letter and $250. The letter read thus:

"Somewhere in U. S. A.—Dear Mr. Welles: We don't rob the poor—but only such old scamps as that whited sepulcher, Bunker. It made me sick to fool the rest of you. Give my best to Jimmy—who's a good pal! Hand the money round to the force according to what's owed them. And, if you can, marry that sweet Jean—who's a fine, straight girl—and count yourself lucky! Wish I was like her. I was once.

"Good-by forever,

"THERESA TOMLINS."

"Mr. Victor Welles,

"Office of Bunco Bunker."

And that was the last we ever heard of Bunker or the "Elevator," though Jean and I have watched the papers pretty closely. We found out later that the payment for the "Elevator's" board bill had been left hidden in her room, so the landlady didn't lose her money. Apparently, like Robin Hood, "Smooth Sue" did not rob the poor, but was after the dishonest rich—like our employer.

As to the money she left for us, we tried to hand it over; but all parties agreed that we were entitled to it to balance what was owed us.

It certainly was a godsend (if I may put it that way), for Jean and I had been saving every cent so we could be married.

So we always had a grateful remembrance of the "Elevator."

The Future of the Movies as Griffith Sees It

how much Thomas Dixon has received in royalties from 'The Birth of a Nation,' which was adapted from his novel, 'The Clansman'?"

I shook my head sideways to save time.

"Dixon's royalties have amounted to more than $800,000 to date, and 'The Birth of a Nation' hasn't yet been shown in the popular priced theaters. No author ever before made that amount out of a single book or a single play, yet unthinking people, even authors themselves, often declare that there is no money in writing for the movies.

"You would be amazed at the prices we're paying for stories," the producer continued. "It is not at all unusual to pay $25,000 or even $30,000 for the film rights to a popular novel or dramatic success. And when that sum is paid it does not include the cost of putting the novel or play into scenario form. If our leading authors understood the technique of the motion picture they would be able to command even higher figures for their work.

"It is because most of the creative writers are unfamiliar with the needs and limitations of the photoplay that they accuse producers of changing and often distorting their brain children. Writing for the screen is an entirely different art than writing novels or plays. Authors should make a study of the photoplay before attempting to write scenarios. The greatest creative authors have failed to write good film plays simply because they did not take the trouble to study the technique of the photoplay.

"Did you know that Sir James Matthew Barrie tried his hand at it and failed? So did Bernard Shaw. Their efforts were futile simply because they thought they knew all about it. Some day they will write good photoplays, for when they master the technique of the movies it will be easy for them.

"The ideal story for the screen is one that is written especially for it, rather than the scenarioid novel or drama. And the ideal manner in which to make it is to have it produced by the author. Naturally, the combination of author-director is rarely found, but in time to come I believe he will be developed in larger numbers.

"From a photographic standpoint the motion picture of today is well nigh perfect," Mr. Griffith replied to my question about the future of the photoplay. "The time will come when color photography will be employed, not for an entire photoplay but for certain parts of it to relieve the monotony of dull tones. And this color photography will give a greater depth to the pictures, enhance stereoscopic effects and so on.

"Already the photoplay has improved the quality of acting to a point far beyond anything the so-called legitimate stage has ever known. It has forced actors to be natural. In fact, it has had a pronounced effect on the acting of the spoken stage."

"Why, then, do cultured people refuse to take the movies seriously?" I asked.

"Because of the poor quality of the stories," he answered frankly. "Photoplays are made for the masses, not for the classes, for one thing. And as I have explained to you, the majority of our creative authors have not attempted to write for the screen. When we get better stories we will produce better films, for art of the motion picture is principally the art of story telling.

"But whatever our faults—and I'll admit that we have many—we are making better pictures than we did even two or three years ago. And we are getting better stories from better authors than we did even last year. You must remember that this is a very young industry and it has all the faults of youth. But the faults of youth must be forgiven for the promise of bigger and better things in later years."

WHAT DO YOU THINK ABOUT WHEN IDLE?

AT WHAT age do you stop growing—not increasing in stature or in girth, but broadening your mind and your outlook upon life? In his address to the graduates of the medical department, New York University, on March 1, Prof. Henry N. Donaldson urged them to keep on growing throughout their lives and mentioned two famous men who did so.

"When Cato learned Greek at 80 years it indicated more than that the farm was doing well and he had time to spare," said Prof. Donaldson. "It indicated a capacity for new interests and a mental retentiveness which are among the virtues of the youthful mind.

"Helmholtz began as a physician—a very mediocre practitioner, they say—but under the inspiration of Johannes Muller he became interested in physiology. This branch he followed by the study of the eyes and ears, leading to his great works on physiological optics and sensations of tone—by the way devising that important instrument, the opthalmoscope. But the physiology of the sense organs called for physics. So well did he follow this lead that he became one of the first physicists, and linked his name with the doctrine of conservation of energy. Still going forward, he developed his mathematics and became eminent in that field also. Here is a steady growth through a long life. A great intellectual engine at his command was applied to field after field in succession, and always with a resulting advance in knowledge.

"Such men set the pace and these pacemakers are the most helpful members of our race, for while those who have stopped growing have but a single response, 'It can't be done,' the pacemakers do it.

"Naturally, you ask, what is the formula, how is it accomplished? Let me reply by a question: What do you think about when you are not working? For most of us that period represents the larger part of life, and it does make a difference what we do with this great fraction, so I will leave the implications of my question without elaboration, but ask you to meditate upon it."

THE GIRL IN HIS HOUSE

A SURPRISE LOVE COMEDY OF NEW YORK TODAY

BY HAROLD M'GRATH

Illustrated by LEE CONREY

"I planned all this this afternoon," she confessed. She turned, struck a match and threw it into the grate. "Now, sir, you sit perfectly still. You know all the nooks of this room. Study them out while I go. I'll be right back."

Never had he met such a woman, and she was a woman. She was at least 22. In many things she was uncannily wise, in others as innocent as a child. And the exquisite lure of her lay in these two opposites. Never had he struck a happier phrase: pearl and pomegranate and Persian peach—jewels and fruit. She made him think of summer clouds, so lightly she moved. She made him think of his loneliness, too. He did not know then that his thought of loneliness was a dangerous one. "Let's go home!" The thrill of it!

He leaned back against the cushions, as he had leaned a thousand time before. By now the fire had got into the chestnut log, and everything was touched by the rosal light. Four weeks; he had known her just about four weeks. Her father's picture stood on the mantel, and he wondered how a man with such a daughter could lead such a life. There was a bit of mystery around the man somewhere.

This spot had always been Armitage's favorite. He had invariably smoked a pipe here after dinner, before going out for the evening. He fell into a dream. Supposing he was really living here again, and this child-woman who had unconsciously thrown about him an irresistible enchantment. . . . He heard the rustle of her gown and she was standing before him, her hands behind her back, a tantalizing smile on her lips.

"La mano destrat?—la sinistra?" she asked. "Which hand?"

"The one nearest the heart"—recalling an old game of his youth.

She thrust forth her left hand. It held a brown meerschaum pipe!

"Where did you find that?"

"In a corner of the bookcases. Oh, there are signs of you all over the house. There was a sealed tobacco jar. Take the pipe and light it. I'm going to read you some of daddy's letters."

"I smelled a pipe the first day I entered the house, and nobody but a caretaker had been in it for years. It will always be in the curtains. Light it."

He obeyed. In truth he would have obeyed her had she asked him to take a live log from the grate with his bare hands. He did not comprehend what was happening to him.

She took an Oriental pillow—Scheherazade herself might have curled upon it once upon a time—from the lounge and dropped it between the fire and the lounge and sat down cross-legged. She untied a bundle of letters and selected three or four. Her gown was emerald-green. On the side nearest him her throat and cheek reflected the green; on the other side the flames tinted her with rose. Her arms and shoulders were, in these changeful lights, more wonderful than any marble he had ever seen.

Oh, this must be some dream, a recurrence of some fragment he had read in a forgotten book. Presently she would vanish, his old butler would touch him on the shoulder, he would rub his eyes for a moment, and then go down to the club. The life in the jungle was a dream also—green and rose, like a cloud on the face of a stream. He longed to reach down and touch her, to assure himself that she was real. Here in his house!

She began to read. At the sound of her voice he lowered his pipe and never put it to his lips again that night. Think of her finding his pipe! Sometimes a beautiful line caught his attention; but tonight his ears were keyed to music and not to words.

The French ormolu clock struck 12—the faithful old watchdog of his childhood. Twelve o'clock! The many times his mother had said: "Time for bed, Jimmiekins!" Doris had finished the last letter and was doing up the packet. "Isn't he wonderful?" she looked up, her eyes full of marvel.

"Very." But he hoped she would not ask him what he thought of this passage or that. He could not remember a single line!

"Did you ever know that floors talk in the night?" she asked. She possessed the queerest fancies.

"What do they say?" He glanced anxiously at the clock.

"There's a board over there, just this side of the curtain, that is always yawning and saying, 'Oh, dear!' There's another in the middle hall that says, 'Look sharp!' And I always walk around it. There's the funniest old grumbler in my room. I can't get it to say anything; it just mumbles and grumbles. The one in your room says, 'Lonesome! Lonesome!' And the storeroom has one that says, 'Hark!' so sharply that I always stop and listen. I suppose it's because I'm not used to wooden floors."

"And because I don't believe you're a real human being at all, only just a fairy."

"Well, perhaps." She rose and faced him suddenly. "Am I different? I mean, am I different from your friends? Do I do things I oughtn't? Why did you want to go back?"

"I didn't. I only felt I ought to."

She wrinkled her forehead, trying to decipher this. "I speak English like anybody else, but sometimes I don't understand. . . . Santa Maria! There goes the bell!"

"It's Burlingham probably, come after us." And Bob would doubtless take Jimmie Armitage's head off for this night's work.

"All right. But wasn't it fun!"

"Hello!" said Burlingham, as they opened the door. "Thought you'd be here. Jilli has just dropped in to play the violin for us. He's come straight from his concert. Mighty fine, of him. He charges a thousand a night for those who consider him a fad of the hour and gives away his genius to those he knows love music. Come along."

"A violin?" Doris threw her cloak over her shoulders. "Isn't it wonderful! Floors that talk and little red-brown boxes with singing souls!"

Armitage's anxiety grew. He knew Bob's voice of old, and Bob was deeply angry about something; and Armitage suspected readily enough what this something was. Hang the world, with its right-and-left angles, its fussy old hedges and barricades!

"Smoke a cigar with me when they all go," whispered Burlingham in the vestibule of his own house.

It was 2:30 in the morning when Armitage found himself alone with Bob and his wife. Bob lighted a cigar and walked about for a space.

"I don't know how it came to pass, but Betty and I have grown very fond of that girl next door. We've formed a kind of protectorate over her. She puzzles us. She's a type we haven't run into before. She is both worldly wise and surprisingly innocent. She'll air her views of Turgeniev one moment and then ask why a woman shouldn't go to a restaurant alone at night if she wanted to. We know why she can't. Cities and men have made it impossible."

"Don't beat about the bush with me, Bob. You're angry because I went over there the way I did."

"Why the dickens did you do it, then?"

"Don't you folks trust me?" Armitage asked, rather pathetically.

"We'd trust you anywhere, Jim, in any situation," said Betty. "That isn't it."

"I understand. I was simply hypnotized. What do you suppose she said to me? 'Let's go home!' When I followed her I did not realize what I was doing. I'm a bit tangled up still. I don't know whether I'm happy or miserable. 'Let's go home!' Think of her saying that to me! Think of going over with her to my house! I shall never be able to look upon it as anything but mine. Think of her finding an old pipe of mine and offering it to me! I've been wandering through labyrinths ever since I struck New York."

"What are you driving at?" demanded Burlingham.

"Hush!" said Betty.

Armitage went on as if he had not heard the interruption. "When I followed her tonight I did not comprehend until I got into the house and she began reading her father's letters to me. Then I knew. I followed her because it was written that I should . . . all the rest of my days."

CHAPTER VI.

ARMITAGE walked back to the hotel. The wind was bitter and there was a dash of rain in it. But he minded neither the wind nor the rain nor the long walk. There are times when the mind is so busy that physical weariness and discomfort are unnoticeable.

He was astounded and miserable and distressed. Not because he had fallen in love with her; it was because he could fall in love with her. He doubted himself. He was miserable and unhappy because he did not believe that he was capable of loving deeply.

He had felt almost exactly the same as on that day Clare Wendell had become the sum of his existence. He had been telling himself for days that he hadn't loved Clare at all; when faced honestly he had loved her, only, as Bob said, he had got over it. There you were, the crux of it. What did getting over it signify? That he was not capable of sustained love? Supposing it was just the novelty of the situation in which he found himself? Supposing he told Doris he loved her, and they married, and afterward——

And yet there was a difference between this new love and the old. There had been the pride of youth in the first affair; in this one only a deep and tender longing to shield and protect. It could not be the grand passion; his blood did not bound at the thought of Doris as it had at the thought of Clare. All he wanted was to hold Doris close in his arms. He did not have a perception of that former desire to go forth into the world and conquer something, to shout his joy at everybody.

Armitage was intensely honest. He wanted this to be right; he wanted to be absolutely positive that this love was the real love, something that would sweep on calmly like a great river, not like a noisy, gay little brook that would suddenly pop into the ground and disappear, nobody know why or where. He saw the obscurities through which he must go; the whimsical charm of this lovely child-woman, her loneliness and the mystery which enshrouded her. He wasn't sure that her very singular presence in his own home hadn't caused the amazing upheaval of his senses. The picture of her sitting there before the fire returned so vividly, just there in front of him, that he veered a little, actually, for fear he might step into or onto the picture.

"Let's go home!" As long as he lived he would never forget the tone in which she had spoken those magical words.

The long walk solved nothing. The riddle was all around him when he entered the hotel and asked for his key. He was drenched with cold rain, too, and the nap of his silk hat was ruined beyond recall.

He did not see Doris again for three days, though he talked to her once a day over the telephone. He wanted to fight his doubts to a conclusion before he saw her again. But each night, somewhere around 9 o'clock, he patrolled the opposite side of the street, watching the windows of what had once been an ordinary, unlovely brownstone but which was now worthy of a site in the ancient city of Bagdad.

On the third night he awoke to the astonishing fact that his vigils were being shared by another. Almost directly in front of the house stood a firebox. A man leaned against it. He remained motionless for fully an hour; then he walked away. Armitage had noticed him on the previous nights, but casually. Tonight, however, the singularity of the event stirred him into the realization of the fact that yonder individual was watching the house. As the man started to walk away, Armitage ran across, hailing:

"Just a moment there, if you please!"

The man stopped.

"Are you watching that house?" demanded Armitage.

"What's that to you?" countered the stranger, calmly.

"A good deal perhaps. A little while ago I owned that house, and I am still rather attached to it. I know its present owner. Consequently I feel that I have a right to inquire into your action."

"We thought you might ask us out to lunch."

THE ELEVATOR

. . By . .
Tudor Jenks

YOU never can tell.

We thought our office was keyed up to a high pitch before she arrived. We looked upon the "Old Man"—the Boss—as one of the toppers. He discharged one very nice girl for putting powder on the end of a very nice nose during a hot day, when we all thought her justified in her plea: "But, Mr. Bunker, no girl likes to have her nose look shiny!"

He also rebuked one of our most skilled bookkeepers for saying: "Damn that blot!" though it was his first offense; and our employer was (we understood) prominent in various benevolent and church organizations.

Yet when "The Elevator" was installed we began to wonder whether we had not been leading an unreformed and unregenerate existence, even under the Old Man's strict regime. If he approached the limit, she lapped over its edges.

"The Elevator" was the nickname given her by the office boy, Jimmy Grierson, after her first two days as Mr. Bunker's private secretary and stenographer. We of the outside offices thought her a very nice-looking addition to the force; but Jimmy, who ran in and out of the boss' private room, was the first to know anything definite about her, and his reports grew worse and worse as time elapsed.

I believed he offered her some chewing gum, only to be told that she "certainly would in no way countenance a habit so contrary to good breeding!" Then I, as chief clerk, told her that I hoped she would enjoy the work in our office; and was reminded that "work must not be viewed from the standpoint of enjoyment, but from that of its value to the welfare of others, and its opportunity for self-discipline!"—whereon I remarked: "Yes, indeed, Miss Tomlins; you're right, of course," and retired to my own corner lost in thought.

He offered her some chewing gum, only to be told that she "certainly would in no way countenance a habit so contrary to good breeding!"

At the end of the second day Jimmy came out of the inner office wearing the expression of Raphael's southwest cherub, and reported to my desk that Miss Tomlins was going to "elevate the tone of the office.'

"How do you mean?" I asked, uneasily.

"She's requested that Old Bunker should fire these out," and Jimmy produced from under his arm some calendars, containing picture of attractive young ladies. "She said she'd like to have some pictures 'of a higher moral tone,'" observed Jimmy. "And the Boss fell for it."

"What did he say?"

"He highly commended her most praisworthy effort," Jimmy answered. "He did, for a fact—in those very words, and he is going to get some new junk—'Milly's Angels' was one."

"Millet's 'Angelus'?" I inquired.

"Sure—I guess so. And she said she thought it would 'elevate the tone of the office.' So we're in for it, Mr. Welles; you might as well prepare yourself for the 'Elevator.'"

That's the way Miss Tomlins got her nickname, and she certainly lived up to it. One day I was called in to see the Old Man, and after some little awkwardness, he politely gave me to understand that he would appreciate it if I would not "give myself quite the latitude I did in regard to garish neckties!"

"Of course, it's a matter of personal taste, Mr. Welles," he said seriously, "and one in which an employer can hardly do more than suggest. But we" (this was a slip he didn't notice) "believe that the whole office should give an impression of the highest tone, even in small matters; for these things speak of the life within—and the public gets its idea"—— and so on, till I lost the drift.

"All right, sir," I said. "This was a present from my Cousin Harriet, and she doesn't quite suit my taste in ties anyway. I'll chuck it."

"Thank you," said Mr. Bunker. "If you will discard it"——

"Abandon?" suggested Miss Tomlins.

"Much better," agreed the Old Man. "If you will abandon extravagant hues it will be highly approved, Mr. Welles. We must set a high standard for ourselves!"

"Certainly," I agreed, and withdrew, keeping my temper till I was outside the door—when I made some subdued remarks that would have evoked shrieks from the "Elevator."

So it went on. Loud talking was neither businesslike nor refined." The ink bottles had to shine like the copper kettle of a Dutch housewife. If you did not have your boots polished, you were a pariah. Three minutes' tardiness was a sin.

From being a pleasant place to work the office gradually improved until it was as homelike as an old-fashioned New England parlor, kept for funerals and such really enjoyable affairs. I didn't mind it so very much myself, for I did my cussing under my breath, but I was sorry for Jean Nesbit, the other stenographer.

"Much better," agreed the Old Man.

Jean was a jolly little thing, and full of fun. Everybody had a good word for her, and Jimmy could borrow a quarter from her 'most any day when he was short—which was often, he being a regular Bildad the Shuhite, for shortness.

After the "Elevator" had got the office strained up to full concert pitch, she had a talk with Jean—from which the latter returned flushed and angry.

"What's the trouble, Jean?" I asked.

"I won't tell you!" she snapped, and retired to her desk.

"Oh, come on!" I persisted. "If the 'Elevator' has bothered you I'll box her big ears!" This was an artful touch, for Miss Tomlin's ears were generous, to some degree—and I was very fond of Jean; indeed, especially so.

"She's a—a cat!" said Jean bitterly.

"What's up?" I insisted.

"She says," Jean broke out, "that I—that I—have got to wear high-necked waists! The cat!"

"Ye gods!" I broke out, for I was mad, too. "You don't mean to say she thinks there's anything out of the way"——

"She says," Jean went on, mimicking her, "that Mr. Bunker 'would prefer that there should be no occasion for criticism in the costume of any employe!' Oh, she makes me sick!"

"Me, too," I agreed. "Just because she's a scrawny old"——

"Well—I can't give up my place, and so I suppose I can fix up something. But it's insulting!" and she sobbed.

"She can't insult you, my dear," I said affectionately. "The darned old"——

Here the door opened and Mr. Bunker came out, so I stopped, remembering that the tone of the office must be preserved. But when he was safely on his way home, I resumed my talk with Jean, and finally consoled her into a fixed belief that nothing Miss Tomlins could say would very long postpone the day when we could carry out some plans neither she nor Mr. Bunker had any suspicions of—plans that lay very near our hearts.

So we consented to bear in silence the distressingly high tone of the office until the happy day came when we should give the whole thing the go-by and wear such ties and shirtwaists as we chose.

I don't want to make this a love story, but you know how it is when a sweet little girl like Jean is abused, and you think there's nothing too good for her; and you console her, and cheer her up, and tell her that the world's not good enough for her, and that some day you'll give her what she deserves. Jean smiled again.

Meanwhile, Miss Tomlins became more and more indispensable to the Boss. Most of the business was transacted through her, and once Jimmy came out saying in an awe-stricken voice:

"Gosh! The Old Man called her Theresa!" whereupon he retired to his desk and chewed gum in silent dismay.

So things went on for about two months. And then one day Theresa Tomlins was not at her usual place when the clock pointed to 8:45.

We thought she must have met with some serious accident. It was unheard of. Until it was 9 o'clock—the Old Man's hour—we wondered and discussed her absence in apprehensive tones, remembering how she had insisted that "tardiness in business was a form of thieving." But when Mr. Bunker arrived we should be compelled regretfully to report her absence.

He entered his office at once, and rang his bell.

Jean went in and reported that Miss Tomlins had not appeared.

"Strange!" remarked Mr. Bunker. "You had better telephone her."

The Elevator - - (Continued)

"What is her address?" asked Jean.

Mr. Bunker gave the address and Jean came out and tried to call her up. Jean seemed to have some trouble in getting an answer.

I stood by and listened, and finally I heard Jean say: "Gone? Without leaving any word?"

Then Jean's face changed as she heard the answer.

"Good-by! I've got a good start!

"THERESA, alias SMOOTH SUE."

That was all. And apparently it was enough.

Bunker looked at the paper a minute, and turned gray. Then he held it out to the expert with shaking hand.

"What does it mean?" he asked.

Within a short time came creditors, clients, men with bills, the police, detectives—and it did not take us long to find out that Bunker had been stalling on the thinnest kind of black ice.

He had collected all the cash he could get in, and was just about to make a clean getaway with it, when his private secretary, the "Elevator"—who had so thor-

MAKING SOCIETY OVER

CHARACTER SKETCHES BY W. E. HILL

Alvin K. Murkle, advanced radical and advocate of Bolshevist principles, is giving a little talk on "dynamic reconstruction." Reconstruction, according to Alvin's theory, consists principally in pulling down everything in sight—especially religion and morality, "which are all bunk anyway." A lady in the audience has just asked whether it is true that the Bolshevists are killing people right and left. Alvin is naturally astounded at such a question. Although it happens that Alvin does not know a word of Russian, he was in Petrograd for a week and heard nothing but expressions of brotherly love and happiness—"and surely if there had been any unrest it would have come to my ears."

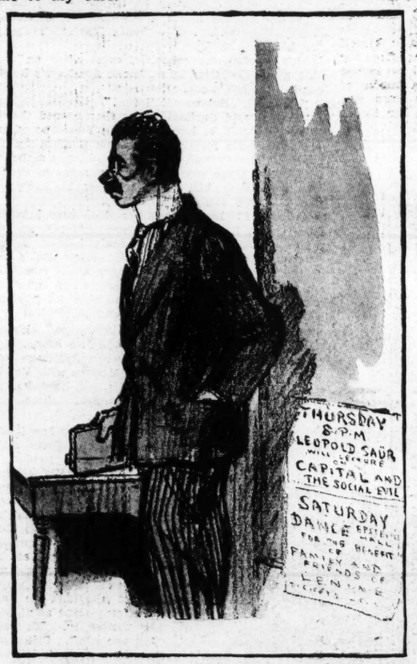
"My dear, at first I thought he had awfully cruel eyes, but the more I look at him the more I feel that he has the kindest eyes I ever saw." Three ladies of the parlor Bolshevist variety, who, though a bit startled by Comrade Murkle's doctrine on "dynamic reconstruction," are convinced that no Bolshevist would ever seize their property.

"You needn't think you're going to hang around here in my way. I got work to do!" Mike, of the proletariat, has struck for shorter hours—longer hours at home, however, do not meet with his wife's approval.

Herman Bluckendorf, who has an awe of big words, is suddenly gratified to discover that he has been a member of the proletariat all his life.

Comrade Pinsky would bring in the millenium by the simple process of instituting an era of wholesale robbery of the rich.

Comrade Boom, philosophical anarchist, takes occasion to speak slightingly of the old-fashioned idea of state socialism, and feels that the basis of all reconstruction should be in the "Rule of Common Consent." In other words, let's all be supermen, each man a law unto himself.



Comrade Wypeman is a syndicalist and thinks Comrade Boom is all wrong. The only way to reconstruct the world is to start in with syndicalism, says Comrade Wypeman, which is direct action and applied anarchy.

Mr. Anson Greff is conservative. He is somewhat pessimistic on the problems of reconstruction. "No use doing anything," he says, "until the Republican party gets back in power."

Joe Hodd, on the other hand, is all for the I. W. W., when it comes to making over society. It is the most idealistic—besides, doesn't it preach sabotage, which is much better than syndicalism? Joe's audience is Miss Linda Waw, who secretly leans to the Bolshevists because she thinks they will allow any lady between eighteen and eighty to choose her own husband. Miss Waw, by the way, bobbed her hair years before Mrs. Castle thought of it.

"We can't possibly pay the increase in rent, and it will cost us even more to move. I don't see what we are going to do!" Two ladies of the downtrodden middle class who would greatly welcome a little less talk and a little more reconstruction of the cost of living.

The Best Way to Use Rouge

The specialist who created the wonderful La-may Face Powder has invented a new rouge. The rouge is inside the puff. All you do is to rub the puff on your face. It comes through the puff just as you need it. It goes on splendidly and stays on the face until you wash it off. The puff is in a dainty metal box. The box cannot break and the rouge will not crumble like the old-fashioned kind. This newly invented rouge is called La-may (French, Rouge L'Ame). It gives a beautiful color that looks natural under the strongest light. There are two colors—medium and dark. The fifty-cent package will last six months, yet the box is small enough to fit your purse. When you see this pure, harmless Rouge and see how much more convenient it is and how much better it stays on, you will understand why thousands of women say it is the best they have ever used. Because La-may Rouge is so new, your dealer may not have it yet, but he can easily get it. If your dealer refuses to get you a package, you may order by mail from Herbert Boystone, 16 E. 18th St., New York. Save this notice.
